REBELS TAKE STRATEGIC TOWN, GAIN AT LERIDA

Government Admits Column Has Entered Latter City but Claims Repulse of Another Force in Hard Fighting There.

GANDESA, 21 MILES FROM SEA, FALLS

At No Point of 50-Mile Line on Southern Part of Front Are Insurgents More Than 37 Miles From Mediterranean.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, France, April 2.—Spanish rebels captured strategic Gandesa today as they continued their drive which has added an estimated 2600 square miles to their territory in a week.

The fall of Gandesa placed the insurgents within 21 miles of the Mediterranean, their objective in the offensive aimed to split the territory controlled by the Government.

The official insurgent announcement of the city's fall said 2000 prisoners were taken and other Government troops were surrendering.

Only six miles of mountains that make up the Sierra de Pandos southeast of Gandesa separated the Navarrese troops from the wide valley of the Ebro River, which forms a natural highway to Tortosa and the sea.

The advance was said by some military observers to be one of the most important of the civil war, now in its twenty-first month.

Benabarre Also Falls.

At the northern end of the insurgent front, Benabarre, important road center in Northern Aragon, also fell to Gen. Francisco Franco's forces.

The insurgent line extends more than 125 miles from Benabarre, which is in Huesca province, down into the Catalonian provinces of Lerida and Tarragona and south almost to Morella, in Castellon province.

At no point on a 50-mile insurgent line in the southern part of Eastern Spain are Franco's troops more than 37 miles from the sea.

Gen. Miguel Aranda's soldiers were today approaching Morella, southwest of Ganesa, where there is a route through the mountains leading to the Mediterranean by way of San Mateo and Vinaroz.

Between this force and Gandesa, legionnaires pushed beyond Valderrobres apparently in an effort to effect a junction at Tortosa itself with the Navarrese, who will seek to drive down to that port from Gandesa. The way was not so easy for the legionnaires, however, since the path lies over the rugged Sierra de Montenegrelo.

Fighting at Lerida.

Only at Lerida, in Catalonia, almost due north of Gandesa and 80 miles from Barcelona, was Franco's advance slowed by the Government militiamen, whose resistance forced the insurgents to use the full strength of their mechanized equipment.

The Government said three fresh divisions had been moved up to bolster the defense of Lerida on the north and northeast.

Government advices received in Madrid said the insurgent northern column fought its way into Lerida following a heavy battle on the outskirts of the town. An insurgent attack on Tamarite, north of Lerida, was said to have been repulsed with heavy insurgent casualties.

On Guadalajara Front.

On the Northern Guadalajara front, Government authorities reported a spirited Government offensive netted an advance of about 10 miles. Two villages and four mountain slopes were reported taken.

Government troops in the vicinity of Lerida were in danger of an attack from the rear as Gen. Jose Moscardo's troops took the village of Almacellas, northwest of Lerida. Moscardo thereby gained control of the railroad from Barbastro, in the north, to Lerida.

This week marked the third of the concerted drive in Eastern Spain. A week ago the line was broken by wide gaps between the separate armies driving on to individual objectives. Today it was an established front with liaison between each column and the whole co-ordinated under Franco's personal command.

STRIKE RENEWED TWO HOURS AFTER AGREEMENT IS REACHED

Union Demands That Belvidere (Ill.) Compromise Be Effective for Only Six Months.

By the Associated Press.

BELVIDERE, Ill., April 2.—Renewal of three-week strike at the National Sewing Machine Co. was announced today by Carl Baylander, strike chairman, two hours after he said the dispute had been settled.

The strike committee ordered picket lines re-established and arranged another conference with Raymond F. List, company president, at 1:30 p. m. Monday and a strikers' mass meeting at 7:30 p. m. Monday.

Baylander said the American Federation of Labor machinists, molders and polishers voted this afternoon by a large majority to accept a compromise company settlement offer, and List said work would be resumed Monday morning. Later, however, Baylander said, the strikers informed the management they had agreed to accept the offer for six months. Baylander said List insisted the terms be for one year.

When this new deadlock could not be dissolved, Baylander said, the strikers declared the settlement "off."

JAPANESE DENY DISCOURTESIES AND REJECT BRITISH PROTEST

Gen. Hata Says Representations at Shanghai Were Made on "One-Sided" Reports.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, April 2.—Gen. Shunroku Hata rejected today British protests against reported Japanese threats and discourtesies to British nationals. Gen. Hata, commander of Japanese troops in Central China, denied that Japanese soldiers had been guilty of offensive acts charged by Gen. A. P. D. Telfer-Smollet, commander of British forces at Shanghai.

The Japanese commander said Japanese military authorities deeply regretted Gen. Telfer-Smollet's "discourteous attitude" in protesting on "one-sided, unverified" reports, and characterized the British protest as "not friendly."

The British had cited several instances in which Japanese soldiers were alleged to have threatened or been discourteous to British soldiers or civilians. One case cited was that of British sentries who, on two occasions, were said to have been threatened with rifles by Japanese military police.

U. S. Official Says Japanese Invasion Cost That in Destruction and Business Loss.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2. — A. Bland Calder, United States Commerce Department attache at Shanghai, estimated today the Japanese invasion has caused $253,500,000 damage to Shanghai property and business.

By the Associated Press.

CERBERE, France, April 2. — Insurgent bombing planes rained explosives on the railway line between the French frontier and Port Bou, Spain, tonight just a few hours before four trainloads of refugee Spanish Government militiamen arrived at the border, en route to Spain.

More than 4000 of the Spanish Government's militia who fled across the Pyrenees into France rather than surrender to insurgents came to Cerbere from Bagneres de Luchon after a secret vote.

Port Bou is just across the border from Cerbere, Mediterranean port at the eastern end of the French frontier.

Although official quarters had said earlier tonight that Monday's session of the French Cabinet would decide what should be done with the refugees, those who chose to remain loyal to the Spanish Government entrained at Bagneres de Luchon for Cerbere during the night.

Railroad employes here said they would cross over into Spain early tomorrow despite the earlier announcement that a Cabinet decision was awaited. The announcement, it was said, was made "only to fool the Fascists (insurgents)" and prevent bombardment of the frontier as the militiamen crossed.

The refugees' only means of entering Spain tonight at Cerbere would be a long march through the frontier railroad tunnel. Bombardments have made the passage of trains impractical.

From the other side of the border, 65 French refugees from Barcelona arrived here during the night.

All but 2 Pct. of Refugees Vote to Return to Government Spain.

BAGNERES DE LUCHON, France, April 2. — Four special trains loaded with more than 4000 refugee Spanish Government troops rolled out of here tonight in anticipation of a French Cabinet decision to repatriate them to Spain.

The militiamen who fled to France to escape advancing insurgents were headed for Cerbere, French port on the Mediterranean, where they likely will be returned across the frontier into Government territory.

A thousand additional refugees were left behind. Some of them will follow tomorrow.

In compliance with preferences expressed in secret balloting, 185 of the refugees made ready to go to Generalissimo Francisco Franco's territory in insurgent Spain.

The first contingent of refugees departed after French officers conducted balloting among the men to determine whether they wished to return to insurgent or Government Spain.

First results of the balloting showed only 2 per cent of the Spaniards favored going to the insurgent side.

As fast as the men voted they were put aboard trains to move out of Bagneres de Luchon.

They Shout They'll Fight to Death.

A Spanish Government commander addressed the 6000 men when they assembled to vote.

"Do some of you wish to go into the cursed Fascist Spain?" he asked.

"No, never," the crowd chorused.

"Do you want to fight for the Government of Spain?" the commander asked.

"Yes, to death!" came the shouted reply.

The militiamen then lined up and one by one entered a courtyard isolated from the gaze of their comrades.

Those who wished to go to insurgent territory were requested to sign a written declaration, "I, the undersigned, expressly declare my desire to return to Spain via Hendaye."

Hendaye is just across the border from insurgent-held territory in Northwest Spain.

Movement of the militiamen started after a previous order to send them back to their own country was countermanded abruptly last night.

Cabinet Ministers Confer.

French officials had arranged for quick repatriation to Catalonia because of the expense of caring for the fugitives.

After last night's cancellation, War, Navy, Interior, Public Health and Foreign Ministry officials met to discuss the situation but came to no decision.

The Cabinet decision to repatriate the refugees back to Spain was expected Monday.

In addition to the soldiers, there were some 2000 other refugees, mostly women, children and elderly men, who streamed across the border the past three days in the face of the rapidly advancing insurgent drive into Catalonia.

These hungry, ill-clad non-combatants who brought pitiful stories of privation were transported to camps in the interior of France. Many required immediate hospitalization.

NAZIS IN VIENNA BURN A PART OF THEIR OLD PRISON

FLAMES BACKGROUND FOR CHIEF SPEAKER

Many Former Prisoners Hear Plebiscite Orator Harrangue Crowd While Structure Burns.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, April 2.—Nazis in a demonstration tonight burned part of the Wallersdorf Concentration Camp — a symbol of what they called "Schuschnigg tyranny." With the fire as a background, Joseph Buerckel, director of the Austrian-German plebiscite campaign, spoke of the "terrorism," of the previous Austrian Government.

Peasants, some of them women with babies in arms, attended the demonstration. Several hundred of the 8000 who at one time or another were imprisoned in the camp were guests of honor.

The display began at 8:30 p. m., when 10 men who had served the longest time in Wallersdorf for illegal Nazi activities, ignited a gasoline-soaked structure—one of the 152 buildings that once were a munitions plant and were later deserted until the Austrian Government started to use them as prisons for agitators.

Buerckel declared: "We stand in a historic spot which characterized the message of one group of usurpers who, through terroristic means, held a people in subjection and who wanted to prevent Anschluss (union of Austria and Germany). But we attempt no act of revenge against those who merited the death sentence many times over but whom der Fuehrer graciously has granted the permission to live."

The roar of the fire drowned Buerckel's closing words. When the flames died down the crowd burst into "Deutschland Uber Alles," and the Nazi "Horst Wessel" song.

In place of the ruined building a monument to the unsuccessful Nazi attempt to seize power in Austria in 1934 will be erected.

For five years the word "Wallersdorf" had been a threat to Nazis in Austria. Now to have undergone imprisonment there is a badge of honor among the Nazis.

'FIRE, EXPLOSION' PROBABLY CAUSED LOSS OF CLIPPER

Air Commerce Bureau Report Connects Accident With Dumping of Gasoline.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The Air Commerce Bureau reported today "fire and explosion associated with the dumping of fuel" probably caused the crash of Pan American Airways' Samoan Clipper in the South Seas, Jan. 11.

The crew of seven perished when the plane went down near Pago Pago, American Samoa, when on a non-passenger carrying flight. Capt. Edwin C. Musick, veteran of many Pacific flights, was one of the men killed.

The investigating board said that if fuel dumping did not cause the crash, then "some emergency arose at that time which dictated an immediate landing at sea, during the course of which fire and explosion occurred in the hull."

The report said there was no doubt every precaution was observed by the crew to prevent fire.

"The cause of gasoline fires on the ground have been numerous, however, and some electrical connection or static charge may have been responsible in this case," it was said. "It is further conceivable that fire in the air may have been caused by the engine exhaust igniting dumped gasoline."

CHICAGO, April 2. — A habeas corpus petition for the release of Al Capone from Alcatraz prison was filed today in United States District Court in the name of Mrs. Theresa Capone, his mother.

The petition asserts the Federal prison sentence of the former public enemy No. 1 has already expired under the usual allowance for good behavior. Counsel who filed the petition served notice he would appear Monday before Judge William H. Holly to press his action.

Capone was sentenced in 1931 to serve 11 years, including one year in the Cook County jail, on charges of income tax evasion.

CORONER TO CALL IN MAKERS OF 'REX'

Biochemical Research Laboratories of Philadelphia Report No Contamination of Product It Shipped.

By the Associated Press.

ORLANDO, Fla., April 2.—Medical officials announced today that tetanus toxin had been found in two vials of a supply of serum used for injection treatment of 10 cancer patients who died this week.

Dr. Horace Day, president of the Orange County Medical Society, said the vials were selected at random from a consignment received by Dr. T. A. Neal.

E. F. Bolte, retired vice-president of the International Harvester Co. died early today. Eight women and one man died previously. Four other patients were in hospitals.

Coroner Eugene Duckworth, conducting a separate inquiry, said Dr. Day reported to him the serum was known as Rex.

"I will ask officers of the Bio-Chemical Research Foundation of Philadelphia, manufacturers of Rex under the Canadian Ensol formula, to come to Orlando to testify at the inquest," said Duckworth.

Dr. Day, Dr. W. G. Workman of the United States Health Service and Dr. J. N. Patterson, director of the State Board of Health Laboratory at Jacksonville, tested the serum on guinea pigs.

They injected serum from the two vials into two groups of guinea pigs, giving the second group simultaneous injections of anti-tetanus toxin. Several of the first group were dead this morning and others showed symptoms of tetanus, said Dr. Day, while the group receiving the anti-toxin showed no ill effects.

Makers of "Rex" Say Investigation Shows No Contamination.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 2.—Dr. Ellice McDonald, director of the Biochemical Research Foundation, said today that investigation in the laboratories here shows that our bacterial filtrate has no contamination."

"As a precaution in the interests of the public, the lot under investigation has been recalled," McDonald said.

The foundation here reported shipments of "bacterial filtrate" had been going to Orlando since 1936. The last shipment was made March 22, the foundation announced. This is the shipment recalled.

Distribution of Serum Suspended in Canada.

OTTAWA, April 2.—Health Minister C. G. Power told the House of Commons today that all distribution of ensol cancer treatment serum, had ceased pending laboratory examinations and autopsies now in progress in Florida.

One recognizes the incorporation of Austria into the German Reich and requests an exequatur (written official recognition and authorization) for a British Consulate-General to be established in Vienna, where Britain formerly maintained a legation.

The other states that the British Government reserves its position on certain questions arising out of the annexation, such as treaties signed by Austria as a sovereign state.

The British Government will communicate with the Reich at a later date on these questions.

Mrs. Mains and her husband, Foster Mains, and her daughter, Mary Tarver, 13 years old, were holding hands when they started across the street, witnesses told police. ROOSEVELT DISCUSSES MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

Talks Over Anti-Monoply Proposal on Way Back to Washington.

By the Associated Press.

ABOARD ROOSEVELT TRAIN EN ROUTE TO WASHINGTON, April 2.—President Roosevelt conferred tonight on his anti-monopoly message to Congress. Robert H. Jackson, Solicitor-General and Benjamin Cohen, a public works attorney and framer of New Deal bills boarded the presidential special at Atlanta.

Jackson and Cohen said they had been asked to meet the train at Atlanta.

"Is it about anti-monopoly legislation?" Jackson was asked. "It can be almost anything, but I don't think you would be out on a limb on that," he replied.

Recent indications are the President will ask for a congressional study of the monopoly situation, rather than immediate action, on the theory that insufficient time remained in the present session for action on legislation to plug up loopholes in the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws.

During a 15-minute stop in Atlanta, the President chatted with Mayor William B. Hartsfield, who boarded his car.

The President, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, left Warm Springs, Ga., at 4 p. m. and is scheduled to arrive in Washington soon after noon tomorrow. Mr. Roosevelt's doctor said daily swims during the 10-day vacation in Georgia had put the President in excellent condition.

Harry L. Hopkins director of the Works Progress Administration and his deputies Aubrey Williams and Leon Henderson are aboard the President's train.

Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, visited his parents at Warm Springs on his way from New York to his home in Fort Worth, Tex., to which he returned today.

TWO HELD IN BOMB-KILLING OF MAYOR OF JUAREZ, MEXICO

One Prisoner Is Close Friend of Political Antagonist of Governor of Chihuahua.

By the Associated Press.

JUAREZ, Chihuahua, Mexico, April 2.—Chihuahua State authorities, investigating yesterday's bomb-assassination of Mayor Jose Borunda of Juarez, held in custody tonight a man described as a close friend of former Gov. Rodrigo M. Quevedo, political antagonist of present Gov. G. L. Talamantes.

Gen. Quevedo is at liberty under 10,000 pesos bond for future court action in connection with the fatal shooting three weeks ago of Federal Senator Angel Posada.

Ignacio J. Lomelo, Chihuahua Attorney-General, said he was holding in custody Efren Escobar, who was characterized as a friend of Quevedo. He said investigators also had arrested Nicolas Chavez, 60 years old, as the man who took a package addressed to the Mayor to an express office in Chihuahua City Thursday.

Mayor Borunda was killed by the explosion of a seven-pound nitroglycerin bomb delivered to his office yesterday. The explosion also killed Domingo Barraza, city hall doorman, and wrecked the office.

MOVE TO SAVE MEASURE TO REORGANIZE GOVERNMENT

Changes, Said to Have Roosevelt's Consent, Would Permit Overriding of Executive Orders by Majority in Each House.

EDUCATION BUREAU PROVISION DROPPED

Supporters of Bill Denounce 'Malicious Hatred' Campaign Against It as an Effort 'to Destroy Our President.'

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Administration lieutenants, reputedly with President Roosevelt's consent, proposed a compromise on the Government reorganization bill today, in an effort to save that bitterly-fought measure from threatened House defeat.

The compromise would give Congress the right to veto presidential reorganization orders by a simple majority ballot. As the bill now stands, a two-thirds vote of both Houses would be necessary to block such orders.

The concession on this point, and another which would keep the Education Bureau in the Interior Department, followed a victory for opponents of the bill in stalling off any attempt to end debate.

White House Conference.

Further strategy to meet the House situation is expected to be discussed at the White House conference tomorrow, the President having arranged to confer with congressional leaders shortly after he returns to the capital from Warm Springs, Ga., where he has been on vacation.

The House adjourned for the week-end at 5:50 o'clock this afternoon without concluding debate or taking any vote on the reorganization measure. Before it quit work it heard some of the most vitriolic debate of the session. Administration supporters contended the real purpose of opposition to the reorganization bill was to "break Roosevelt" while Republicans and some Democrats declared the compromise proposal was but a sham which would be stripped from the bill by a congressional conference committee after the House had acted upon it.

Proposed Modifications.

Terms of the compromise were announced to a packed and wildly cheering House by Representative Warren (Dem.), North Carolina, a member of the special reorganization committee. It was said his declaration was decided upon after House leaders had conferred by telephone with the President at Warm Springs.

This is what the compromise on Congressional overruling of executive orders would do: Give Congress the right, within a 60-day period, to accept or override a presidential reorganization order by adopting a resolution which would not require the President's signature to become effective.

The guarantee to keep the Education Bureau in the Interior Department, thereby assuring that it would not be transferred to a proposed new Department of Welfare, was an outgrowth of protests that the bill would let the Government control the education of the nation's youth.

The paragraph in the bill causing so much controversy says simply that a proposed new Secretary of Welfare shall promote among other things "the cause of education" and coordinate and promote "public health, education, and welfare activities." Backers of the bill have contended the words would make no change in existing law.

Amendments After Debate.

The two features of the compromise must be passed upon as amendments to the bill after the House ends debate and starts considering changes. That will not be until some time next week, leaders said.

After the House voted 191 to 149 last night against a motion which would have paved the way to end debate immediately, leaders agreed to let the discussion continue uninterrupted through the entire afternoon.

Warren said today the amendments would have the approval of the Reorganization Committee but made no reference on the floor to the President's attitude toward them.

Before making his announce-

FIERCE ARTILLERY AND AIR BATTLE IN SHANTUNG CITY

Japanese Say Grand Canal Is Running Red and 150,000 Chinese Are Cut Off and Sure to Perish.

BUT DEFENDERS TELL OF RETAKING TOWN

Both Sides Using Mechanized Armies — 40 Invading Tanks Reported Repelled at Taierhchwang.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, April 3.—(Sunday)—An official Japanese statement said today that 150,000 Chinese troops in Southern Shantung Province had been encircled and were "doomed to defeat in the near future."

The statement termed optimistic Chinese reports "obvious fabrications" and said air attacks on retreating Chinese had been so effective they were causing the Grand Canal to "run red."

"The Chinese field commanders dare not honestly report the true Tientsin-Pukow situation to Hankow, fearing the same fate of Han Fu-chu," the statement asserted. "Therefore, they dispatch utterly false reports of Chinese victories."

(Gen. Han was executed Jan. 25 after repeated Japanese successes in Shantung over which he then had command.)

Meanwhile, the small city of Taierhchwang, on the Grand Canal, 15 miles north of the vital Lunghai railway, was the scene of one of the fiercest battles of the war. With both sides using heavy artillery, large air forces and mechanized land equipment, the fighting continued unabated.

Chinese Claim Hanchwang.

Chinese reported the Japanese launched two furious attacks on the city, aided by 40 tanks, but were driven back into small villages north of Taierhchwang, and that their air squadrons were bombing Japanese troops extensively in the Yihsien-Taierhchwang area while their new armored units were facilitating the defense.

The walls of Taierhchwang were blasted into ruins and mud houses were reduced to dust, but the stubbornly-resisting Chinese, who for 20 days have blocked all Japanese thrusts at Suchow, junction of the Lunghai and Tientsin-Pukow lines were still holding. It was the eleventh day of the bitter fighting.

Japanese planes flew low over Yihsien and Tsaochwang, northwest of Taierhchwang, dropping food and munitions by parachute. They also dropped leaflets encouraging Japanese, almost encircled, to hold out until reinforcements arrived from Tsingtao, Shantung seaport.

Chinese Report Killing 3000.

Previously the Chinese reported they har killed 3000 Japanese troops in heavy fighting in Southern Shantung, 2000 of these at Taierhchwang in a hand grenade fight at close quarters, in which they also captured 17 tanks. They asserted they had surrounded Tachwang, northwest of Taierhchwang and that a "dare-to-die" corps had entered the small town during the night and killed 1000 Japanese in hand-to-hand fighting.

A fierce battle was said to be raging north of Taierhchwang with both sides reported maneuvering widely in the crook of a 60-mile fish-hook front from Lini to Taierhchwang and northward to Yihsien.

Japanese dispatches said that fully 100,000 Chinese were deployed on the battle line from Lini to Taierhchwang alone.

Chinese Report Taking Pingyuan.

Chinese military headquarters at Chengchow reported Pingyuan, 50 miles northwest of Tsinan, had been recaptured after an all-night Chinese cavalry attack which, with previous successes, had cut off Japanese communications. The Chinese also asserted they had occupied Hoochanghow, important Grand Canal crossing near Tsining.

The Chinese asserted they had been victorious in a two-day battle in the Lake Tai district, west of Shanghai, killing 4000 Japanese. Earlier the Japanese had reported routing Chinese from that area, saying more than 6000 Chinese had been killed.

Chinese dispatches said seven Shansi Province towns, including Chaochen and Hwohsien, were recaptured. Chinese guerrilla troops in North Honan Province reported killing 3000 Japanese, capturing 800 and taking 62 trucks and seven armored cars.

COMPROMISE PROPOSED TO SAVE REORGANIZATION

ment, he denounced those who, he said, had tried to delay action on the bill and those who had brought "propaganda" to bear on it.

"Propagandists have been going to every length and extreme," he asserted, "as a vehicle to annihilate and destroy our President."

He held up a telegram, which he said had been tucked under the door of every Congressman, that was "so vile, so shocking, so horrible" that a member would be expelled for attempting to put it in the Congressional record.

On the subject of the Education Bureau, Warren said one section of the bill had been "portrayed as meaning Federal control over education."

"A vile, malicious whispering campaign has surged against the country to arouse and disturb a great church," he went on. "To the eternal credit of some of the outstanding members of this House who belong to this great church, this damnable propaganda has had no effect whatever."

"Vicious Campaign."

Representative McCormack (Dem.) Massachusetts, a member of the Catholic Church, who had been presiding over the debate, stalked down into the well of the crowded chamber and asserted:

"If there is one thing I have contempt for, it is intolerance in any form."

McCormack said a "vicious campaign based upon hatred" had been directed at the bill, and that the education issue had been "injected with malice."

"I resent it and I condemn it," he roared.

Just as sternly he rebuked those who have said the bill would make the President a dictator. The President also has been called a Communist, he observed.

"There's only one thing left — and it's to call him a reactionary. I don't think they'll ever come to that."

Many legislators stood and yelled their approval when he concluded with an appeal to his colleagues not to permit a campaign of "malicious hatred" to destroy "the great humanitarian of the day, Franklin Delano Roosevelt."

Anonymous Attack Made.

Warren told reporters that the "vile" telegram which he said had been sent to every Congressman made a shocking personal attack upon the President. It was anonymous and unprintable, he said, and he declined to divulge details of the message.

Before adjournment, Representative Boileau (Prog.), Wisconsin, floor leader of the Progressive and Farmer-Labor bloc, denounced the compromise proposal as "the greatest piece of deception I've ever seen practiced on the floor of the House." He said it was intended only to gain votes for passage and would be slashed from the bill in conference with the Senate. He said the President himself, in his recent letter denying any inclination to be a dictator, had questioned Congress' right under the Constitution to veto executive action by a concurrent resolution not requiring the President's signature.

The projected compromise provides that concurrent resolutions, which do not require presidential signature, be employed by Congress to pass upon reorganization orders. Boileau contended the President "won't answer charges of dictatorship by signing a bill he says is unconstitutional."

Guyer (Rep.), Kansas, said that, if the President's court reorganization bill and his original Government reorganization bill had passed Congress, "we would be under a Fascist government in all but name."

"Saving Amendments."

Culkin (Rep.), New York, accused advocates of the bill of "complete and arrant bad faith" in offering what he called "saving amendments which would completely emasculate the bill."

Eaton (Rep.), New Jersey, told the House the reorganization bill was not needed at this time. "What we need is for the gentleman to come home from Warm Springs and get to work with the Congress on solving the tremendous economic problem facing the nation."

Stack (Dem.), Pennsylvania, asserted the real reason opposition to the bill had developed was "we were denied our God-given right to be heard in the halls of Congress as to what this bill, which was to be shoved down our throats, is all about."

Pettengill (Dem.), Indiana, warned House members not to follow Representative Vinson (Dem.), Kentucky, a member of the special reorganization committee, because he had led them to the point of political danger by advocating the undistributed profits tax.

"He will be behind the barricade next November," Pettengill declared, referring to Vinson's nomination to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

"So will the gentleman from Indiana," replied Vinson.

"That's right," said Pettengill, who has announced his intention to retire from Congress.

Pettengill attributed what he called "the row between the President and the Comptroller-General" to the refusal of the latter official to approve expenditure of funds for planting a shelter-belt of trees from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Maverick "Off the Fence."

Maverick (Dem.), Texas, told the House that, although he originally was "on the fence about this bill," he now favored it strongly. He said the propaganda against the bill was intended to "break Mr. Roosevelt."

"Oh, it makes me sick," the Texan said. "It's the same old gag. It's the same old stuff. Deep down in their hearts they're for President Roosevelt. If they lose him, where'll they go to?"

Chairman McReynolds (Dem.), Tennessee, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee urged the members not to "get excited about this bill."

"It's just a simple reorganization bill and a provision that will be put in will permit you to vote against what the President does under it if you don't like it."

Presidents of the United States have been asking for Government reorganization for 40 years, McReynolds added.

Chairman Cochran (Dem.), St. Louis, of the Reorganiztaion Committee told reporters: "I'm not going to make a motion to close debate again until I'm sure everybody has talked who wants to. It will run as long as they want it to run."

Asked whether the compromise was offered because of fear that the bill might be defeated, Cochran replied: "Absolutely not." He said the concessions had been agreed on before the bill was submitted to the House.

Chiang Kai-Shek Chosen China's Political as Well as Military Chief Elected Head of Kuomintang, Post Unfilled Since Death of Sun Yat-Sen, Founder of Republic.

By the Associated Press.

HANKOW, April 2.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek today was elected leader of the dominant Kuomintang, or Nationalist party, a position of great power not filled since the death 14 years ago of Sun Yat-Sen, founder of the party and of the Chinese Republic.

He was elected at the closing meeting of an emergency session of the party congress, summoned in this provisional capital to place the political organization of the nation on a wartime basis.

Already commander-in-chief of the armies resisting the Japanese invasion, Chiang was invested formally with sweeping political authority. In effect his position as supreme leader of the embattled nation was ratified, and the party's elaborate committee system which heretofore has prevented any individual from wielding dictatorial powers was abandoned.

(The Kuomintang's position in China is similar to that of the Communist party in Soviet Russia, and the Fascist party in Italy. Although individual leaders have challenged its claims to supreme authority, there are no rival parties. Until recently Chiang was premier, or chairman of the Government's executive committee, but he relinquished that post to his brother-in-law, Dr. H. H. Kung, to devote his whole energies to the war.)

The party made Chiang chairman both of its congress and its highest governing organ, the Central Executive Committee.

Emulating the political training systems of European totalitarian States, the Congress authorized the organization of a Kuomintang youth movement to prepare the young for party activity.

A manifesto by the Congress declared that the Nationalist principles of Sun Yat-sen, which guided Government policy during peace times, shall continue to be the sole guide during the war. This was considered an answer to Japanese and other charges that Communists were gaining dominant influence in the national Government.

The manifesto declared against a compromise peace with Japan, asserting that China must have "peace with justice which is possible only after Japan courageously forsakes her misguided plans and abandons a policy of aggression."

It said China's foreign policy would be, first, scrupulous respect for all her international obligations, and second, preservation and strengthening of its friendships with the Powers. It added, however, that China could not count on foreign aid.

"We must rescue ourselves," it said.

The party Congress recognized that the war made impossible early enforcement of the long-planned democratic constitution for the nation. It created a People's Political Council to give citizens a voice in the Government until a new constitutional era can be inaugurated.

(The Chinese Government had drafted a new constitution on which the people would have voted last year had not the war with Japan intervened.)

preparations for quick evacuation of French citizens from Barcelona.

Small border towns in the vicinity of Bagneres de Luchon still were jammed with refugees fleeing from the insurgent drive. The Spaniards were certain of refuge until Monday, at least, when the perplexing question of whether to send them back to government-held areas in Spain will be put up to the French cabinet.

The influx of Spaniards into France decreased today, officials at Bagneres de Luchon reporting only a few additions to the thousands in refugee camps.

All refugees received medical care, food and clothing.

Some Spanish militiamen, anticipating they would be sent back to Spain, voted to return to government territory and entrained for a main line railroad connection with Spain.

CHRYSLER DEALER CONTRACT IN COURT

Corporation, Anticipating Anti-Trust Move, Seeks Favorable Judgment.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2. — The Chrysler Corporation, reporting that Attorney-General Cummings had said he intended to bring anti-trust proceedings against it, asked the United States District Court here today for a "declaratory judgment" that its contracts with dealers regarding the financing of car sales do not violate the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Its petition said the Attorney-General had contended that provisions of the contracts were in violation of the law and tended to create a monopoly in the financing of its sales.

A statement issued by the corporation said that all its current dealer contracts included a provision limiting rates dealers might charge time payment buyers but declaring it was not the corporation's policy to require the dealers to use any particular finance company.

Attorney-General Cummings, named in the corporation's petition as respondent, is in Florida and is not expected to return here until Tuesday. Aids said there would be no comment from the Justice Department for the time being.

Attorneys said the corporation's petition grew out of the department's efforts to obtain indictments at Milwaukee last year against three large automobile manufacturers.

Federal Judge Geiger dismissed the grand jury which investigated the Departmen's charges before it had made any report. He criticised negotiations between Government officials and representatives of the companies for a settlement of the matter by a consent decree, without criminal proceedings.

Siegel was accompanied to Yugoslavia by John Alden Carpenter, Chicago composer, whose new concerto was played by numerous Yugoslavian orchestras directed by Siegel.

War Minister Hore-Belisha Modernizing Britain's Army

Artillery Split Up and Divisional Organization Changed to Increase Mobility and Power —Some German Ideas Used.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 2.—Leslie Hore-Belisha, War Minister, has given his critics another jolt by publicly advocating that the age for army recruiting be lowered from 18 to 17 years.

When Socialists raised a storm in the House of Commons over enlistments, the War Minister answered:

"To be quite frank, I can see no reason why a man should not be allowed to enlist frankly and openly at the age of 17."

The Socialists protested that many youths under 18 were being accepted in the army because they falsely stated they were 18. Their amendment to the army bill to prevent recruits from enlisting unless they produced birth certificates was defeated 121 to 61.

The newest army order divides the Royal Artillery into two branches in line with Hore-Belisha's program to modernize and mobilize the army. They will be known as the field branch and the coast defense—anti-aircraft branch.

The field branch would have lighter pieces to take abroad in case of war and the coast defense—anti-aircraft branch heavier guns primarily for defense.

When and if Britain's army crosses the English Channel to another war it will not be burdened with cavalry horse artillery or the unwieldly equipment that hampered its move to the front in 1914. The new fighting machine will be compact, swiftly mobile, largely mechanical.

Mobility His Aim.

The 43-year-old war minister — who set British recruiting records by tempting young Britons with higher pay, better living and better opportunities—wants a fighting army that can be moved anywhere swiftly to match the highly-trained troops of Europe.

He is occupied now on a plan to reorganize Britain's "strategic reserve," to create a "pool" of brigades and revamp the organization of army divisions.

The role of the "strategic reserve," as defined by the War Minister, is "reinforcement of internal security, defense of territories overseas and co-operation in defense of territories of any allies we might have in war."

The reserve needs a more central position and Hore-Belisha is evolving a new defense scheme from the cumbersome one that has not been changed since the World War.

To increase mobility, he is replacing the existing divisional type with two different types, with variations within types, along German lines.

Divisional Set-Up.

Britain's army at home has five divisions of nine battalions each—two of them machine-gun battalions.

The new divisional types will be:

A motorized division based on the light machine-gun;

A mechanized armored division based on the tank, consisting of two mechanized cavalry brigades and a tank brigade.

A motorized division's peacetime six battalions would be stepped up to nine battalions in wartime, supported by artillery and other guns.

Each division's mechanical transport company would be able to "lift" one infantry brigade. Carrying a brigade at a time, army trucks making two or three trips could move a division 60 miles a day.

Each anti-tank company is handing over its guns to the artillery and will become a machine gun company.

Artillery will have fire units of 12 guns instead of six, less personnel and greater concentrated fire power—another German policy.

Surplus heavy machine gun battalions are being converted to light machine gun battalions to form the nucleus of motorized divisions. Equipped with "Bren" guns, they will be used with other surplus infantry to increase the number of divisions.

(The "Bren" gun is a light-weight machine gun, produced in Czechoslovakia. The British Army started substituting this weapon for the American Lewis machine gun in 1935. The "Bren" has the same rate of fire as the Lewis, 500 shots a minute, but weighs only 21 pounds compared to the 31 pounds of the Lewis.)

Infantry and Artillery.

Creation of new divisions is limited by the number of new field brigades, artillery and other divisional troops that can be produced.

Hore-Belisha knows it would be fatal to have new infantry divisions without adequate artillery and engineers to change them into fighting formations equipped for a major war. Each rifle battalion of Britain's "army on wheels" now is a "light machine gun battalion," equipped with "Bren" guns.

With thousands of troops tied up in India, currently the pivotal point of the whole army plan, Hore-Belisha wants more "fluidity in resources," so India could reinforce Egypt or Palestine quickly or vice versa. So, he is tightening staff co-operation between India and the war office. He wants to reduce the army in India by several units and transfer Britain's expeditionary force from England to the middle east.

In case of trouble, troops would not have to pass through the Mediterranean or Red Sea where enemy warplanes might sink transports.

The "pool" plan would keep brigades of artillery, companies of engineers, signal and service corps and other departmental units available to supply quotas of various arms needed to bring them to European war standard.

TENNESSEE COURT SUSTAINS STATE MUNICIPAL POWER LAW

Two Utilities Lose Suit Against 1935 Statute Authorizing Public Operation.

By the Associated Press.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 2.—Tennessee's 1935 statute authorizing municipalities to go into the power business was upheld today by the State Supreme Court.

Enacted to help promote the T V A and P W A programs, the law empowers cties and counties to operate power systems, borrowing money to build or buy them if necessary.

It was attacked by two utilities, the Tennessee Electric Power Co. in a suit against Lafayette, and the Kentucky-Tennessee Light & Power Co. in suits against Paris and Clarksville.

Because of similar plans for public power systems, eight other Tennessee municipalities intervened in support of the act in the Fayetteville case.

NEPHEWS OF NASH, CHICAGO BOSS, END INCOME TAX FIGHT

Three Dowdle Brothers and Their Contracting Firm Settle $203,654 Claim of U. S.

AMOUNT PAID NOT DISCLOSED

Compromise Accepted by Board of Tax Appeals After Eight Years of Litigation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 2.—Acceptance of a compromise offer by the United States Board of Tax Appeals at Washington today ends the eight-year-old income tax dispute of the three Dowdle brothers and their contracting firm with the Federal Government. Raymond R., Thomas P. and John J. Dowdle settled the claim of $203,654 against them for an undisclosed amount.

The Dowdle brothers are nephews of Patrick A. Nash, Chicago Democratic leader.

It was an investigation of the books of the Sanitary District in the days when Timothy J. Crowe was president of the district that caused agents of the Intelligence Unit of the Internal Revenue Department to inquire into the income tax payments of the Dowdle firm. In October, 1930, the three brothers were indicted, charged with income tax evasion for 1926, 1927 and 1928.

Charges in Indictment.

The grand jury charged that for 1926 the company reported a gross income of $158,000 when its actual income was $379,000. The reported net of $32,000 should have been $270,000 and the tax paid was $4000, whereas $36,000 was due.

For 1927, the charge was that while the company reported a gross income of $401,000 and a net of $187,000 it should have reported a gross of $878,000 and a net $680,000. While a tax of $91,000 was due only $25,000 was paid, according to the grand jurors.

In 1928 the company reported a gross income of $285,000 and a net of $112,000 when it should have reported a gross of $1,049,000 and a net of $984,000, according to the Government. Taxes of $13,000 were paid although $117,000 were due.

Members of the Sanitary District Board were subsequently prosecuted in the State courts and several of them convicted of various charges. President Crowe died before he could serve his term. An indictment against Mayor Edward J. Kelly, then chief engineer of the board, was dismissed.

Contracts aggregating $4,000,000 had been handled by the Dowdle firm for the Sanitary District. In a perjury indictment returned at the same time the Government contended that the brothers had understated their income for 1926, 1927 and 1928 by $1,405,000 in returns they filed. The difference, the agents said they found, was made up almost entirely of padded payroll items.

The Dowdles steadfastly refused to clear themselves by disclosing the identity of those who received the money when interviewed by revenue agents here and at a hearing before the general revenue counsel at Washington.

Criminal Charges Dismissed.

The case against the Dowdles was continued from time to time. District Attorney Michael L. Igoe, now running for the Democratic nomination for United States Senate, dismissed the criminal charges against the Dowdles in November, 1936, on authority granted by Attorney-General Cummings. At that time it was said that the Government despaired of a conviction. It was reported further that the civil liability would be, or had been, settled by the payment of approximately $50,000.

Dowdle Sr., who came here in 1853, was a contractor in the city and a member of the firm that built the first skyscraper here. Early in the century he journeyed to Alaska and built the first railroad there. Later he constructed the New Orleans sewer system. When the three brothers joined the firm it was known as the Dowdle-Nash Co. Later they gave it its present name.

$3700 JOINT ESTATE FEE

Allowed to Two Attorneys for William F. Otto's Executor.

A joint fee of $3700 was allowed yesterday by Probate Judge Glendy B. Arnold to former Circuit Judge A. B. Frey and Albert E. Hausman as attorneys for the executor of the estate of former Alderman William F. Otto, who died two years ago.

The attorneys pointed out they represented the estate in protracted litigation growing out of suits filed against the estate and also handled administration of the property, which was valued at $96,000. One of the suits involved a claim by Mrs. Werner Luecke, 4803 Fountain avenue, to be declared an adopted daughter of Otto. This was settled for $7500. Attorney Otto F. Karbe is executor of the estate.

Union Pickets Stoning Truck at St. Charles Bridge

A. F. L. STRIKE ON PWA WORK TOMORROW

6000 Called Out in Demand For Closed Shop on St. Charles Bridge Job.

About 6000 A. F. of L. workmen will go on strike tomorrow morning on public construction jobs, financed in part by P W A grants, in support of a demand that only union men be employed in the reconstruction of the St. Charles highway bridge across the Missouri River.

Jobs at which A. F. of L. men will not report tomorrow will include the new National Guard Armory, Psychiatric Hospital, Soldiers' Memorial, Marine Hospital, Fifth District Police Station, University City Postoffice, an addition to the Clayton City Hall, school construction in Kirkwood and St. Charles, and road, sewer and viaduct construction. The jobs were closed down at quitting time Friday, as A. F. of L. building mechanics do not work on Saturday. There will be no interruption of private building.

The Building Trades Council voted the strike in an effort to obtain a closed shop at prevailing union wages on the $390,000 bridge job. George Owens, general superintendent of the Massman Construction Co. of Kansas City, announced yesterday that his company intended to carry out its contract for the bridge work. The company has a wage agreement with the Independent Workers' Organization, which was formed recently by workmen of St. Louis County and St. Charles. It is not affiliated with the A. F. of L. or C I O.

Preparation work, interrupted in February by the labor dispute, was resumed last week on the east approach of the bridge.

Union pickets, who have established a headquarters near the bridge, hurled missiles at a truck and a passenger car occupied by employes of the Massman Co. when they tried to start work yesterday morning. The workmen were driven away and one of them, Charles Teson, 20, was struck in the face by a bottle. He was treated for lacerations at County Hospital.

Two deputy sheriffs were on duty at the bridge during the attack and one of them discharged gas shells into the crowd of 150 pickets, who retreated. The pickets were armed with clubs, pieces of iron and billies made of garden hose and sand.

Later, Owen Femmer of Winfield, Mo., a business agent of the A. F. of L. laborers' union, was beaten by a crowd of men who seized him in a saloon. In a fight between the rival union men which followed, Raymond Hiatt of St. Charles suffered a superficial stab wound in the shoulder. Femmer was rescued from his assailants by a special deputy constable. Hiatt, a member of the independent union, procured a warrant for one of Femmer's companions charging assault.

MOTHER, DAUGHTER MISSING; CAR FOUND

Californian Flies to Texas to Join Search—Fears Murder.

By the Associated Press.

PECOS, Tex., April 2.—An automobile found abandoned in the West Texas hills caused a search today for Mrs. Weston G. Frome, 46 years old, of Berkeley, Cal., and her daughter, Nancy, 23. At Berkeley the husband and father, assistant salesmanager for the Atlas Powder Co. there, expressed the fear they had been kidnaped and murdered. He left California by plane to join the hunt.

Posses covered a 10-mile square around the point where the car was found but reported no clew. Federal Bureau of Investigation agents were called in.

The automobile, with baggage and tools missing, was found Thursday night near Balmorhea, 40 miles southwest of here. The motor was in running order and there were five gallons of gasoline in the tank.

The car was abandoned on the road to San Antonio, miles off the route the mother and daughter had planned to take on their way to Parris Island, S. C., to visit the Fromes' other daughter, Mrs. Benjamin McMakin, wife of a naval officer.

The women left El Paso Wednesday. They were reported to have carried about $125 in cash in addition to jewelry.

Justice of the Peace R. F. Ross of Balmorhea said that Wednesday afternoon two soldiers of a surveying party working 20 miles west of Balmorhea reported the Frome car passed and that the women in it waved a friendly greeting.

Thirty minutes later an army truck, returning the soldiers to their maneuvers base near Balmorhea, passed the abandoned car. No other automobiles, Ross said he was told, had passed from the west except a truck with only the driver, a man, in it.

The Frome car bore scratches and other evidence it had been driven through brush. No tracks were found near the road, however.

In the car when it left El Paso, and missing when it was found, were two hand trunks, two hat boxes, an Indian blanket, a package, a jar of fruit and a gallon of olives.

Nancy Frome who was graduated from the University of California in 1936, was 5 feet 5½ inches tall, weighing 115 pounds, slender, and with brown hair and eyes.

Mrs. Frome was 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighing 140 pounds, with dark brown hair and medium dark complexion, and looking several years younger than her age.

MOVERS' STRIKE TIEUP VIRTUALLY COMPLETE

Even Independents Have Ceased Operations—Conference Set for Tuesday.

The strike called Friday by A. F. of L. furniture movers in resistance to a proposed wage cut is more complete than any the union has ever conducted for a wage increase, an executive of a large van company said yesterday.

Both local and long distance moving is tied up. Independent movers have been persuaded to cease operations while the strike, affecting the 80 firms comprising the St. Louis Van Owners' Association, is in progress. There was picketing yesterday by some of the 400 men on strike. No serious trouble resulted, although police were called to two places during the day.

Negotiations for a settlement are scheduled to open at 2 p. m. Tuesday with representatives of the Van Owners' Association and of Furniture, Piano Movers and Packers' Local Union No. 751 meeting at 3546 Page boulevard, the union headquarters. Employers have asserted they are unable to make expenses at the present wage rates of 87 cents an hour for drivers and 82½ cents for helpers, established after a strike last year. The wage contract expired last Wednesday without any discussion of the amount of the proposed reduction.

It has been suggested unofficially that wages be cut between 17½ and 22½ cents an hour to prevent an increase in moving prices.

PLEADS GUILTY OF EXTORTION ATTEMPT; GETS 3-YEAR TERM

Letter Writer Sentenced at Detroit for Threat to East St. Louis Grocer.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, April 2.—Lewis Lewis, of East St. Louis, Ill., was sentenced to three years in the Leavenworth Federal Prison on a plea of guilty of writing an extortion letter to Morris Arky, East St. Louis grocer. Lewis was charged with threatening Arky and demanding $75.

Morris Arky, who operates a meat market at 1600 Gay avenue, East St. Louis, refused last night to discuss the extortion note written by Lewis. His wife said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the note had been turned over to postal authorities.

ALTON SLOT MACHINE SMASHER ARRESTED ON FRAUD CHARGES

Mrs. Irene Kite Says $5000 Bonds Are Too High and She Will Stay in Jail.

Mrs. Irene Kite, the Alton slot machine smasher, was arrested yesterday on a bench warrant issued after she was indicted last Tuesday on charges of operating a confidence game and conspiracy to defraud William C. O'Neil, Alton postal clerk.

Held at Madison County Jail at Edwardsville, she told authorities her bonds on the charges, totaling $5000, were excessive and she would not ask her friends to serve as sureties.

"I am going to remain right here in jail," she was quoted as saying, "until my innocence is proved, which won't take long at the trial."

Jointly charged with her in the indictments are her husband, Dan Kite, and William Williams and Earl Plumb. Kite was taken into custody Friday and released on $8000 bond. The others were arrested several weeks ago and had been held at the jail, unable to make bond. The indictments had been suppressed pending the arrest of the Kites.

TRAINED NURSE ADMITS SWINDLING WOMAN

Caught After She Tries Same Scheme on Attorney in East St. Louis.

An unsuccessful attempt by Mrs. Ilean Alleta Rudolph, 26-year-old trained nurse of Oakland, Cal., to repeat an estate swindle with T. A. Gasaway, an East St. Louis attorney, as the victim, has resulted in her arrest and admission to East St. Louis police that she bilked a woman of $562 on the swindle in California.

She sent a telegram to herself in East St. Louis, she related, stating that a $9000 estate awaited her at a Portland (Ore.) bank, but if court expenses were not paid by a certain date, it would go to charity. On March 20 she tried to persuade Gasaway to advance her $400 for the costs. He was cautious, and telegraphed the bank, asking her to wait in his office meanwhile. She suspected that he was checking her story, so she left the office and did not return.

Meanwhile, East St. Louis police had received a circular from the Sheriff of Contra Costa County, Cal., saying that a warrant charging grand theft had been issued against her in exactly the same kind of swindle, for the same amount, successfully worked on a woman in the county last November.

Mrs. Rudolph was arrested in Dupo, Ill., Friday. Her husband, Arnold G. Rudolph, a former United States soldier, who was with her, was questioned by East St. Louis police. He denied he knew anything about the swindle, and California authorities have not requested his arrest.

In a signed statement, Mrs. Rudolph admitted she had obtained the money from the California woman by promising to pay it back as soon as the "estate" was settled. Then she and her husband left California. The circular said Mrs. Rudolph had worked the confidence game on two other persons and obtained $1000 from them, but she denied it. She refused to waive extradition.

CHICAGO JUDGES REINSTATE 30 DEPUTIES BAILIFF OUSTED

Municipal Court Justice Says They Were Fired for Stand on Primary Election.

CHICAGO, April 2.—Municipal Court Judges ordered reinstatement today by a vote of 30 to 1 of 30 deputies discharged by Bailiff Albert J. Horan. Five Judges did not attend the meeting.

Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby said the 30 deputy bailiffs contended they were discharged after they refused to "string along" with the Horner-Courtney ticket in the April 12 primary election. Horan, who did not appear at the Judges' meeting, had said the dismissals were necessary for efficiency and economy.

The deputies, the Judges found, "were removed without any legal cause." The reinstatement order also provided for payment of back pay.

I. C. C. AUTHORIZES TRUCK LINE SALE TO ROCK ISLAND

Railroad's Subsidiary to Take Over White Line Motor Freight Co. Property.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Rock Island Motor Transit Co. today to purchase the operating rights and property of White Line Motor Freight Co., Inc., and White Line Trucking Co. for $59,000.

The Rock Island company, controlled by the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., plans to operate the White Lines between Omaha and Chicago, and over two short branch routes to Muscatine and Cedar Rapids, Ia. It would abandon all claims to all other operating rights of White Lines.

PENDERGAST TO HELP FRAUD CASE FAMILIES

Jobs or Financial Aid for Needy Relatives of Those Standing Ballot Trials.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, April 2.—Thomas J. Pendergast announced tonight that his Kansas City Democratic organization would provide for needy families of Democrats sentenced to jail or prison in the Federal prosecution of vote fraud in the last national election.

He told the correspondent the assistance, in the form of jobs or direct financial aid, would be given primarily to the party workers who had stood trial. He made it clear that only in "unusual cases" would the organization help the dependents of persons who had pleaded guilty or no-contest.

"For just as long as it is humanly possible," said Pendergast, "the Democratic organization will take care of the families of those unfortunate enough to face imprisonment. Without condoning their offenses, nevertheless we will not see their families destitute any more than we would have failed to provide bail and legal services before and during the trials."

"In cases where a member of the family is able to hold a job, we'll see that one is provided," the boss continued. "Where there is no one, we will extend financial assistance."

The question of what would become of the families of impoverished defendants during their imprisonment became urgent yesterday when the clerk of United States District Court here received a mandate for enforcement of the sentences imposed on 12 men whose final appeal has been denied by the Supreme Court.

The 12, who face terms ranging up to five years in the penitentiary, have 30 days in which to surrender to the United States Marshal.

Grade Crossing Work Authorized.

The work will be paid for from Federal funds. An underpass in Gravois will be constructed near Bingham avenue and one in Chippewa between Holt avenue and Garnier street.

INQUEST VERDICT CHARGES WIFE KILLED HEBNER

Declares Bones Found on Farm Near Pocahontas, Ark., Were His, and Accuses Her.

SHE WILL BE TRIED AT NEXT COURT TERM

Recommendation Made That Sheriff Take Charge of Man Who Admitted Then Denied Murder.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POCAHONTAS, Ark., April 2.—A coroner's jury today returned a verdict that the bones of a man found in the storm cellar of the farm of Mrs. Cora T. Hebner near here were those of her husband, Will Hebner, and that he met his death at the hands of Mrs. Hebner "in a manner to this jury unknown."

The jury recommended that Mrs. Hebner, formerly of St. Louis, be held for the Randolph County Circuit Court. She is charged with the murder of Hebner in a warrant issued March 11 a few hours after the skeleton was found. Her case will come up at the next term of court, beginning in July, and she will be held meanwhile without bail, Deputy Prosecuting Attorney George Steimel announced. She steadfastly denied to the jury that the bones were those of her husband, and said, he would "show up some day."

Inquiry Suggested.

It was also recommended by the jury that Sid Dickinson, a gambler of Newport, Ark., who made and then retracted a confession of the killing, be "turned over to Sheriff J. T. Thompson for any further investigation he may see fit to make."

Dickinson made an incoherent statement to authorities at Newport Thursday that he had shot and killed Hebner in a poker game, and that Mrs. Hebner had put the body in the cellar. Sheriff Thompson said he thought Dickinson had been drinking. Dickinson was questioned by the Coroner's jury yesterday, and repeated the statement. Today, however, he returned before the jury in what appeared to be considerably better physical condition, and asserted he was not responsible when he said he had killed Hebner, and that it was not true.

Steimel declared that after he had questioned Mrs. Hebner more than 100 hours she still answered questions freely and even appeared to enjoy being questioned.

Charged Husband With a Murder.

Mrs. Hebner, who told a Post-Dispatch reporter that she had been married five times, testified at the inquest that Hebner said he had murdered William C. Hite, who was beaten and stabbed to death Nov. 10, 1935, in his second-hand store at 1809 Franklin avenue, St. Louis. She said she was living with Hebner at 5312 North Broadway at the time Hite was killed, and that he laughed over news accounts of the conviction of Jasper Gibilterra, now serving a life sentence for the Hite murder, then later told her he himself "killed that old man on Franklin avenue" by hitting him with a piece of pipe. Authorities and an attorney for Gibilterra are investigating the story.

Hebner's body was found a few days after his 55-year-old wife moved from the farm. He had not been seen by neighbors for a year before she left. Shortly after they last saw him, they testified, there was a stench about the farm, and buzzards hovered over the storm cellar. Mrs. Hebner was arrested in Miami, Fla.

KILLING OF CONVICT HELD TO BE JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE

Arkansas Officers Tell Coroner's Jury of Shooting Prisoner Who Tried to Escape.

A verdict of justifiable homicide was returned by a Coroner's jury yesterday in the death of John E. Hardy, Negro convict, who was fatally shot Friday when he attempted to escape from officers who were returning him from Chicago to the Arkansas State Penitentiary at Gould.

The officers, Deputy Warden T. B. Beard and Guard Charles Pearce, told the inquest jury that Hardy, manacled in the back seat of their automobile, suddenly began beating Pearce on the head with his handcuffs. Pearce stopped the car on United States Highway 66 near Mitchell, Ill., and shot Hardy as Beard struggled with him.

Hardy escaped from prison two years ago after serving eight months of a 12-year term for burglary. He had been turnd over to Arkansas authorities after discharge from the Chicago House of Correction.

AUTO INSURANCE RATE FOR MISSOURI REDUCED

Order for Advance Outside St. Louis in Effect Feb. 1 Rescinded by Underwriters.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 2.—A reduction in public liability and property damage insurance rates on automobiles throughout Missouri, except in St. Louis, was announced today by R. B. Jones & Sons, Inc., on authorization from the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters.

The rate ruling restores premium rates to the level at which they stood before Feb. 1, when they were increased 23 per cent for all of Missouri except St. Louis on the ground that accidents in Missouri justified it. The ruling is retroactive to Feb. 1 and does not affect the 15 per cent premium credit awarded policy-holders who have no accidents within the premium period.

GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY TO LATIN AMERICA PRAISED

State Department Official Says Roosevelt Is Helping to Dissolve Antagonism.

PHILADELPHIA, April 2.—Laurence Duggan said tonight the Roosevelt administration's "good neighbor" oplicy toward Latin American nations was dissolving the "antagonisms fired by our past activities" in the Western Hemisphere.

Duggan, Chief of the American Republics Division, of the State Department, made this statement in an address before the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

In past years, he said, the United States' foreign policy had "resulted in the infringement of sovereignty of many nearby nations" and brought a "growing hue and cry" against this country. The present administration, he asserted, offered tangible proofs of its determination to conduct relations with other American republics on a different plane.

EAST ST. LOUIS BOND ELECTION SATURDAY

New Police Headquarters and Fire Station Proposed; School Vote, Too.

A proposition to issue $300,000 in bonds to finance construction and equipment of a new combined police headquarters and central fire station in East St. Louis will be submitted to the voters Saturday. At the same time, four members will be elected to the East St. Louis Board of Education to serve three-year terms.

There will be 15 candidates on the School Board ballot. They are: W. W. Stines and Eugene V. Menges, incumbents; J. Elmer Wick, J. C. Nichols, Clarence E. Rogers, William O. Elsele, George Jentsch, Anthony J. Posage, Dr. Vincent W. Flannery, Joseph M. Kauffman, Thomas P. Drennan, John L. Woods, Charles Rohlkoetter, William T. Huddle and Thomas F. Coonan. The first four are running on a slate. Albert E. Bott and Frank B. Young, members whose terms expire this year, are not running for re-election. A light vote is expected.

The new police and fire station would be erected either on City Hall Park, at Main street and Missouri avenue, or on the site of the present police headquarters and No. 1 engine house at 109 and 115 North Main street. Police headquarters, built in 1903, has been declared by the Federal Bureau of Prisons to be unfit for lodging Federal prisoners because of its dilapidated condition and lack of modern facilities. The engine house was built in 1893 and is in need of extensive repairs.

John T. Connors, Commissioner of Finance, announced that if the bond issue were approved the bonds would be sold at public sale, with 4½ per cent the maximum interest rate. They will be retired over a period of 20 years. While the first tax levy for the bonds will be 6 cents on the $100 of assessed valuation in 1938, the net increase in taxes will be only one cent because of the retirement of other bonds this year.

The present bonded indebtedness of the city, $598,000, is far below the bonding limit of $1,245,000, and represents a reduction of $812,000 under the peak indebtedness of $1,410,000 reached in 1926.

MOVE TO END STRIKE IN FRANCE HITS SNAG

Citroen Auto Factory Managers Refuse Government Arbitration.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 2.—Settlement of the 10-day strike in aviation and metallurgical plants was held up tonight when the management of the Citroen Automobile Factory refused to accept Government arbitration of the strikers' demands.

In a letter to Vincent Auriol, Cabinet Minister assigned by Premier Leon Blum to handle the strike situation, the Citroen management declared the wage controversy should be settled according to existing laws.

Blum immediately conferred with Citroen officials after workers' delegates had accepted the proposed basis of an accord, which provided: That the plants be evacuated at once by the strikers; that the management pay employes back wages which had been held up more than a week by the strike; and that the Government arbitrate the differences between employers and employes.

About 20,000 workers, demanding collective bargaining contracts and in some cases slight pay increases, were occupying factories.

1000 Jobless Socialists Prefer La Rocque to Blum.

By the Associated Press.

CALAIS, France, April 2.—A mass meeting of 1000 unemployed members of Premier Leon Blum's Socialist party declared their intention tonight to join Francois de la Rocque's Rightist French social party "rather than starve with Blum." Meeting in a public hall from which they excluded the Socialist Mayor, the demonstrators adopted a resolution denouncing the People's Front program as "a dream" and asserting it had accomplished nothing for the unemployed.

BIG EDUCATION FUND UNDER HOOVER PLAN

Debtor Relief Nations Would Put Up $140,952,000 If It Were Adopted.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—A fund of $140,952,766 would be provided for the exchange of students between the United States and Europe if a proposal advanced by former President Hoover were adopted, officials said today.

In his speech Thursday night at New York, Hoover proposed that countries which owe this Government relief debts be permitted to erase them by depositing in their own banks an equivalent amount of money to finance a wholesale exchange of students and professors between themselves and the United States.

Relief debtors are distinct from war debtors. They are countries to which this nation extended aid and sold food and other supplies on credit after the World War.

Officials said Hoover's proposal would obviate the objection some such debtors have made to paying their debts: namely, the difficulty of getting dollars with which to pay us.

Officials said 10 countries would be involved—Armenia (now U. S. S. R.), Austria (now Germany), Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Finland, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland and Russia. The largest relief debtor is Poland, which received credits of almost $76,000,000.

The second largest is Austria, whose credit was $24,055,708. Since Austria is now part of Germany, Germany would be expected to assume this obligation and presumably would come within the scope of Hoover's proposal.

The only relief debtor which has consistently paid is Finland, which received a credit of $8,281,926.

Hungary, another relief debtor ($1,685,835), offered recently to settle its obligation by paying the principal amount without interest.

ALIEN SAILOR CAUGHT ROBBING RESIDENCE IN CLAYTON

Neighbor Seeing Lights in Richard Slack Home While Family Is Away Calls Police.

Surprised by police in the act of robbing a Clayton residence Friday night, a man who identified himself as Frank O'Brien, a sailor and an alien, who entered the country illegally a month ago, was in jail at Clayton yesterday pending issuance of burglary warrants.

A neighborhood watchman saw lights in the home of Richard Slack, furniture dealer, at 7417 Maryland avenue, and, knowing the Slacks were out of town, telephoned police. They arrived as O'Brien was about to leave with suitcases containing clothing and costume jewelry. O'Brien said he had obtained part of the loot a short time before in a burglary at 7026 Westmoreland drive, nearby.

O'Brien said he was a British citizen and had left his ship at Boston, following which he moved about the country, committing burglaries in Boston, Chicago and Denver before arriving in St. Louis Friday morning. Immigration authorities, notified by police, said they would await disposition of the burglary charges before taking action.

Y. W. C. A. DRIVE FOR $80,000 SET FOR APRIL 22 TO MAY 6

1938 Fund Campaign Announced at Luncheon Attended by Church Leaders.

The 1938 Young Women's Christian Association fund campaign will be conducted April 22 to May 6, Mrs. Eugene Rosee McCarthy, president, announced yesterday at a luncheon of church leaders at the association building, 1411 Locust street. The goal is $80,000.

The Rev. Dr. Karl Morgan Block, pastor of St. Michael's and St. George's Church, Wydown boulevard and Ellenwood avenue, praised the work of the organization and asked for support of the fund campaign.

"In time of economic insecurity men's hearts are oppressed with fear, with a basic sense of inferiority," re declared. "There is fear in the heart of youth when life offers so little opportunity. Here the Y. W. C. A. in St. Louis fulfills a high purpose by providing a haven for girls who do not find the churches."

The luncheon was in honor of Mrs. Herman Duhme Jr., retiring president of the association, and Mrs. McCarthy. About 125 persons attended.

ANTI-SCHADING FACTION IN UNION OUT TO OUST HIM

Defeat of Business Agent on Amendment to Give Him More Power Encourages Opponents.

169 RISE TO VOTE 'NO' TO 82 'YES'

Turbulent Leader of Electricians, Once Suspended, Comes Up for Re-Election in June.

Arthur Schading, the turbulent leader of the electricians' union, who once was suspended and barred from holding office by the union's international executive council, is slated to be ousted from his job as business agent of Local No. 1, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, if his opponents within the union can accomplish that when he comes up for re-election next June.

They are confident they can unseat him and accept as a forecast of success the defeat, at a recent union meeting, of an amendment to the by-laws which would have given Schading authority over all job assignments of union members.

With Schading looking on to see how members voted, 169 arose to vote "no" and only 82 stood to vote "yes." A considerable number of those present did not choose to vote. In view of the power over jobs already held by the business agent, his opponents counted this a significant victory for their side.

Schading's Present Powers.

As the by-laws stand, Schading may remove any member from his job "when he decides the best interests of the union require such removal" without interference from any officer of the union or its executive board, and he has the power to assign unemployed members to jobs, distributing them as he considers "fair and practical."

In preparation for the meeting, Schading had circulated a petition favoring the amendment and obtained about 100 signatures to the petition, but when the vote came he was not able to muster all the signers to his support.

The amendment would have extended the power he now has in job assignments for unemployed members to all members. Offered with the explanation that "conditions on the unemployment question have reached a stage where something different than our regular routine must be done," the amendment read:

"The handling and placing of all members on all jobs shall be under the full supervision and direction of the office of the business manager. He shall devise such means as he considers practical and fair in distributing available jobs to such members, if they are qualified to do the work. Members violating any rule or plan established shall be penalized as decided by the executive board."

Another Test This Month.

Another test of the anti-Schading force may come later this month when a resolution to create a revolving fund of $1000 from which the business agent could draw without accounting in advance for his expenditures will be put to vote. The resolution, sponsored by Schading, was read at Friday night's meeting of the union and put over until the next meeting.

Schading's aggressiveness and belligerence, which seemed to the electricians to be just what their union needed in 1936 when a seven-year bar against his holding office expired, are what led to his present difficulties.

His loss of prestige within the union dates from the long-drawn out jurisdictional dispute last year between the electricians and the Sign Hangers' Union, both affiliates of the American Federation of Labor. Schading wanted all the work connected with installation of electric signs for his union, but in the end there was a settlement which gave the electrical work to the electricians, and the sign hanging work to the sign hangers.

While the conflict was on, Schading would not permit union electricians to work with union sign hangers. The loss in electricians' wages which resulted from that policy is estimated by some of his opponents as $100,000.

Operating Expense High.

His opponents are critical of the $23,000 operating expense of the union in the last quarter of 1937, regarding it as excessive for a union with about 1200 members. The high cost of operations in that quarter was attributed by Schading to the "sign trouble."

Schading's opponents are concerned, too, about the effect of his tactics on the "good repute" of the union. He is under indictment on a charge of attempted extortion of $2000 from a Kirkwood theater operator, and two members of the union are charged with malicious destruction of property at that theater. The building, leased by the theater operator from the man who built it, was wired by non-union electricians, and although the operator hired union men to install his equipment, it was ripped out just before the scheduled opening of the theater.

Sign smashings and bombing of sign companies which dealt with the Sign Hangers' Union marked the controversy, and there was testimony at hearings on an injunction suit instituted by sign companies that Schading displayed revolvers when he met with employers to discuss labor difficulties.

Schading's Career.

Schading has had a stormy career as a union leader. The executive council of his own international union found him guilty of "dishonorable conduct" in 1929, after he had served six years as business agent of Local No. 1. He was suspended from membership for five years and barred from holding office for seven years when the executive council found he had brought the union into disrepute by creating an impression it operated contrary to public policy and with complete disregard of its own constitution and by-laws.

When the bar against Schading's holding office expired, the union put him back in his $85-a-week job, but some of those who were his most active supporters then are now with his opponents.

Such is the power of the business agent that the movement against him must proceed quietly, its leaders being reluctant to expose themselves to the possibility of retaliation. Their meetings have been in small, informal groups and they have announced no opposition slate. Under the union's constitution they could be suspended for caucusing before the June election.

FIVE ARMENIANS TO DIE FOR KILLING RUSSIANS IN 1920

Convicted at Leninakan of Deaths of 11 Bolshevists, Including Hero of Revolution.

NEW SPY PROTEST MADE TO TOKIO

Japanese Envoy at Kabul, Afghanistan, Accused of Trying to Enlist Soviet Envoy.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, April 2.—Five Armenians have been sentenced to death at Leninakan, in the Soviet Socialist republic of Armenia, on charges of killing 11 Bolshevists in 1920, among them Gukas Gukasyan, hero of the revolution there.

A newspaper reporting the trial said the condemned men were terrorists who had managed to hide their identities for almost two decades.

Three other persons have been sentenced to death in Novosibirsk Province, Siberia, on charges of disrupting collective farming.

Four officers of a Leningrad lantern factory, including Manager I. Krassin, it was disclosed, have been arrested on charges of manufacturing defective lanterns.

Ivan Papanin, commander of the recently rescued Polar ice floe campers, was said to have complained by radio during their six-month sojourn in the Arctic that their lanterns were smoky and unsatisfactory. The arrests were made after an investigation disclosed that factory officials picked out six of a stock of defective lanterns instead of supplying a special order placed for the expedition.

Tampering With Envoy Charged.

The Soviet Russian Government protested to Japan today that the Japanese charge d'affaires at Kabul, Afghanistan, attempted to enlist the new Soviet minister to Afghanistan as a Japanese spy.

K. A. Mikhailov recently replaced Boris Skvirsky as Soviet minister at Kabul.

(Skvirsky, well known in the United States as one of the first Soviet diplomatic agents in Washington, was not mentioned in the Dec. 24, 1937, announcement of Mikhailov's appointment to the post he formerly held. At that time diplomatic circles speculated on his fate, since his removal was disclosed shortly after the arrest and execution of Vladimir Zukerman, foreign office department head, who was among eight high Soviet officials to face the firing squad for treason).

Tass (Soviet news agency), accusing the Japanese diplomat of "unprecedented insolence," announced he called on Mikhailov and asked him to "become a spy for the Japanese Government. Mikhailov indignantly rejected the request, and the Japanese Charge d'Affaires left in a great confusion."

Japan Asked to Close Consulates.

Simultaneously, Japanese sources said the Soviet Government had requested Japan to close three of its remaining six consulates in Russia by the end of April.

Two of the consulates are at Khabarovsk, which is headquarters for the Far Eastern Red army, and Blagoveschchenfk, on the trans-Siberian railroad near the Manchoukuo frontier. The other is at either Okha or Alexandrovsk, on Sakhalin Island, off the coast of Siberia, where six Japanese recently were sentenced to death on charges of spying. Russia owns the northern half of Sakhalin and Japan the southern half.

The closing would leave Japan with consulates at Vladivostok and Petropaylovsk on Kamchatka peninsula in Northeastern Siberia, and at Sakhalin City on Sakhalin Island.

The Soviet Government already has closed the Japanese consulates at Novosibirsk and Odessa. Soviet officials said there were no Japanese residents in either Odessa, a Ukranian seaport, or Novosibirsk, a trans-Siberian railway point.

The Japanese source said Soviet authorities gave as their reason for the latest order their intention to close three Russian consulates in Japan which they found necessary. Russia has consulates in the Japanese cities of Kobe, Nagasaki, Hakodate, Tsuruga, Seoul and Darien.

FAROUK VICTORY INDICATED

By the Associated Press.

CAIRO, April 2.—Three persons were killed in the Nile delta region today as lower Egypt voted in the general election, results of which thus far indicated a big majority for young King Farouk's hand-picked Cabinet.

Police armed with batons guarded Cairo polling stations following reports that Wafdists (Nationalists) intended to create disturbance. The voting here was quiet, however. What clashes there were occurred in outlying districts.

FOREIGN OIL MEN APPEAL TO MEXICO SUPREME COURT

To File Petition Tomorrow Asking That Expropriation Decree Be Declared Unconstitutional.

TO APPLY ALSO TO GOVERNMENT

They Will Ask Department of National Economy to Revoke Cardenas' Order.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, April 2.—An appeal to the Supreme Court embracing 22 charges of violation of the Constitution was drawn up today by foreign oil company executives seeking to regain their $400,000,000 properties expropriated by the Government.

Officials of the 17 American and British companies taken over by President Lazaro Cardenas said they would ask the Supreme Court Monday to declare his March 19 decree unconstitutional on grounds which included:

That Article 27 of Mexico's Constitution authorizes expropriation of land and water only; whereas they lost their tools, plants and equipment.

That the companies were deprived of their properties without due legal procedure.

That no indemnification was paid at the time of the expropriation.

That the properties expropriated were not designated beforehand in accordance with law.

That a Government monopoly of petroleum was set up in violation of Article 27 of the Constitution.

Another Petition to Be Made.

In addition to the Supreme Court appeal, the officials said they would petition the Department of National Economy for administrative revocation of the Cardenas decree.

Meanwhile, the peso improved in view of the recognition by the United States Government of Mexico's right to expropriate foreign-owned property and its willingness to see the companies' claims scaled down.

The peso was quoted in unofficial trading at 4.50 to 4.60 to the dollar, an improvement of 10 or 15 points over yesterday's quotations. Transactions have been carried on by private banks since dealings in foreign exchange were suspended at the time of the expropriation.

Some observers said, however, last night's exchange of courtesies between the United States and Mexican governments had done little to improve Cardenas' difficult economic situation.

This was complicated by depreciation of the peso following the expropriation and the subsequent discontinuance of United States silver purchases from Mexico.

Customs Receipts Drop 75 Pct.

It was estimated customs receipts were off 75 per cent compared with those of last year, because of the monetary situation and the increase in Mexican tariffs in January.

Oil export duties were about dried up, because of the absence of a foreign market for the country's stores of petroleum. The United States and Great Britain, whose companies were hardest hit by the expropriation, heretofore bought 60 per cent of the nation's oil.

Revenues from silver mining were curtailed, partly because of the closing of the American refining and smelting plant which produced half of Mexico's export silver.

Two Who Saw Cardenas Silent on Oil Seizure.

By the Associated Press.

NEWARK, N. J., April 2.—Francis W. Rickett, Englishman who negotiated a widely publicized oil concession in Ethiopia before the Italian conquest, and Bernard E. Smith, New York broker, arrived at Newark airport by plane today from a conference with President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico.

They were noncommittal on reports that they had completed negotiations for the purchase of Mexican Government-produced oil at prices below the world market.

Rickett finally said: "Well, I've read what we're supposed to have done, and we'll just let it go at that."

Smith, known as one of the biggest operators on the New York Stock Exchange, avoided all questions.

FLOWER AND GARDEN SHOW ENDS TONIGHT

Exhibition at Arena Viewed so Far by More Than 75,000 Persons.

The Greater St. Louis Flower and Garden Show at the Arena, viewed thus far by more than 75,000 persons, will close at 11 o'clock tonight. Attendance yesterday was 8100.

For the ninth and final day of the show the entire floor space of the Arena will be filled with 170 different commercial and amateur floral exhibits, including varied garden displays ranging in size from 100 to 10,000 square feet.

There will be shown also thousands of cut flowers of many species and hybrids, such as amaryllis, calla lilies, delphiniums, double flowering stocks, gerberas and the Queen Mary rose. These exhibits will be supplemented by the large display of flowers sent by air mail.

The amateur garden division, in the west building, includes a copy of the Springdale bird sanctuary at Cape Girardeau, Mo., and an exhibit of working bees. A model of the State Capitol, in the Jefferson City Garden Club display, was built by prisoners in the State Penitentiary.

H. G. Berning, hononary chairman of the show, said yesterday officials were satisfied with the attendance at the show, especially in view of the recent adverse weather. Other flower shows in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Toronto, Canada, have reported large attendances, he said.

The flower show will be open at 9 a. m. today.

"IN THE GOBI DESERT AND AT HOME I've had first-hand experience with the kind of dependability that's made Dodge famous," says Dr. Andrews. "Many times, in the uncharted wastelands of Mongolia, Dodge saved our lives! Dodge always came through under circumstances where a single failure would have meant slow death from starvation and thirst. No wonder that not only myself, but Mrs. Andrews as well, appreciate the even greater dependability that has been built into our new 1938 Dodge!"

SAYS Roy Chapman Andrews FAMOUS NATURALIST AND EXPLORER

DODGE CAN "TAKE IT"!

MANY THANKS, Dr. Andrews... few motorists will ever encounter the kind of car-wrecking trails you've traveled... desert trails where car failure might easily have meant starvation, thirst, disaster. But Dodge owners are glad to know that in the toughest spots they will ever face, their car can "take it," with plenty of heart to spare.

That's been Dodge history from the beginning... and it's truer today than ever. For the new 1938 Dodge is not only an eyeful of windstreamed beauty ...it's the ruggedest car Dodge ever built! There's no cream-puff structure here. No clinging vine in her makeup. The men who designed it were battleship-minded—eager to give motorists "the toughest and safest thing on wheels."

So no wonder your loved ones ride safer in Dodge. Steel walls, steel roof like a vault in the mint! Genuine hydraulic brakes that stop smooth and safe at the touch of your toe! Power that levels hills and smooths out the bad lands with an ease you've never known before!

But dependability isn't all. You'll never know what Dodge engineering genius and precision manufacturing have done for riding and driving ease until you've been behind the wheel of this car. Responsive? Man, it's the nearest thing to telepathy you ever drove! Just step on the gas pedal, and zoom!...you get a brand-new idea of pickup—a lift and a surge that make driving this new Dodge an exciting experience!

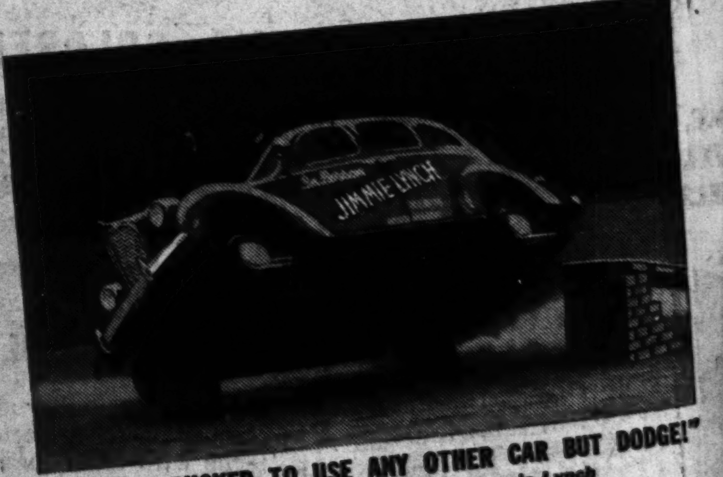
PERFORMANCE THAT SPARKLES!

BEST-PRICED CAR IN AMERICA!

And don't forget, Dodge is the traditional miser on gas and oil. Owners everywhere report 18 to 24 miles to the gallon of gasoline—savings up to 20% on oil!

Best of all is that famous Dodge price tag! It's marked far less than some cars that don't give you as much. So why pay more money?...Or if you're making the mistake of thinking that you can only afford a small car, listen to this: Dodge is priced so close to the low-priced cars that you'll hardly notice the difference! No wonder owners say Dodge is the best-priced car in America! But why not get the whole amazing story from your dealer right away. Phone him now!

This advertisement endorsed by the Engineering Department, DODGE Division of Chrysler Corporation



"I'D BE A SUCKER TO USE ANY OTHER CAR BUT DODGE!"
Says Daredevil "Death-Dodger" Jimmie Lynch

Jimmie Lynch literally makes a living by laughing at death! Every week thousands pay to see him and his troupe of "Death-Dodgers" put motor cars through the most brutal tests ever devised! His cars roar at top speed on two wheels...play leap-frog over other cars...crash through walls of fire...the most fiendish punishment any cars ever took! "In my work," says Mr. Lynch, "I'd be a sucker to use any other car but Dodge! I simply can't afford to drive cars that won't stand the gaff. Furthermore they must be built to protect the men who drive them. That's why you'll find nothing but Dodge cars working for me!"

THE SECRET OF DODGE DEPENDABILITY

Have you ever wondered why Dodge cars have such a great reputation for dependability, ruggedness and long life? The answer lies in the fact that for years Dodge has deliberately engineered and built its cars not only for the first owner, but for the second, third and even fourth owners! In fact, records show that Dodge owners who buy new Dodge cars every year or two years use only a fraction of the total mileage built into them! That's just one reason why 142,922 new car buyers have switched from other cars to Dodge in the past year. And that's also why those who really know used car values are saying the Dodge used cars offered by Dodge dealers are the finest buys on the market!

CLAIMS ALLOWED AGAINST HENRY P. SCHROEDER ESTATE

Petition for $17,506 Based on Notes Which Board of Education Member Guaranteed.

Claims totaling $17,506 were allowed yesterday by Probate Judge Glendy B. Arnold against the estate of Henry P. Schroeder, a member of the Board of Education, who died last October. The claims were filed by the Manufacturers Bank and Trust Co. as liquidating agent for the Lafayette-South Side Bank and Trust Co., and are based on promissory notes held by the latter bank which Schroeder had guaranteed.

Schroeder's estate is valued at $34,006 in an inventory filed by his brother, Joseph C. Schroeder, administrator. The assets consist of deeds of trust, cash, corporation stock and realty. Schroeder was president of the Mercantile Products Co., 118 South Commercial street. He resided at 4960 Maffitt avenue.

CIO STRIKERS RUNNING SEIZED POWER PLANTS

Gov. Murphy Returning From Florida for Conference at Detroit Monday.

By the Associated Press.

JACKSON, Mich., April 2.—Employes of the Consumers Power Co., who took control of four power stations and two gas plants last night, continued to maintain service today to upwards of 1,000,000 lower Michigan residents in an unusual strike.

The populous Saginaw Valley, twice deprived of electric service in the last year by shutdowns ordered by a Committee for Industrial Organization Union of Utility Workers, was little affected by the present strike.

Gov. Frank Murphy, who warned the workers last summer that "the State will not tolerate" further power interruptions, hastened back from a Florida vacation to confer with representatives of the company and the Utility Workers' Organizing Committee in Detroit at 10 a. m. Monday.

Albert Stonkus, U W O C director, pledged "no interruption of service—not before we have had a conference with Gov. Murphy."

Auto Workers Aid Strikers.

The strike proceeded quietly at all points today, with dwindling picket lines guarding closed gates at the plants from which foremen and company officers were ousted. "Flying squadrons" of the C I O-affiliated United Automobile Workers of America aided U W O C pickets at the huge power plant at Zilwaukee, near Saginaw, where switches control the flow of power from Au Sable River dams to distributing lines serving a population of 400,000.

Sheriffs in communities where the seized plants are situated indicated they did not intend to interfere unless switches were pulled. State police had orders to "stand by."

U W O C leaders ordered the strike after the collapse of negotiations with company officers yesterday afternoon. A company statement said the C I O union demanded wage increases; Stonkus said "our only demand" was guarantee against wage cuts and of renewal of a working agreement.

Complicating the company's position are the contentions of three competing unions, each of which claims a majority of the nearly 6000 employes. The Independent Power Workers' Association and the American Federation of Labor Electrical Workers' Union each has petitioned the National Labor Relations Board for an election.

Strikers Taking Orders.

Workers in charge of the seized power stations were accepting orders from a company "load dispatcher" at Jackson. This dispatcher said the stations were responding immediately to his requests for increases or decreases in power output.

Company engineers expressed fear that damage and interruption of service might result should a snowfall in Eastern Michigan today turn to sleet. Maintenance and construction work was suspended because of the strike, they said.

Monday's conference called by Gov. Murphy was expected to bring together Daniel E. Karn, general manager of the power company; Stonkus, Adolph Germer, C I O regional director; George A. Krogstad, chairman of the State Department of Labor and Industry, and Attorney-General Raymond W. Starr or one of his assistants.

Circuit Judge John Simpson dissolved today a temporary injunction which restrained the company from signing an agreement with the U W O C. The injunction had been obtained by the Independent Power Workers' Association.

Stonkus said the ruling of Judge Simpson "removes the last technical objections on the company's part to settlement of the strike."

Meanwhile Karn telegraphed Gov. Murphy: "Plants and operations in the northeastern part of the company's system are in irresponsible hands. In the interests of public safety we urge you to use your good offices to see that these plants and operations are restored to the control of the management."

Karn also urged the Governor to ask the N L R B to proceed with an election to determine a bargaining agent among the company's employes.

CIO STEEL CONTRACTS RENEWED

Companies in Various Cities Sign Again With S W O C.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 2.—The C I O Steel Workers' Organizing Committee announced today a number of companies had signed renewal contracts during the week. They included:

Judson Steel Corporation, Oakland, Cal.; Continental Steel Co., Kokomo, Ind.; E. C. Atkins Saw Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; Hart & Crouse Co., Utica, N. Y.; General American Transportation Co., East Chicago, Ind.; American Stove Co., Lorain, O.; Wheeling Machine Products, Wheeling, W. Va., and Klein Stove Co., Philadelphia.

Charity Solicitation Permits.

Permits to solicit funds in the city were issued to six organizations by the Charities Solicitations Commission yesterday. The recipients are: American War Mothers, St. Louis Chapter No. 10, Grand boulevard and Juniata street; Pine Street Y. M. C. A. boys' department, 2846 Pine boulevard; American Red Cross, St. Louis Chapter, 3723 Olive street; St. Domenico Italian Orphan Home, 1340 Partridge avenue, University City; Frank Wyman Outing Farm for Children, Eureka, and Relief Center, Inc., 918 South Fourth street.

HENRY FORDS TO MARK THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Celebration April 11 — Auto Maker to Be 75 Years Old on July 31.

DETROIT, April 2.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford will observe their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Monday, April 11, at Fairlane, the Ford estate in Dearborn. There also will be a birthday observance, for it was on Mrs. Ford's twenty-first birthday that she, formerly Clara Bryant, was married to the farm youth who was destined to become one of the world's leading industrialists.

Ford said he did not know just what form the observance would take. "Edsel and Eleanor are fixing up something," he said. Edsel is the Fords' only child and Eleanor is the younger Ford's wife.

Another anniversary celebration lies ahead for Henry Ford, for on July 31 he will be 75 years old and Detroit's City Council has initiated plans for an observance to start two weeks before that date.

Ford appears in the best of health. He stoops a little, but might easily pass for 65.

Mrs. Ford, who finds her greatest outside interest in the garden and in social welfare work, apparently is also enjoying good health. An indisposition a year ago kept her confined to her home. More recently, however, she has been able to accompany her husband on his vacation trips, the most recent of which took them to the Ford plantation near Ways, Ga.

Ford and Miss Bryant were introduced at a dance at Greenfield in 1886.

"It was a case of love at first sight," Ford afterward remarked.

"He made absolutely no impression on me at the time," said Mrs. Ford. "I didn't see him again until a year later."

It was at another dance.

"Then I went home and told my parents about him. He was different from other young men."

Mrs. Ford said that at their second meeting they sat out two dances while Ford showed her an unusual watch. It had two sets of hands which recorded standard and sun time, both of which were in use in Detroit at the time.

When Ford was trying to put together his first horseless carriage in a little brick barn back of his home in what is now downtown Detroit, most of his acquaintances scoffed at him. Mrs. Ford kept telling him the vehicle would go. When it finally did go, she sat in the seat beside him.

'ENGINEER PLUS' NEEDED, RECLAMATION CHIEF SAYS

Full Use of Means, but With Eye to Future Necessary, Declares J. C. Page.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., April 2.—Society needs "the engineer plus" to meet the modern challenge of drouth, dust and floods, John C. Page, United States Reclamation Commissioner, told the Nebraska Engineering Society here tonight.

Page said engineers must have broad, social vision to qualify as leaders "in this new era which will emphasize conservation."

"The engineering profession must make its influences felt farther than the drafting room," he declared, "but it cannot do so unless it applies its thought to social and economic problems and lends its influence and leadership to their correction. The times cry loudly for the engineer with a social conscience, both in the service of the Government and in private practice."

He said the new national emphasis on conservation "means we are turning our backs upon the practice of exploiting our national resources for temporary and immediate gain without regard for the future. It means that we have substituted a policy of husbanding our resources in a manner which will result in their broad and beneficial use in our generation, and yet will preserve their usefulness for future generations."

HEALTH INSURANCE INQUIRY TO BE SOUGHT

Wagner Says He Will Seek Investigation as Step Toward Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, said today he probably would take a step in the direction of health insurance legislation next week by asking for a Senate investigation of the whole subject.

Wagner expects opposition to his investigation resolution. Ever since the Social Security program revived talk of health insurance and socialized medicine, the American Medical Association has been voicing disapproval.

The social welfare group of the New Deal administration, however, is assembling ammunition to fire back. An interdepartmental committee already has made a detailed study of the costs of medical care and has reported, among other things, that "health and sickness services must be made more extensively available through measures that will lighten the burdens of sickness costs."

Dr. Isidore S. Falk, a member of the Social Security Board's research staff, is studying the national health problem with a view to helping the board decide whether it should recommend health insurance legislation. Falk was a member of the committee on costs of medical care which several years ago reported that poor people did not receive enough medical attention because of its cost.

Fight on Plan in Capital.

The fight over health insurance already has broken out in the capital, where the Home Owner's Loan Corporation is operating a group plan for Federal employes. The H O L C plan is under fire from both the American Medical Association and the District of Columbia Medical Society, and its legality is being tested in the courts.

Under the H O L C plan, any Federal employe may join. He pays $2.20 a month if single or $3.30 if married. The H O L C contributed $40,000 for a starter.

In return, the insured man and his family are entitled to clinical service, operations and hospital care when ill without further charge. A staff of seven surgeons and physicians care for the 6000 enrolled.

The District of Columbia Medical Society already has ousted one of the seven—the baby doctor—and charges of unethical practice have been lodged against another — the surgeon — in his home town medical society.

New Dealers point to the Capper Health Insurance bill, pending in the Senate, as a hint to the form a Federal program might take. Drafted by Abraham Epstein, head of the American Association for Social Security, the Capper bill would provide not only medical care for the sick but also cash benefits for those out of work because of sickness.

Both the benefits and the medical care would be supervised by the states. Employers, employes and the states would contribute to the cost. Farm and domestic labor and employes making more than $60 a week would be excluded.

While sick, employes would receive half-pay from the insurance fund. Payments would be limited to 15 weeks. The employe and his family would be entitled to free medical service and hospitalization, with the doctors to be paid from the fund on either a salary or fee basis.

New York Measure Failed.

Robert F. Wagner Jr., a member of the New York State Assembly and a son of the United States Senator, introduced a similar bill for that state recently. The bill died in committee, but the assembly approved a resolution calling for an investigation of health insurance in general.

Representative Treadway (Rep.), Massachusetts, recently introduced a health insurance bill based on the British Columbia plan, but he said today he put it in for a constituent and had no interest in its enactment. The Treadway bill would provide only medical care for the insured and would place the greater share of the cost on employes.

Social Security authorities said 15 State legislatures had health insurance bills before them this winter, but that no state so far had put a plan into effect.

ONE IN EVERY 12 PERSONS ON ILLINOIS RELIEF ROLLS

634,885 Got Aid in February; Largest Number Since Big Shift to W P A.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 2. — The 634,885 persons receiving relief in Illinois in February constituted the greatest number since the large-scale transfer to W P A employment was completed early in 1936, the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission's monthly bulletin says.

The total approximated one in every 12 persons in the 1930 population.

An increase of 13,300 from the January relief total was the smallest gain in three months, chiefly because of increased employment on W P A projects, which the commission says offset the large number of cases opened.

The part of the population receiving relief in February ranged from 1.3 per cent in Richland County to 22.8 per cent in Hardin County. Seventy-four counties showed increases in the number of home cases for the month, two no change and 26 decreases.

W P A workers and pension recipients are not included unless they received supplementary aid from general relief funds.

PROBATE COURT TO CHANGE 134-YEAR-OLD FILING SYSTEM

Adopts "Flat" Method of Preserving Estate Documents, Beginning Tomorrow.

The St. Louis Probate Court will put into practice beginning tomorrow a new method of filing documents relating to estates. Announcement of the change was made yesterday by Chief Clerk Frank E. Morris, who pointed out that the system, known as the "flat filing" plan, which has been used in the St. Louis Circuit Court the last eight years, will take the place of one in use in Probate Court since the court was established 134 years ago.

In all estates filed henceforth the present folding wrapper is to be eliminated and a file which permits documents to be filed flat and in chronological order substituted. For their better protection a photostatic copy of wills in new estates is to be placed in the file and the original document will be withdrawn from access by the public, a departure from former practice.

The adoption of the new method necessitates the withdrawal from the file of receipts showing payment to beneficiaries. These receipts will be placed in separate compartments as a safeguard from loss or abstraction. Papers placed in the new files will be so attached as to prevent their removal. In the future the court will not permit such records to be withdrawn from the court.

When you buy an "8" to save money IT'S NEWS!

The Standard Tudor

FOR YEARS, only the biggest, most costly cars had 8-cylinder engines. When the Ford V-8 engine was first introduced, people welcomed the finer performance that 8 cylinders provided, but kept their fingers crossed on economy. It somehow seemed as if 8 cylinders had to use more gasoline.

But the news spread that Ford V-8 cars were giving just as good gas mileage as cars with fewer cylinders that did not offer 8-cylinder advantages. Good design, not number of cylinders, determined economy. By last year, four million people had stepped up to the 85-horsepower V-8 class. Then the slightly smaller 60-horsepower Ford V-8 engine was introduced.

Reports soon rolled in from owners averaging 22 to 27 miles on a gallon of gasoline. More than any Ford car had ever given! A new standard of economy—a low price—and the smoothness of 8 cylinders! That was NEWS!

America bought 300,000 Ford V-8 "60s" the first year and is still buying. If you'd like to know why—if you'd like to save money all ways—see and drive the 1938 version of this thrifty, modern car. There's a dealer near you.

HEARING TOMORROW ON LACLEDE GAS RATE

Proposal to Put $300,000 Burden on Public Before State Utilities Board.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 2. — The Missouri Public Service Commission will begin hearings here Monday morning on the joint application of the City of St. Louis and the Laclede Gas Light Co., for approval of a proposed new general gas service rate schedule for the company, which virtually would nullify a 6 per cent reduction in domestic and commercial gas rates for St. Louis users, ordered by the commission in 1934.

The commission made no change in its arrangements to hold the hearings here, after considering letters from several gas users in St. Louis, and a resolution adopted at a small mass meeting held there last Wednesday night, urging transfer of the hearings from Jefferson City to St. Louis.

In recent years the commission has followed a fixed policy of holding all hearings concerning public utility rates and valuation in Jefferson City. It declined to depart from this policy in this instance, despite a campaign to force holding of the hearings in St. Louis.

The joint application of the city and company for approval of the proposed new rate schedule was filed last Feb. 11 as a part of an agreement between the company and Mayor Dickmann on tax measures, and for termination of litigation over the gas rates.

The rate proposal, if approved by the commission would wipe out nearly $300,000 of the six per cent reduction ordered by the Commission in 1934, estimated at about $330,000 a year. Conditional upon approval of this rate change by the Commission, the company agreed to drop a suit in Federal Court in St. Louis contesting validity of a city ordinance imposing a 5 per cent gross receipts franchise tax upon the company, this tax has been estimated at $307,500 to $350,000 a year.

If the Commission approves the new schedule, it would have the effect of transferring from the company to the gas consumers virtually all of the burden of the franchise tax that would be paid to the City Administration.

Under the agreement between the company and Mayor Dickmann, the company would accept a rate-making valuation of $39,000,000 fixed by the Commission for its property in 1934, would accept the 6½ per cent return fixed by the Commission as fair and reasonable on that valuation, and agree to refund to gas users approximately $1,000,000 representing the six per cent reduction, which has been impounded during litigation over the Commission's valuation and rate order of 1934.

NEGRO HEALTH WEEK OPENS TODAY; SPEECHES IN CHURCHES

Doctors to Speak From Pulpits to More Than 85 Groups in City and County.

The annual Greater St. Louis Negro Health Week campaign will begin today, with mobilization day programs at regular services of more than 85 Negro churches in the city and county. Physicians will speak from the pulpits.

Twenty-five medical, social and educational agencies are taking part. There will be speeches, health movies, recreational events, clinics and contests. Tuberculosis and venereal diseases will be emphasized.

A pre-school progress clinic, sponsored by play schools and mothers' clubs of East St. Louis in co-operation with the campaign, will open today with a mass meeting in the Bethel A. M. E. Church, Madison.

In a radio address last night, the Rev. Frank Madison Reid, chairman of the Health Week Committee and pastor of St. Paul's A. M. E. Church, said: "Doubtless the high death rate of the Negro race in America can be partially traced to the Negro's deplorable lack of interest in exploring the unpleasant realities of his own existence."

FORD HEARINGS DUE TO END WEDNESDAY OR THURSDAY

Only 4 or 5 More Defense Witnesses Will Be Called at Labor Board Inquiry.

The National Labor Relations Board hearing on charges of unfair labor practices against the Ford Motor Co. probably will be concluded Wednesday or Thursday, Trial Examiner Tilford E. Dudley said yesterday at the close of the eighty-third day of the inquiry.

Ford counsel said that no more than four or five additional witnesses would be called and that the company's case would be closed tomorrow. The company this far has called 625 witnesses since presentation of defense testimony began Jan. 25.

Dudley said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that rebuttal testimony for the N L R B and the Liberty Legion of America, intervener in the case, should require no more than three days. The examiner said he probably would allow a short adjournment for opposing counsel to prepare final arguments, which will not be a part of the official record.

Accused of Poisoning Husband.

NEOSHO, Mo., April 2. — Mrs. Ola Jordan, 37 years old, waived preliminary hearing today on a charge of attempting to kill her husband, Pat Jordan, 50, by placing poison in his coffee. Justice James G. Farrell bound her over for trial at the June term of Circuit Court. Jordan is recovering.

LUTHERAN BODIES IN GERMANY GIVE AID TO PLEBISCITE

One Group and Catholic Co-Bishop Indorse Union With Austria in April 10 Ballot.

CONFESSIONAL SYNOD PRAYER FOR TODAY

Niemoeller Organization Welcomes Union of Brethren With Statement of Thanksgiving.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 2.—A Catholic co-bishop and the German Lutheran Church indorsed today the union of Germany and Austria while ministers of the Protestant Confessional Synod issued a prayer of thanksgiving as a prelude to the April 10 plebiscite. The Confessional Synod is the organization of a majority of Lutherans formed in opposition to Nazi domination of the church.

Dr. Johannes Baptist Dietz, Catholic co-bishop for the Diocese of Fulda, made his indorsement in an appeal, issued in advance by D. N. B., the official news agency, which he will make tomorrow to the Catholics of the diocese.

He expressed the hope that "the creator of the new and irrevocable greater Germany (Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler) will combine the achievement of national unity with a generous religious appeasement and thereby make complete the joy of the new and greater German people." He then added:

"I call on you, therefore: share my confidence and in our election day write a hearty 'Ja' (Yes) on your ballot. At the same time accompany this day of the significant plebiscite with special prayers for the entire German people."

Lutheran Indorsement.

Lutheran bishops met and formulated an indorsement of the plebiscite in which emphasis was laid upon the necessity of continuing to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ in Germany.

"As brethren of the same faith," their declaration said, "we greet the Evangelical Church of the eastern march of Germany (Austria) now returned to its home.

"Next Sunday (April 10) we shall unite with all Germany in order to give expression to our joy at the newly created greater Germany and its Fuehrer.

"At the same time we testify to our determination to labor incessantly that Christ be preached to the German people. We call on our congregations to unite in prayer with us that God may bless the folk and the Fuehrer."

The ministers of the Confessional Synod, of which the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, now in a concentration camp, became the outstanding exponent, agreed upon a prayer to be read tomorrow in all their churches.

Prayer for Today.

The prayer follows:

"Lord God, Thou leadest our people through decisive days in its history.

"Thou permittest our German brethren in all Austria to return to the German reich (nation). Thou gavest our church the possibility of uniting with the Evangelical churches of the German eastern march which had to defend their faith through centuries of contest.

"Lord, we praise Thy name and implore Thee:

"Guide the Fuehrer and the people according to thy will . . . Teach us all to seek the best for our fatherland at all times, to live for our people in obedience to thyself and to make every decision required of us in such a manner that we may face Thee today and the day of judgment."

The Catholic diocesan weekly paper in Berlin carried the loyalty declaration of a week ago by Theodore Cardinal Innitzer of Vienna.

Half Million Hear Hitler Speak in Munich.

By the Associated Press.

MUNICH, Germany, April 2.—Half a million Bavarians cheered Adolf Hitler's appearance today in this city, birthplace of the Nazi movement.

Speaking in behalf of the April 10 plebiscite on the union of Germany and Austria, Hitler again summed up the achievements of his five years of power.

"The hopes of our enemies of 1918 have been annihilated," he declared. He received an ovation when he mentioned that it was Bavaria which furnished the soldiers who on March 22 "played a vital role in solving one of the greatest questions in German history, bloodlessly and with lightning rapidity."

The date to which he referred was the day German soldiers entered Austria.

Newspaper Says Germans in Argentina Are Voting in Plebiscite.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, April 2.—The anti-Fascist press in Buenos Aires opened a new attack today on German Nazi influence in Argentina in connection with the plebiscite April 10 on union of Germany and Austria.

The newspaper Critica asserted that the German Embassy and Nazi organizations were putting pressure on Germans and Austrians in Argentina to get them to take part in the plebiscite. The paper said Germans and Austrians were casting their plebiscite ballots in 21 German clubs in Buenos Aires and its suburbs, besides others in the interior of Argentina.

"The Nazi machine has transferred its terrorism to America," it said.

The German Embassy denied such reports, saying that "a vote here would not be possible, because Germans and Austrians in Argentina are in a foreign country."

Government officials had no comment on the situation, but Critica said the Government had assigned detectives to obtain all the details, including the "connections of the Nazi party with Argentine reactionary parties."

INJUNCTION SUIT DROPPED

Man Charged With Unauthorized Law Practice Dismisses Action.

A suit by John Berns, in business as the Berns Adjustment Agency, 3121 North Grand boulevard, for an injunction to restrain the St. Louis Bar Association from interfering with the business of the agency on the ground that the agency engaged in the unauthorized practice of law was dismissed by the plaintiff yesterday before Circuit Judge William S. Connor.

The Bar Association's injunction suit to prevent the concern from engaging in the practice of law is pending in Circuit Judge Eugene J. Sartorius' court.

INTERNATIONAL SHOE DEFENSE BEFORE NLRB

Witness Denies Any Company Officer Gave Advice in Forming Brotherhood.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HANNIBAL, Mo., April 2.—Details of the formation last July of the Western Brotherhood of Shoe and Rubber Workers, which the National Labor Relations Board charges was fostered by the company, were given today by Ezra Treaster, first witness presented by the Brotherhood in the hearing of N L R B charges of unfair labor practices against the International Shoe Co. In 16 days 80 witnesses have given testimony that covers 3750 pages of the official record.

Treaster, one of the 16 International Shoe Co. employes from the company's three plants here who did the preliminary organization work of the Brotherhood, traced the steps in answer to questions by Charles E. Rendlen, Brotherhood counsel. Like other witnesses he said he and other workers called on C. F. Nerlich, local superintendent, who told them that under the Wagner act "the company cannot advise you as to joining any unions. You can join any you please."

Before this conference, he said, a group of employes including himself, had called on Prosecuting Attorney Walter G. Stillwell with the view of employing him as counsel. Stillwell, he said, explained that because of his official post he could not accept, but advised them to talk with their superintendent, and to tell Nerlich "what you are going to do and what you are not going to do."

Earlier in his testimony Treaster told of belonging to the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, also an unaffiliated body, in 1933. He thought the local group had 1500 members who paid $1 initiation fee and 35 cents a week. He testified that after two months he "understood an officer of the union took $1500 and left town."

Treaster gave an explanation of the origin of the name Western Brotherhood.

"We wanted 'western' in it," he said "because we are in the West and also because we wanted to indicate we had no connection with the East. We liked 'brotherhood' because the railway brotherhoods are the largest independent unions."

Treaster, who was vice-president of the Brotherhood in its incipiency at the same time W. C. Broaddus, last witness introduced by the board, was president, denied that at any time, to his knowledge, had any company official or any one in a supervisory capacity, had any part in advising the organization.

UNION MINERS ACQUITTED

Accused of Putting Bells on Opponents at Harlan, Ky.

By the Associated Press.

HARLAN, Ky., April 2.—Union coal miners were acquitted by a Circuit Court jury today of charges they conspired to intimidate non-union miners and union members who broke the rules, by fastening bells around their necks.

The defendants included John Gross, president of the Verda local, United Mine Workers of America.

REPLY TO PENDERGAST BY WILLIAM HIRTH

Never Sought Boss' Aid, Says Farm Leader—Wouldn't Take It If Offered.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 2.—William Hirth, president of the Missouri Farmers' Association, who with Gov. Stark was accused of political ingratitude yesterday in a broadside from Thomas J. Pendergast, replied today that he had never asked for Pendergast's support and would spurn such support if he should ever again become a candidate and aid was offered.

"I have never had anything against Pendergast personally, but I have always bitterly opposed what he stands for in Missouri politics and always will," Hirth said. He added that the Pendergast statement had but one object—"to create the impression that I am against him because in times gone by I unsuccessfully solicited his support; and in proof he says that back in 1934 Ruby M. Hulen of Columbia asked him to support me for the United States Senate against Milligan."

"I don't profess to know what transpired between Pendergast and Hulen on the occasion mentioned," Hirth continued, "but if Hulen made the solicitation attributed to him he did so without my knowledge or approval." Hulen, a Columbia attorney, long has been attorney for the Farmers' Association and is a close friend of Hirth's. "It is possible that because of this friendship and upon his own initiative, Hulen sought to feel Pendergast out, but in this case he did so wholly upon his own responsibility," Hirth said.

Reviews 1934 Race.

Hirth reviewed his entry into the senatorial race in 1934, stating that he had a conference with James P. Aylward and criticised the candidacy of Senator Harry Truman for two reasons: "(1) It seemed grotesque to propose for the Senate a man whose experience in public life was limited to that of a County Court Judge and (2) because James A. Reed and Harry B. Hawes had been in the Senate from our two big cities for a number of years and I felt and suggested that the rural districts were entitled to one of the senatorships. I then suggested the availability of Mr. Hulen. I did not solicit the support of the Pendergast machine for Hulen, however, all I asked was that it keep hands off and permit Hulen and Milligan to fight it out themselves.

"Pendergast observed that he and I have never met personally, which is true, and since during recent years he has held the Democratic party of Missouri in the hollow of his hands, if I had ever desired his support, is it not reasonable to suppose that I would have approached him long ago, and sought to get into his good graces?" Hirth asked. "Again, as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor in 1936 I denounced the Pendergast machine from Iowa to Arkansas and therefore why has Pendergast waited until this late date to expose me?

Says Boss' Style Is Cramped.

"Pendergast reminds me that he is the same man now that he was in 1934, and he ought to know. I think he will admit that the fearless election commissioners appointed by Gov. Stark, and an equally fearless United States District Attorney have somewhat cramped his former style.

"As to the kind of an organization Pendergast represented in 1934, what more eloquent testimony could one desire in this respect than the poor devils who did the dirty work in those elections and who are now headed for Leavenworth?

"For the first time in years in last Tuesday's election the voters of Kansas City had the assurance of a secret ballot, and also they were free from the interference of hoodlums and thugs, and thus if the machine victory means that the people of Kansas City are satisfied to live under Pendergast's rule, this is their privilege and in consequence the big boss is entitled to feel highly elated."

Hirth concluded his statement, given to newspaper men here this afternoon, with the assertion that "the sinister meaning of Pendergast-ism is revealed in the battle which apparently is in the offing with reference to the Supreme Court."

ITALY TO GREET HITLER WITH 'GREATEST AERIAL DISPLAY'

300 Planes to Drop Live Bombs in Warlike Exhibition When Dictators Meet Again.

ROME, April 2.—Italy's air force intends to stage "the greatest aerial display ever seen" for the benefit of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler when he visits Il Duce in May. Officials said the exhibition would be "essentially warlike."

Three hundred land and sea planes, divided into 10 squadrons, will drop live bombs of various sizes along a stretch of Mediterranean coast near Rome. Then, flying in formation, they will attack assigned objects. All movements will be directed by radio from the ground. Inter-plane communication by radio will be used to co-ordinate the attack maneuvers.

Targets with the appearance of camouflaged warships, troops, ports and industrial zones will be constructed for the bombing show.

DOCTORS REPORT NEW TREATMENT FOR GOUT

Declare Vitamin B-1 Increases Pain at First but Shows Results in 25 Cases.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2. — Vitamin B-1 was announced here today as a new treatment for gout, one of man's oldest diseases, that has resisted all forms of treatment.

The vitamin used was the new form, tiny crystals manufactured artificially. These crystals are the purest known form of the vitamin.

The treatment was reported to the American Therapeutic Society by Dr. Martin G. Vorhaus and Dr. Milton L. Kramer of the Hospital for Joint Diseases, New York City.

The vitamin is given both by mouth and by hypodermic. It has been used on 25 cases. In all of them, the physicians said, the first result was to increase pain. But all 25 improved. Gout is a recurrent disease and Dr. Vorhaus said five years must pass before the results of a new treatment can be fully known. Of the 25 a dozen have been taking the vitamin for three years.

Reports Fewer Attacks.

Their relief from pains, the physicians reported, ranges from moderate to marked. There has been a definite falling off in the frequency of attacks.

The 25 continued to eat the same food. The only treatment, other than taking the vitamin, was to reduce eating for those who were overweight.

Gout goes back to prehistoric times. It first attacks the "Hallux," the joint of a big toe. Afterward there may be tenderness and swelling in other joints. Dr. Vorhaus said that gout is more common in this country than has been recognized; that gouty conditions have sometimes been mistaken for other troubles. The cause of gout is a disturbance of metabolism, that is, of the body's production of energy from food.

For nearly 2000 years, the standard treatment has been Colchicine, a drug which a Greek physician discovered in the meadow Saffron. Recently other treatments have been tried. But many cases of gout have remained "resistant."

Affect of Food on Brain.

A report that improper feeding reduces the development of a childs brain and mental powers was made by Dr. I. Newton Kugelmass of New York.

He studied standard intelligence quotient tests of 164 undernourished children and reported that:

1. Malnutrition retards mental growth;

2. Mental growth may be regained by proper nutrition;

3. But this recovery applies only up to the age of six and may not work very well after a child passes four.

Dr. Kugelmass also studied the effects of epilepsy on the minds of 220 epileptic children. He found that epilepsy caused mental deterioration when not treated, but that the children who were regularly treated for epilepsy suffered no loss in mental powers.

POLICE SAY MAN'S CONFESSION OF KILLING WOMAN IS FALSE

El Centro (Cal.) Prisoner Still Held in Connection With Attack on Girl, However.

By the Associated Press.

EL CENTRO, Cal., April 2. — San Diego police declared today Basil Coleman, 55 years old, said to have confessed and then denied the murder of Ruth Muir, Riverside Y. W. C. A. secretary, at La Jolla, Cal., two years ago, was not the man they sought, after they had questioned him.

Coleman was held by Sheriff R. W. Ware, however, for further investigation in connection with an attack on Magdalena Sagyna, 10-year-old school girl, which had led to his being taken in custody.

Sheriff Ware previously had said Coleman was "mentally unbalanced," alternately admitting and denying he had killed Miss Muir, who was vacationing at La Jolla.

HILDEBRAND, KNOTT MAKE BROWNS' 13TH VICTORY A SHUTOUT

WIND HELPS RICE HURDLER BEAT RECORD

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., April 2. — Tow-headed Fred Wolcott, Rice Institute's six-foot, two-inch sophomore, bettered the accepted world's 120-yard high hurdle record with a downwind burst of 13.9 seconds at the eleventh annual Texas Relays today.

The performance of the Southwest's Olympic hope, who, until last year, never had run the event, surpassed the 14-second record made by Bob Osgood of the University of Michigan.

Twenty minutes later Wolcott won the 100-yard dash in 9.8 to finish high point winner of the classic, in which seven meet records tumbled and one was equaled.

No points were awarded, but the University of Texas won six first places and tied for two others to pace the university division. Rice pulled up with four firsts; North Texas Teachers and Oklahoma Baptists, two; Texas Christian, Drake, Howard Payne of Brownwood, Tex., and Yankton College of Yankton, S. D., one each.

Outstanding in the relays running was the job turned in by North Texas Teachers' College quartet of Wayne and Blaine Rideout, the distance twins; Alvin Christman and Henry Morgan, in the college distance medley relay. The team raced to a 10:14.4 mark, eight and one-fifth seconds better than the mark set in 1936 by Archie San Romani and his Emporia (Kan.) Teachers.

Harold Cagle, Oklahoma Baptist, turned in a 47.8 seconds anchor for a 3:19.1 college mile relay victory that bettered the old mark of 3:21 set by Oklahoma Baptist and Abilene Christian College in 1935.

Jud Atchison of Texas and Bob Hubbard of Minnesota tied in the broad jump, leaping 24 feet 7¾ inches to shatter the old mark of 24 feet 6⅞ inches which had withstood the challenge of jumpers over the past decade.

Tigers Score 3 Runs Off Dizzy Dean in First And Beat Cards, 3 to 2

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LAKELAND, Fla., April 2.—Lakeland turned out in full force today to celebrate the return of the Detroit Tigers to this city for their 1939 training quarters—and the Tigers in turn celebrated by jumping on Dizzy Dean in the first inning for three hits and three runs, which was just enough to win the ball game, 3-2.

Frank Frisch again juggled his lineup around by sending Pepper Martin to third base and again using Don Padgett in center field.

Dizzy Dean had been advertised to pitch here for the past three training seasons, and until today had not appeared. Rain washed out both of his previous scheduled appearances. When he finally did stride out on the mound he was greeted with a rousing two-bagger by Frank Croucher, the Detroit shortstop. After Dixie Walker had flied out to Slaughter in deep right field, Charley Gehringer, the American League batting champion, cracked out a tremendous drive to right field that easily scored the initial run. Gehringer, in rounding second base, stumbled and fell, and crawled from the shortstop position to third base literally on his hands and knees. Had he remained upright the drive would easily have been a home run.

Greenberg Drives In Gehringer.

Hank Greenberg immediately followed by slicing into one of Dizzy's slow breaking curves for a center field single that scored Mr. Gehringer. York's walk and Gutteridge's error on Fox's drive to short were responsible for the third and final Detroit run.

The game was marred by the probable serious injury to Croucher. As he attempted to slide into second base, in the seventh inning, he caught his right leg in the sack and it was announced from the clubhouse that he had suffered a broken leg.

Vernon Kennedy, the opposing Detroit twirler, was almost invincible during his tenure of six innings on the mound. Only Stu Martin, in the first, and Mickey Owen, in the third, got to him for singles; Johnny Mize garnered a double to deep center in the fifth, and Gutteridge got a center field single in the sixth inning.

Dizzy Hits Stride.

When Dizzy Dean showed some of his old time form in the second inning by getting Kennedy on a short fly to left field, and striking out both Croucher and Walker, the Lakeland fans gave him a mighty cheer as he walked to the dugout.

Again in the third Dizzy was working easily and displaying his old time form, although it was noticeable that he was trying for the outside and inside corners, rather than trying to breeze the ball past the batters. In this inning he got both Gehringer and Greenberg on easy chances, and then wound up the inning by striking out Rudy York, who took a rousing smash at a third strike.

Lon Warneke entered the game in the fourth inning and immediately Fox greeted him with a single to center, which Lon followed with a walk to Laabs. Enos Slaughter took Ross' long fly in deep right field and by making a great throw to third base was able to head Pete Fox back to the second sack. Then a lightning double play, which was engineered by Don Gutteridge to Stu Martin over to Mize, took Warneke out of his trouble.

Warneke escaped the fifth inning, retiring the side in order. However, the sixth was an entirely different story. A base on balls to Hank Greenberg started all the trouble. York then smashed a shot at Pepper Martin, who dropped in front of the ball, picked it up and rifled a shot over to Stuart Martin for a force out. Then Pete Fox pumped out his second single. Chester Laabs was intentionally passed and it developed that this was a fine bit of strategy, for Ross popped to Stu Martin, and Cullenbine, who was sent up to hit for Kennedy, was an easy out to Mize, unassisted.

Mize Hits Home Run.

Roxie Lawson took over the pitching for the Tigers in the seventh and escaped the first term. In the eighth, however, our Gas Housers went after him. With two out, "Muscles" Medwick lashed a

WRAY'S COLUMN

They Said He'd Never Do.

SAN ANTONIO, April 2.

"NICE boy and can hit, but I doubt if he'll ever make a big league third baseman," said Rogers Hornsby two or three seasons ago, as he watched young Harlond Clift awkwardly handle hits toward the "hot" corner and then make bad hurry-up throws. "He just can't seem to get the knack."

But because he was such a sweet hitter and banged the fences with hard drives, Clift was allowed to hang on. At one time he played a few games at second base. Then there was talk of his going to the outfield.

But you'll never hear that again. Clift is not only a fixture at third base, he is likely to become the outstanding third-sacker of his day. Right now he holds more records for infield defense than any other active American League infielder. It is safe to predict that if he suffers no injury he will become the league's most formidable third baseman—and perhaps the most valuable player to his team.

Climbing Steadily.

WE GET THAT IDEA from his play during the past four years which shows Clift is not only the most improved player in the league, but is not through improving. This goes for both offensive and defensive play.

This year, reporting late, he has not yet struck his stride. But you only have to consult his record, to forecast a better 1938 season for him.

Here's Clift's batting record since he joined the majors four seasons ago:

	G.	R.	H.	TB.	RBI.	Pct.
1934—	147	104	149	241	56	.260
1935—	137	101	140	207	69	.295
1936—	152	145	174	296	73	.302
1937—	155	103	175	312	118	.306

That shows a steady progression upwards year by year, not only in batting average, but in runs driven in. Being only 25 years old, he certainly can be expected to improve on his youthful achievements.

He Leads All Infielders.

IT IS ON DEFENSE that the improvement in Clift's play means more than anything else for it was in this department that he was doubted.

Clift began to get the knack of third basing in 1936, but it was last year that he really found himself and proved himself tops in defense.

As stated, he achieved four

Wind-blown World Record Finish in Hurdle Event

INDIANS, HELD TO 5 HITS, LOSE TO GIANTS, 3-0

By the Associated Press.

LAKE CHARLES, La., April 2.—The New York Giants shut out the Cleveland Indians, 3 to 0, today behind the combined five-hit pitching of Hal Schumacher and Dick Coffman.

Schumacher allowed three hits for five innings and Coffman gave up two the rest of the way. Danning was the batting hero with three singles.

Bees Wallop Dodgers.

BRADENTON, Fla., April 2.—The Boston Bees climbed aboard Brooklyn pitching in three big innings today to wallop the Dodgers, 15 to 1.

While Jim Turner blanked the Brooklyns with three hits for six innings, and Gabbo Gabler gave them only two in the last three frames, the Bees tagged Fred Frankhouse for two runs in the second, nine in the sixth and finished up with four more off Waite Hoyt in the eighth.

Yankees Win, 12-1.

NEW ORLEANS, April 2.—Paced by Tommy Henrich's slugging, the New York Yankees belted the New Orleans Southern Association Pelicans, 12 to 1, today in an exhibition game. Henrich singled, hit a homer and doubled.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 2.—Behind the three-hit pitching of Al Williams and Bud Thomas, the Philadelphia Athletics today shut out Atlanta, of the Southern Association, 2 to 0. All three singles were made off Williams in the first five innings. Thomas yielded only two bases on balls in the four innings he worked.

McCormick Stars.

SARASOTA, Fla., April 2.—Frank McCormick, Cincinnati's six-foot-four rookie first baseman, was the hero today as the Reds beat the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 4, in a 12-inning duel.

McCormick, who batted in three runs with his three singles in six times up, slapped out the Texas leaguer in the twelfth that scored Riggs from second after the latter doubled. The Reds outhit the Sox, 16 to 9.

TAFT, Cal., April 2.—The Pittsburgh Pirates of the National League won their eighth consecutive exhibition game today, a 6 to 3 triumph over a Taft independent nine.

Ed Brandt, big Pirate portsider, fanned six in five innings before being relieved by Mace Brown.

ORLANDO, Fla., April 2.—Washington broke its losing streak in the Grapefruit League today by beating Minneapolis, 18 to 8.

Pitchers on both sides fared badly, each team banging out 19 hits. The Senators started with Wes Farrell, then retired him after five innings in which the Millers chalked up seven runs and 12 hits. Minneapolis made its only other run in the last frame.

Washington freely pounded all three Minneapolis pitchers, Baker, Poindexter and Fletcher.

Chicago's Chance of Getting Louis-Schmeling Bout Is Not Affected by Low-Record Gate

By W. J. McGoogan.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports' Staff.

CHICAGO, April 2. — Joe Louis, who successfully defended his world's heavyweight boxing championship for the third time against Harry Thomas last night, turned his thoughts today toward his forthcoming bout with Max Schmeling, June 22.

Louis planned to go to Stevensville, Mich., and will rest there for the remainder of April, after which he plans to go to Lafayetteville, N. Y., to begin preliminary work for his meeting with Schmeling.

Promoter Mike Jacobs, just before departing for New York, said that he would not name the site for the Louis-Schmeling bout until some time after Schmeling's bout with Steve Dudas in Germany, April 16.

Jacobs said the poor attendance at Friday's contest, the smallest crowd to see a world's heavyweight championship bout in modern times, would not affect his decision as to the place to hold the big show.

"It's altogether a different thing," he said. "You can take the Louis-Schmeling match to any city in the country and draw a big crowd. There were only 10,743 here last night but I believe the bout helped the game in this city."

Chicago Has the Edge.

Boxing interests in four cities are still working hard to get the next title fight. They are Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit and New York. Chicago still seems to have the inside track.

Jacobs has two other championship fights on his summer schedule, one for the welterweight crown between Barney Ross and Henry Armstrong to be held in New York, May 26, and another between Armstrong and Lew Ambers, July 26, for the lightweight championship. He also has a New York date for Sept. 14, which may be between the winner of the Louis-Schmeling bout and Max Baer.

Thomas, of course, is out of any championship consideration after being stopped by Schmeling and knocked out by Louis, but Jacobs still thinks well of him as a card for the showing he made against Louis. Mike offered Nate Lewis, manager of Thomas, a match with Tony Galento, battling Jersey bartender.

Thomas Escaped Punishment.

Thomas showed few affects of his battering by Louis today. He had a discolored left eye but that was all.

He said the blow which he got behind the ear in the third round was really the convincer. He said his vision after that was blurry and he remembered little of the remainder of the fight.

Harry was a little more cheered when a final check of the gate and the radio receipts raised his fee to a total of $5206.14. Louis got a total of $16,659.65.

The total gross receipts were $49,734.94 and the net $38,529.12.

Nate Lewis is to suffer no penalty for stepping into the ring before the bell rang ending the third round. The commission apparently feels that the way things turned out Nate's action was worth just a laugh and it is better to forget it.

Referee the Loser.

Referee Dave Miller probably will have a hard time getting another important assignment, though, because the commission may feel that he lost his head in a tough spot.

Ostend Wins Carolina Cup

By the Associated Press.

CAMDEN, S. C., April 2.—Ostend, owned by Mrs. Frank M. Gould of New York, with Henry Frost of Middleburg, Va., up won the $500 Carolina Cup steeplechase, three miles over timber, today with time of 6.05 3-5.

40,000 FANS SEE OPENING COAST GAMES

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2. — Nearly 40,000 baseball fans helped usher in the 1938 Pacific Coast League season today in games that gave three home town teams victories.

The largest turnout, 15,000, saw a revamped Los Angeles team nose out the new Hollywood club (last year's San Francisco Missions), 6 to 5, with a ninth-inning rally.

At San Francisco, some 12,000 rooters watched the Seals chalk up a 6-to-4 victory over Portland.

San Diego, winner of the 1937 championship playoff, got off to a losing start as Seattle punched two hurlers for 13 blows and a 4-to-1 victory. The crowd was 5000.

Right Fielder Nick Cullop slugged the St. Louis Cardinal-owned Sacramento Senators into the victory column when his ninth-inning home run defeated Oakland, 6 to 4. Oakland had tied the count in its half of the last session. Cullop's four-ply wallop, off southpaw Ken Sheehan pitching in a relief role, scored a runner ahead. About 7000 fans watched the game.

SEVEN HITS FOR TOLEDO; HEATH DRIVES IN ONE RUN

Street's Team Checked Until Seventh Inning; McQuinn Gets 2 Safeties, One Batting In a Score.

By John E. Wray.
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 2.—Those galloping Brownies, leaders in the Grapefruit League, made it 13 straight victories when they won their third consecutive game from the Toledo Mudhens today, 3 to 0.

The contest was a battle of pitchers for six innings, Oral Hildebrand and Jack Knott holding the Mudhens safe throughout, while the Browns could do little with the slants of that baffling veteran of the minor leagues, Right-Hander Fred Johnson. Johnson remained on the hill for six innings and during that time only five scattered hits were made off his delivery and the Browns did not get a man as far as third base.

In the seventh Vic Sorrell, former Detroit Tiger, went to the hill and it was at his expense that all the Brown runs were made. Errors mixed in with three base hits and a couple of sacrifices accounted for the tallies.

Three Hits Off Hildebrand.

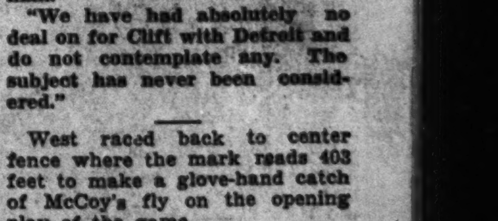
Hildebrand opened on the hill for the Browns and was in his best form of this season. The enemy hitters could not get the range and three hits represented the sum total of their attack. Knott, who pitched the last five innings, scattered the four hits made off his delivery and the enemy threatened but once. That was in the fifth, his first on the hill, when Greenberg's infield hit got away from Jack for a single and Johnson doubled. A double play saved the day.

The Brown's heavy hitters had an indifferent day. Bell and Clift failed to hit the ball safely during the afternoon while McQuinn was the only Brownie to get more than one safety. A high chilly wind, which blew directly against the batters, accounted for the weaker hitting.

In the seventh inning, West, first up, hit a grounder to Gelbert, who has been playing a great defensive game for the Mudhens. This time, however, the ball went between his legs, his first bobble of the series, and West was safe at first. Heffner sacrificed and McQuinn smacked a clean single to center to score the first run of the game. Knott then sacrificed and Sorrell walked Mills. Heath, who made three hits in three times up yesterday, came through with another single to score McQuinn with the second run of the game. Kress fanned to end the rally.

The Browns kept up the attack in the eighth, scoring a run on Wilburn's fumble of Clift's grounder, West's single which sent Clift to third and Heffner's long fly.

The attendance was 546; the temperature, 40.



THE fourth game of the series with Toledo will be played tomorrow with Kimberlin, Weaver and Van Atta pitching for the Browns. Johnny Johnson will start for Toledo.

President Don Barnes of the Browns tonight denied all knowledge of any deal for Harlond Clift ,the team's star third-baseman.

"We have had absolutely no deal on for Clift with Detroit and do not contemplate any. The subject has never been considered."

West raced back to center fence where the mark reads 403 feet to make a glove-hand catch of McCoy's fly on the opening play of the game.

First baseman Archie of Toledo reached over the wire fence and made a one-han ed catch of Sullivan's foul that halted a Brown rally in the third.

Three umpires handled the game for the first time this season—Grieves at plate, Rommell at first and Genshlea at third.

Trapshoot Today.

The Creve Couer Gun Club will hold its monthly trapshoot at Upper Creve Couer Lake this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. The competition calls for 100 targets.

KEANEY AND HODGE REACH DISTRICT INDOOR TENNIS FINAL

WEINSTOCK IS ELIMINATED IN 3-SET MATCH

Frances Jacobson and Lois Keene in Women's Singles Final—Mrs. Thompson Loses Hard Battle.

By Davison Obear

Frank Keaney, former St. Louis University player, reached the final round of the St. Louis district indoor tennis championship by defeating Robert Weinstock, defending champion, at the Washington University field house last night. In the other semifinal contest Karl Hodge won from Herbert Markwort.

Keaney defeated Weinstock in three sets, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, while Hodge won from Markwort, 6-0, 6-2. The match between Keaney and Weinstock was their seventh in the past six years. All of the matches have been won by Keaney.

Weinstock had reached the semifinal by beating Billy Bascom, 7-5, 6-4, in a quarterfinal match yesterday afternoon.

Miss Jacobson Wins.

Frances Jacobson won her way into the final round of the women's singles by defeating Jane Dierberger, 15-year-old Roosevelt High School girl, 6-0, 6-3, in one of the semifinals. Miss Dierberger won only six points in the opening set but in the second played much better tennis, winning a total of 22 points.

After Miss Jacobson won the first set and took four games in the second Miss Dierberger staged a brilliant rally to win three straight games. The defending champion, however, won the next two games, taking the set 6-3.

In the other women's singles semifinal Lois Keene defeated Mrs. Bert Thompson, 6-0, 7-9, 6-4. As the score indicates the match was hard fought after the epining set. Both players drove the ball hard as a contrast to the slower game played in some of the earlier matches in the tournament.

After winning the first set, Miss Keene took the first five games in the second set for 11 straight. Mrs. Thompson, realizing that defeat was near, put up a brilliant fight to win the sixth game and then next four, bringing the set to deuce. Miss Keene took the lead at 6 to 5 and 7 to 6 in games and although having match point each time, failed to win. Mrs. Thompson won the set, 9-7.

Both players held the lead in the third and final set but after the score was evened at 4-all Miss Keene captured the next two games, taking the set and match.

Finals Tomorrow.

H. J. Hopkins, referee, announced that the final rounds in men's and women's singles and the doubles will be played tomorrow night. Miss Jacobson will oppose Miss Keene, at 7:30 o'clock with Hodge, former district indoor title-holder, playing Keaney an hour later. The men's doubles final at 9:30 o'clock will complete the program.

Chicago Rugby Team Here Today, Minus Clint Frank

Chicago's Great Northern rugby team, featuring a half dozen former Yale University players, today will oppose a St. Louis team in one of a series of intercity matches. The game will be played at the drill grounds in Forest Park, starting at 2:30 o'clock.

Clint Frank, Yale football star, who was reported coming with the Chicago team, was not one of the party that checked in at a St. Louis hotel last night. His brother, a member of the squad, said that Clint preferred to remain with his family at Evanston, Ill., taking advantage of the brief Easter vacation.

The local team, known as the St. Louis Medics, is composed of Washington University Medical School students and former members of the Ramblers club of the St. Louis Rugby Union.

Other players on the Chicago team are Capt. Bernard Davison, who played at London University, and Forward Alex Crawford, who starred with the Glasgow Academicals. Six other former Yale players, Forwards James McCudden, Cornelius Watson and Henry Gardner and Backs Robert Childs, Walter Kimball and Henry Bouscaren are in the lineup.

WRAY'S COLUMN

records last year—and that puts him in a class by himself among third basemen, at least in official statistics. Here are the third base records that the Browns' star established:

Most chances handled during a season—603.

Most assists, one season—405.

Most double plays, one season—50.

Most assists, one game (tie)—nine.

For a player who "never would make a big league third sacker," that's an amazing reversal of all forecasts.

AND BECAUSE this performance of last year crowns a steady improvement in previous seasons, there is good reason to believe that in defense as in hitting, 1938 will see Clift still advancing.

Further improvement unquestionably would make him the standout third sacker of the day. That also would mean that his value has jumped from a nominal original investment to something like $75,000, perhaps more. That's a tenfold increase in four years.

Clift came up to the Browns after only two years of minor league service on Browns' farms. His first season he served at Wichita Falls and Longview, Tex. The following year he played at San Antonio, from which point he was brought up for a trial with the Browns. And here he has remained, growing in baseball value every minute of his stay.

He is the leading clean-up hitter of the club and with Beau Bell will probably, as last year, make one of the league's most dangerous combinations at driving in runs. If McQuinn and Kress should come through with anything like their minor league hitting averages of last season, what a punch that Brownie infield would have! McQuinn hit .331 and Kress .334.

Only One Fight for a Job.

EXCEPT FOR that battle royal between 19 pitchers for nine or 10 jobs, there is only one real contest for a regular position on the Browns' team, at this time. That is at second base, where Roy John Hughes of the 1937 Cleveland club, started out well.

Before he has the position copper-riveted, he must meet the competition of the cat-like Don Heffner, last year with the Yankees. Heffner is by no means out of the running and Manager Street is certain to give him his chance to make good.

Before Clift's arrival Heffner played third base and he surprised with the speed and agility of his play. His hitting last year in some 60 games with the Yanks was .249, but he was in and out of the lineup and that's disconcerting to any batting eye.

With Kress hammering the ball like the "most valuable shortstop" on anybody's team, the second base primary requirement may be defense. The battle for this job probably will be along this line. If the rivals are about equal, then batting will decide the issue.

Heffner's regular position is second base—and that may help him.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., April 2.

THE Cardinals' spring training season is drawing to a close. They will break camp Tuesday and head northward and thereafter the problem will be to keep the athletes in condition, rather than to prepare the squad for the championship race. In fact if it were not for the gate receipts, the barn-storming part of the program would be eliminated. The manager always heaves a sigh of relief if he can take his athletes through an itinerary that includes towns like New Iberia, Pine Bluff and Caruthersville, without any of the important members of the squad suffering injuries.

The gradual approach to the colder North may have one advantage—the less abrupt change to a colder climate, but undoubtedly if you would ask all the managers and eliminate the gate receipts angle, they would vote for a direct trip from training camp to the major league cities.

It is not out of order at this time to guess what the Cardinals are going to have as they go to the new baseball war. Can they win the pennant? Yes. Will they win the pennant? Yes. IF and be sure those two letters are upper case.

IN that respect, the outlook for the Redbirds has not changed materially since they opened training. There have been disappointments and there have been pleasant surprises. But the team definitely has possibilities and in a league so well balanced as the National, is good enough to give St. Louis another piece of a world series next October.

On the other hand the Cardinals still have possibilities in the other direction, and if things happen to go bad, the club can find it difficult to stay in the first division.

The pitching looks better than it did during the winter. It was disappointing to have Paul Dean fail in his attempt to come back. And the experiment of trying to teach Ray Harrell control in the Winter Haven School seems to have been a floperoo. Harrell still has as much stuff—curves and speed—as any pitcher in the majors today. At the school he learned to throw 24 out of 30 pitches through a string-outlined strike zone. But when he tried his stuff in exhibition games he still didn't measure up. He was removed from one game and Max Lanier was sent in to protect a Cardinal lead over the Red Sox.

TO offset the Harrell and Paul Dean breaks, the club apparently picked up a valuable man in the veteran Guy Bush. Everybody thought he was about through, but he has shown more than flashes of his old-time speed, he has worked hard to make the grade and has done excellent work. Pitching against the Yankees and Tigers, he hurled nine full innings before his delivery was nicked for a hit. Bush certainly will be an asset and one that didn't appear in the picture during the winter. Frisch had hoped only that Bush would be able to lend a hand as a relief pitcher. He certainly has shown that he can do that, and if he continues to display effectiveness, he will be able to pitch an occasional game.

Bill McGee, who won 17 and lost seven at Columbus, hasn't been as effective in spring games as was expected, but there is nothing wrong with his arm and he certainly will be given every chance against National League opposition. And to offset what may be merely his tardiness in rounding to his best form, Max Macon and Max Lanier, two young southpaws, have displayed impressive skill. Macon's arm has been a trifle stiff since his impressive performance in one of the Yankee games, but he is not perturbed about it. He says he has had the same experience every spring. At this stage of training it certainly seems highly possible that the Cardinals, in Macon, Lanier and Weiland, will have the best three-man left-handed staff in the league. And, according to Frisch's latest, Roy Henshaw, a fourth left-hander, will be retained for relief duty.

PREDICTING what Dizzy Dean will do this year is a blind-fold expedition out on a limb. Jerome Herman has been handicapped by a severe cold, from which a sinus infection developed, and has not regained his strength. He says his arm bothers him at times, but that he is confident he can work all soreness out of his muscles. Nor must the importance of Dean be overlooked. No one man can win a pennant. But the loss of a Dizzy Dean, or another mediocre performance from this potential ace of the staff, easily could impair seriously the club's pennant chances.

Last year Dizzy won only 13, but a higher return must be expected from him this season. It is not unreasonable to expect at least 25 victories from such a brilliant pitcher. Weiland won 15 in 1937 and should be as good this year. Warneke can be expected to approximate his 18 triumphs of 1937. Johnson won a dozen and should tie or beat that. Conceding Dean 25 that would make a total of 70 victories, not an unreasonable expectation from the quartet.

If Macon, Lanier, Bush, McGee, and a possible ninth pitcher could account for only 30 more decisions, that would make a total of 100 and would mean a pennant. Of course some of the winners of last year may falter. And there's the big IF. The new members of the staff must take up that potential slack. IF they do—pennant. IF they don't—just another season and possibly second division.

WATER POLO TITLE WON BY NORTHWESTERN

By Reno Hahn

Northwestern University's water polo team, Big Ten conference champion added the National A. A. U. junior title to its string, defeating Texas A. and M., 11-0, last night at Washington University's Wilson Pool.

About 300 spectators watched the championship game.

The St. Louis Juniors won third place in the tournament by trouncing the Downtown Y. M. C. A. team, 9-0. John Brouk scored three times, William Armstrong and George Jennings, twice each and Charles Flachmann and Warren Bauer, once each.

The Texas Aggies, undefeated in the Southwestern Conference for 10 years, was expected to give the Wildcats a battle, but the contest was easy sailing for Northwestern from the first seconds when Harold Dash scored from the opening scrimmage.

Dash was the leading scorer in the game, throwing the ball past the goalie six times.

Tight Defense.

After that first quick goal by Dash, the Aggies fought stubbornly but were unable to get by the excellent defense of the Wildcats, particularly the splendid work in goal by George Kunz, co-captain. The Wildcats scored three more goals before the half ended.

In the second half, Northwestern controlled the ball most of the time and easily scored seven more goals.

The game was played under hard ball water polo rules in which the ball must be kept above the surface of the water.

The St. Louis teams in the tourney were not in the same class with the finalists. In preliminary games, Northwestern eliminated Y. M. H. A., 19-1 and the Texas Aggies won from the Downtown Y. M. C. A. team, 9-0, and the St. Louis Juniors, 4-2, in the afternoon game. The Juniors gave the Aggies a good game, holding them to one goal in the second half. John Brouk scored in each period for the St. Louis team.

In the first consolation game, the St. Louis Juniors defeated the Y. M. H. A. squad, 10-1. Fred Armstrong scored three goals, Charles Flachmann, John Brouk and Harry Kroeger, two each, and George Jennings, one. Leon Kolker scored for Y. M. H. A.

WINNER'S TIME AFFECTED BY WATER IN BOAT

Two Americans, Coxswain Hunter and Keppel, No. 6, Appear in Losers' Shell for Last Time.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 2. — In water better suited to submarines Oxford's gigantic crew rowed to a two-length victory over Cambridge in their 90th annual boat race before a half million spectators today.

Rowing in the teeth of a westerly wind with its shell half full of water, Oxford came from behind in the third mile, staved off the Light Blue's counter-challenge and then pulled away to a decisive triumph in the last quarter-mile.

The water-logged shell slowed the winners and they finished the four-mile, 374-yard "s-shaped" course in 19 minutes, 30 seconds. The record, established by Cambridge in 1934, is 18 minutes, three seconds.

Two Americans, Thomas Harrison Hunter of Cambridge, Mass., and Harvard, the coxswain, and Gordon Keppel of Montrose, N. Y., the No. 6, were members of the beaten crew.

Third Victory Since 1913.

It was the first time since 1913 that Oxford had won two races in a row and the Dark Blues' third victory since that time. Oxford, whose 1937 triumph interrupted a string of 13 straight Cambridge victories, now has won 42 races in the long series that began in 1829. Cambridge has won 47 and one, in 1877, was a dead heat.

There were three distinct phases in the race. The first came at the start where Oxford, averaging 180 pounds to the man, rode out the waves, grabbed a quarter-length lead in the first 50 yards and boosted it by another half length in the first mile and three-quarters.

The second phase came after the two mile mark when the crews swung around a horseshoe bend full into the wind. Here Cambridge's luck in winning the toss and gaining the Surrey, and more protected, side of the Thames, began to tell. The Light Blues were on the inside where the water was smoother and the lane shorter. They drew level at two and a quarter miles and then nosed ahead.

Victors Maintain Pace.

Oxford's victorious spurt from here to the finish line marked the third and concluding phase. The Dark Blues slowly caught up and then went to the front at 2¾ miles. No matter how Cambridge increased its beat, the powerful Oxonians met it and boosted its advantage.

Oxford's victory was a tough break for the two Americans, Hunter and Keppel, who appeared in the Cambridge shell for the last time. In a few months Hunter will return to Harvard to complete his studies while Keppel will finish at Columbia. Room-mates at Cambridge, both are studying medicine.

The friendship of these two was the talk of the race. Keppel, built like a football tackle, constantly is with the smiling Hunter, whose legs are paralyzed.

TIGERS SCORE THREE RUNS OFF DIZZY DEAN AND BEAT CARDS, 3-2

single to center, whereupon Mize took range on the left field concrete wall and blasted one that cleared the 340-foot sign and went on into Main street.

Bill McGee, the Columbus recruit right-hander, appeared on the slab for the Cards in the eighth. Bill allowed Croucher to single to center. Then Walker laid down a bunt, and Croucher, thinking the play would be at second, slid into the bag. He evidently hooked his right leg underneath him. Players from both teams rushed out on the field to assist the Detroit recruit. He was carried from the field and it was later announced that he had suffered a broken leg. Mark Christman, a St. Louis boy, ran for Croucher and advanced on Gehringer's smash through short. Greenberg walked. Then McGee went to work. He struck out York on three pitched balls, the Detroit slugger taking a mighty smash at the third strike, a high hard one on the inside, and made Fox pop out to Mize. In the eighth McGee got both Laabs and Ross on strikes and Gutteridge tossed out Lawson.

Birds Threaten in Ninth.

The Redbirds nearly succeeded in tying up the ball game in the ninth when Owen got his second single. Frenchy Bordagaray ran for Owen and immediately swiped second, Bucher, hitting for McGee, fanned, and Gutteridge walked. With Stu Martin at bat, Bordagaray and Gutteridge atempted a double steal and had the bases stolen, but Stu Martin tipped a third strike foul. After a couple of balls had been pitched they again tried a double steal, and Frenchy was nipped at third. A moment later Stu Martin was on first by virtue of a base on balls. The ball game ended when Slaughter tapped an easy roller down to Ross.

Detroit has taken both games of the Grapefruit League series with the Cardinals.

The Gas Housers have won six and lost nine in the training camp exhibition games against major leaguers.

DAKOTA RELAYS WILL NOT BE HELD IN MAY

By the Associated Press.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., April 2. — The Dakota Relays, a two-day track and field carnival which has been held for 15 successive seasons, will not be presented for the 16th time until May 5 and 6 of 1939.

Postponement of the event for a year was decided on and announced today by General Chairman James C. Mann and his relays board because the high school athletic field, under reconstruction, will not be in a satisfactory condition in time. The meet was scheduled for May 6 and 7.

BROOKLYN CLUB WINS EASTERN SOCCER CROWN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Playing before a capacity crowd of 7000 at Celtic Park, Brooklyn's St. Mary Celtic soccer team today defeated New York Americans, 3 to 0, in the second and final game of the Eastern final of the National Challenge Cup Competition. Celtics, who lost to the Americans a week ago, 2-1, thus won the series on total goals and the right to meet Sparta of Chicago in the national final.

The home team played the more aggressive game and outclassed their New York opponents throughout the match. For a while during the second period the Americans broke away and kept play in Celtic territory, even gaining three "corners" all of which were cleared. The outstanding players for the Celtics were the three McEwan brothers (Willie, Dave and John) De Rostaing and Sneddon. Chesney did fine work in goal for the Americans notwithstanding the outcome of the game.

Willie McEwan was credited with two of the tallies and Aitken with one. Sneddon made several good tries.

The Celtics started off with a rush as soon as Referee Donaghy blew the whistle and within five minutes, Chuck Steele, and Dave and Willie McEwan had shots at the goal. At 11 minutes, William McEwan receiving the ball from Sneddon, did get it right into the corner of the net.

Chesney made two splendid saves when W. and J. McEwan each sent in a fast one, but there was no further scoring in the first period.

After the interval, the game, which had lagged a bit toward half time, livened up considerably but it took 19 minutes of hard play before another goal was scored, and then it again went to the credit of Willie McEwan. Dave McEwan had sent in a fast shot and in stopping it, Chesney lost his balance and fell, with Willie McEwan right there to put the ball into the net.

Othen made a beautiful save when Sasso sent in a hard fast drive. At 29 minutes, Jimmie Aitken who substituted for Steele in the second period, got hold of a loose ball and sent a long shot right into the cage.

St. Mary's Celtics will meet Sparta F. C. of Chicago, western champions, in the first of two final matches for the national championship at Chicago on April 10. The return game will be played at Starlight Park on April 17.

Line-up and summary:

SUN EGRET WINS EASILY IN ROWE MEMORIAL AT BOWI

PARMELEE T. RUSHES UP TO TAKE SECOND

Compton's Derby Candidate Is Only Three-Year-Old in Race—Clocks in Third Place.

By the Associated Press.

BOWIE, Md., April 2.—Sun Egret, wiry, nervous three-year-old chestnut colt with eyes trained on the Kentucky Derby, splashed through Southern Maryland mud and mist today to a length and a half victory in the $5000 Rowe Memorial handicap.

The odds-on favorite, A. C. Compton's colt had speed to spare in the stretch and won going away over C. R. Fleischmann's Parmelee T., which closed with a rush to be a half length ahead of Clocks, owned by L. E. Ogle. Sun Egret's time for the six furlongs was 1:13 4-5 over a slow track, only a fifth of a second slower than the winning time for Mucho Gusto in the 1937 running.

The winner paid $3.70, $2.90 and $2.40.

Twelve thousand fans braved intermittent rains for the second day of the meeting here and set up a mighty roar of approval as Sun Egret lived up to the record he made at Santa Anita earlier this year.

Compton's colt, with Jockey A. Shellhamer up, broke fourth but moved into third at the quarter pole. He was second, a neck back of Clocks at the half-way mark, and was a half length ahead entering the stretch. His ability as a sprinter showed in the stretch drive, when he lengthened the margin at the finish to a length and a half.

The mud - spattered victory poured $4250 into Compton's pockets and brought Sun Egret's earnings for the year to $25,525.

Today's victory was his fifth of the year in seven starts. He won four in a row at Santa Anita before running third to Stagehand and Dauber in the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby, Feb. 22.

Felix Spatola's Wise Prince, a good mudder and highly regarded for his victory at Tropical Park recently, was second choice in the mutuels but came in fourth.

Mrs. F. C. Dunn's Royal Tread won the sixth race to become the first long-shot of the meeting. The five-year-old gelding paid $25.10, $10.30 and $7.40.

GIANTS TO TRAIN AT BATON ROUGE AGAIN FOR 1939 CAMPAIGN

BATON ROUGE, Fla., April 2.—Dick Bartell, star shortstop, developed a slight charley horse in his left leg yesterday just before the New York Giants broke camp here and started a roundabout trip back to New York. Bartell is the second Giant casualty, as Outfielder Jimmy Ripple has a badly inflamed left elbow.

Before leaving Manager Bill Terry announced that the Giants not only will return here to train next year but will bring their Jersey City farm club along.

Burgess Whitehead, regular second baseman, who missed the entire training period while recovering from an appendectomy, joined the club, but appeared to be in poor condition and may not start practice for some time.

Terry announced that Ed Remorenko, outfielder conditionally purchased from Baltimore, was being returned to the Orioles and that Don Brennan, 34-year-old pitcher, will be given his unconditional release if he is unwilling to accept a job with Jersey City.

TROPICAL HANDICAP TO DRAW FINE FIELD

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., April 2.—The $10,000 Tropical Handicap, closing day feature at the Florida course, April 9, is shaping up as a real race. With Mrs. Payne Whitney's Brush Hook a doubtful starter, Kirby Ramsey's Mucho Gusto and the Millsdale Stable's Infantry loom as the probable choices. Infantry jumped back into prominence by running six furlongs in 1:10 3-5 Thursday. Townsend B. Martin's Court Scandal, 1937 Flamingo Stakes winner, also is training nicely for the event.

Too Cold for Baseball.

A baseball game between the Washington U. 1938 team and the Alumni, scheduled for Liggett Field yesterday afternoon, was called off because of the cold weather.

$2 mutuels paid: Tiger—$4.20 win, $4.80 place, $3.70 show. Silver Sarah—$59.50 place, $11 show. Gov. Chandler—$2.80 show.

Tiger, away fast and well handled, moved into the lead soon after the start, opened up a big gap quickly and saving ground throughout, could not be headed. Silver Sarah lacked early speed, worked her way up rapidly on outside in last three furlongs and finished with a rush. Gov. Chandler, in close quarters going to the first turn, was taken up sharply, saved ground while working his way up and finished strongly. Elooto was hard hustled for the entire trip. Dolly Val weakened under extreme pressure. Feng followed in closest pursuit of the leaders for three-quarters, then gave way. Don Moss quit afir showing brief early speed.

TIGER VICTOR IN DERBY AT HOT SPRINGS

By the Associated Press.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., April 2.—Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' highly-rated Tiger won today's third renewal of the $5000-added Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn Park. Silver Sarah was second and Gov. Chandler third.

The winner's time for the mile and an eighth distance was 1:50 4-5, equalling that of Eastport in last year's derby. Eleven three-year-olds went to the post.

SWEET PATRICE WINS FOURTH STRAIGHT RACE

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., April 2.—Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Sweet Patrice, acknowledged Queen of the two-year-old fillies in training here, raced to her fourth straight victory in the Viscaya Purse, chief juvenile event of the Tropical Park meeting which had it's next-to-last Saturday program this afternoon. The machine-like brown daughter of Halcyon, under 119 pounds, gave weight and a thorough trouncing to eight others while scoring by three lengths under Eddie Arcaro.

Townsend B. Martin's Throttle Wide, the second choice, was second by four lengths, while W. H. Gallagher's Kate Smith easily defeated Handiboy for the show position.

About 10,000 fans saw Sweet Patrice, a filly that apparently thrives on racing, complete the half mile trip in :47 3-5. She was a $3.30 for two choice.

At this early stage of her career, Sweet Patrice has been sent postward 11 times. She has won five races, her last four at this track, where she remains unbeaten. She has been worse than second on only one occasion, and then she finished third to keep her consistent record intact.

Today Sweet Patrice was off flying. She quickly drew clear of the field as they sailed around the first turn, with Throttle Wide holding down second position by a wide margin over Kate Smith. The running order of the first five horses never changed. Sweet Patrice lengthened her advantage after cutting the last corner.

By Berry Moore.

Excavations have begun for the erection of the $2,000,000 Manhasset apartment group on the north side of Eager road, west of Brentwood boulevard (North and South road) and for a six-story fireproof building at 823 Locust street for the Singer Sewing Machine Co.

These projects are focusing attention as the largest of their types launched in the local building field, since 1928.

A first deed of trust for $1,600,000 has been executed by the Manhasset Village Corporation, the builders, in favor of the New York Life Insurance Co., which is financing the apartment project. The

KIRKWOOD SECTION PLACED ON MARKET

Development at Woodlawn and Gill Is Launched With Complete Improvements.

Woodlawn, a new development at Woodlawn and Gill avenues, Kirkwood, has been placed on the market, with complete surface and municipal improvements. It was laid out from plans and under the supervision of Harland Bartholemew, and Associates. N. S. Wood, Inc., realtors, and the Francis-Perry-Ruth Real Estate Co. are handling the new development.

There are approximately 50 acres in the development, which has a frontage on the west side of Woodlawn avenue of 2600 feet and on Gill avenue of 1240 feet. The subdivision is a block north of Adams avenue, which constitutes a continuation of Lockwood boulevard. The Kirkwood-Ferguson street car line extends through the tract, which formerly comprised the major part of the golf course of the old Woodlawn Country Club, with a total of 81 acres.

The 50 acres embraced in the new development was purchased recently by a syndicate composed of J. D. Perry Francis, Neal S. Wood, J. Lionberger Davis, G. H. Mize, Thomas McPheeters, William F. Randolph, Mrs. Kenneth G. Carpenter, J. Porter Henry, Alan W. Wood and Collins Thompson. Situated only a block north of Lockwood boulevard, and two blocks east of Denny road, the tract forms one of the most eligible sites in this part of St. Louis County for a high-class residential development.

Installed at a large outlay, the improvements include macadam streets, sewer, water and gas mains. The lots range in size from 75 to 135 front feet.

Westrick place, Delshire place, and Starling drive, with entrances on Gill avenue, complete an attractive layout.

The syndicate's purchase did not include the old Woodlawn Country Club house, standing on a five-acre site on the opposite side of Gill avenue, and six tennis courts occupying virtually adjoining ground.

AMERICAN CAR TAKES 11-OFFICE SPACE LEASE

Equipment Co. to Occupy Quarters at 705 Olive Under 10-Year Lease.

The American Car & Foundry Co. has taken a 10-year lease on 11 rooms in the 705 Olive Building (formerly known as the Central National Bank Building), at Seventh and Olive sterets, for its general offices. It will occupy the space in connection with its subsidiary, the J. G. Brill Co., which specializes in the manufacture of buses for municipalities.

The new offices are in the northeast wing on the Seventh street side of the building. Offices of the two concerns were formerly located in a building at 1500 South Vandeventer avenue.

Possession of the new quarters has already been taken.

J. H. Farish Knapp & Co., managers of the building, negotiated the lease.

The building, 14 stories in height, is owned by the Southern Real Estate & Financial Co. Erected in the early nineties, it was for a time the tallest office structure in the city. As recalled by Gerald B. O'Reilly, a former president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, an observatory, with roof garden, equipped by the builders at a large outlay, was originally an attractive feature of the structure, which was first known as the Union Trust Building. A 25-cent admission fee was charged.

TO TELL OF AID GIVEN SMALL HOME BUILDERS IN MEMPHIS

J. Frazier Smith to Address Members of Construction Industries Committee Monday.

Members of the Construction Industries Committee of the Chamber of Commerce will meet tomorrow (Monday) noon to hear J. Frazer Smith, Memphis architect, discuss the plans and operations of the successful Memphis Small House Construction Bureau.

The meeting will be held at 12:15 o'clock in the Assembly Room of Hotel Statler. George Aurien, vice-chairman of the committee, will preside.

Interest in stimulating the building of new homes in St. Louis was the reason for the forming of the Constructon Industries Committee. At a recent meeting Henry O. Whiteside, director of the research bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, outlined the trend among renters as indicated by a recent questionnaire. At tomorrow's meeting, Whiteside will make a further report based on the findings in the questionnaire and will point out to the members of the building trade present the fields in which new developments seem possible.

Smith and his associates in Memphis have developed a unique service to persons interested in building small homes. The service includes not only the designing and a breakdown of the costs, but actual assistance to the prospective owner in having the new home financed.

WOMAN ACQUIRES BUILDING AT 3150-56 EASTON AVENUE

Which will you get when you build or buy your new home? Wet, unseasoned lumber will bring the headaches of cracked walls, squeaky, uneven floors, sticky doors and windows.
Goodfellow Dri-Tested Lumber will bring the satisfaction and happiness of rigid stability throughout the years. That's why it pays and Pays and PAYS to buy Goodfellow Lumber backed by this written guarantee.

Dower Eddy prefers to give the public "happiness" in this home at 6616 Itaska, so he built it with Pre-Shrunk Goodfellow Lumber — the kind that's backed by a written guarantee.

HOUSING CONVENTION DELEGATES ARE NAMED

Benedict Farrar to Head St. Louis Contingent to Architects' Meeting in New Orleans.

Benedict Farrar, president of the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, will head the official delegation of the chapter to the Institute's seventieth convention at New Orleans April 19 to 22. He is a member of the firm of Study & Farrar, architects, Delegates from the institute's 70 chapters throughout the country will participate in the sessions, at which plans to speed the national housing program will be made.

Other St. Louis delegates are: Angelo B. M. Corrubia, vice-president of the chapter; Arthur E. Koelle, secretary; William B. Ittner Jr., treasurer; F. Ray Leimkuehler, chairman of the chapter committee on public information; Ewald Froese. Alternates include Lawrence Hill, Joseph Murphy, and Paul Valenti. Henry F. Hoit of Kansas City will report on architectural and building conditions in the central states district, for which he is director and which includes the St. Louis, Iowa, Kansas, Kansas City, Minnesota, Nebraska, Oklahoma and St. Paul chapters.

Low-Cost Housing.

Low-cost housing is one of the chief problems to be dealt with by the convention. Architects feel that a new approach must be devised and concessions made by all branches of the industry in order that costs may be reduced and other barriers to housing development eliminated. How to provide 2,000,000 dwelling units costing from $2000 to $3000 per unit is a difficulty which cannot be met by present methods, it is pointed out.

Groups of architects in many centers are attempting to serve the small house owner by preparing typical plans to meet varying family requirements. The use of such plans, it is said, would naturally tend toward a certain standardization, with the resulting economies which standardization might make possible.

Not only has the architectural profession given much thought to the possible advantages of standardization, but it is constantly investigating new methods of construction which will tend to lower building costs. Likewise, manufacturers of building materials are experimenting along many lines, with the same ends in view.

Wide Range of Problems.

A wide range of other architectural and building problems will be taken up at the New Orleans meeting, at which Charles D. Maginnis of Boston, president of the institute, will deliver his annual address, The themes will embrace city planning, allied arts, public works, building, education, structural service, public information, preservation of historic buildings, registration laws, civic design, foreign relations, construction industry relations, the professional organization of architects, and the development of the national capital. Honors will be awarded for outstanding achievement in the arts and officers will be elected.

PASADENA MYSTERY HOUSE TO BE OPEN TO PUBLIC TODAY

No dishpans, garbage pails or burned out fuses will find their way into the "mystery house" which will be opened for public inspection today at 4523 Parkdale avenue, in Pasadena Hills, according to its sponsors, the Carl G. Stifel Realty Co.

The automatic electric equipment incorporated in the house is designed to take over disagreeable duties by washing dishes without a dishpan or dish rag, disposing of garbage without an incinerator or garbage pail and maintaining the latest degree of efficiency in electrical equipment without the use of fuses.

As described by Stifel, the home is built around a gadgetless kitchen which is typical of the tendency to relieve housewives of confusion and detail. The various units of equipment, although interesting in themselves, are but a part of a scientifically planned workshop.

This new "mystery house" culminates a series of surprising and successful practices inaugurated by the Stifel company in the Pasadena Hills development of the 133-acre tract.

GEORGE E. TAFT JOINS DIMMITT-RICKHOFF-BAYER

The Dimmitt-Rickhoff-Bayer Real Estate Co. has added George E. Taft to its organization. He has been active in the local real estate field for a number of years, specializing in West End and county properties, in restricted sections.

This lease was made for the One Thousand Olive Corporation, represented by Oreon E. & R. G. Scott.

The Dimmitt-Rickhoff-Bayer Real Estate Co. reports having effected in March 32 sales totaling $225,500. A noteworthy transaction involved the sale of a new four-family apartment in University City. A cross-section of the sale shows a steady tendency by the buyer to go into the county for all types of property.

CARPET CONCERN COMPLETES ADDITION TO BUILDING

The Henry C. Hartenbach Carpet Co. has completed a one and a half story reinforced concrete and masonary addition to its present plant at Grand boulevard and Clark avenue, occupying a lot 80 by 136 feet.

JUDGE TO RULE TOMORROW ON C. & O. RAIL FIGHT

Decision Due on Whether Guaranty Trust May Vote Chesapeake Stock as Trustee.

YOUNG PINS HOPES ON RISE IN STOCKS

Rivals for Control of Van Sweringen Rail System Both Favor Dissolution of Holding Company.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Robert R. Young, youthful financier fighting with powerful banking interests for control of the $2,000,000,000 Van Sweringen rail system, faces an important court battle Monday.

United States District Judge Albert C. Coxe is to decide then whether to issue a preliminary injunction restraining the Guaranty Trust from voting the Chesapeake stock it holds as trustee at a special stockholders meeting, called for Monday by Young's opponents but scheduled to be adjourned by mutual consent to April 8. The next regular C. & O. meeting, at which the management issue may be fought out, is April 19.

A summons and complaint against Guaranty Trust in the New York Supreme Court, brought by Fidelity Investment Association of Wheeling, W. Va., holder of Alleghany bonds, and which sets forth substantially the same allegations as Young's action, has not yet been answered by the Guaranty Trust.

Under the terms of a curious indenture devised by the Van Sweringen brothers before they died, today's market rise could free Young and his associates of their major difficulties, if it continued.

Under the indenture, 71 per cent of the stock of Chesapeake Corporation, middle Van Sweringen holding company, is pledged as collateral for three issues of bonds of Alleghany Corporation, top company in the system. Young now exercises indubitable control of Alleghany Corporation, which owns the Chesapeake stock.

However, the Guaranty Trust holds the Chesapeake bloc of shares as trustee under an indenture which apparently gives the Guaranty Trust the right to vote the stock if its appraised value decreased below 150 per cent of the value of the bonds.

Young's attorneys declare that at the Feb. 1 quarterly appraisal, the value of the largest of the three units—810,500 shares of Chesapeake stock—was slightly below the 150 per cent, but that it rose above that figure before the end of the period of grace March 1. Young then applied for proxies to vote the shares, but his plea was denied.

Prize in the fight is the controlling stock in the profitable Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, which Chesapeake Corporation owns. Both Young and the Guaranty Trust say they favor dissolution of Chesapeake Corporation, and distribution of the C. & O. stock, only railroad major stock with increased dividends last year.

Young alleged in his complaint, which gained him a temporary restraining order against Guaranty Trust, that the bank, for financial reasons connected with J. P. Morgan & Co., General Motors and Morgan Stanley & Co., wished to get control of the C. & O. management.

Improper Motives Denied.

Guaranty, denying through its chairman, W. C. Potter, any improper motives, acknowledges it wishes to elect directors who would hold balance of power in Chesapeake Corporation and would thus be in a position to change the C. & O. management.

The Van Sweringen system has brought little but headaches to those who have had a hand in its control.

George A. Ball of Muncie, Ind., fruit jar maker, has managed to show paper profits in his G. & F. Ball Charitable Foundation, but few others involved have had final net profits to show.

Last April, during a boom market, Ball sold the control to Young, Frank F. Kolbe, and Allan P. Kirby for $4,000,000 cash and $2,375,000 in notes. Control could still revert to Ball in event of a default.

Last spring C. & O. sold for $59 a share, Alleghany preferred "A" $30 warrants brought $47 and Chesapeake Corporation $81. Today's close for the same three $26.12, $7.50 and $31.

The February high for Chesapeake Corporation was $46.25 on the twenty-eighth, but as other stock also secures the Alleghany bonds, it is not possible for an outsider to estimate exactly the market rise necessary to refloat Young.

CONGRESSMEN VIEW BIGGEST U. S. BOMBER

Newly Accepted Plane Third Larger Than "Flying Fortresses."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Members of Congress inspected the Army's biggest bombing plane today. Louis B. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, told them it was "incomparably the greatest fighting plane ever built."

The bomber, a third larger than the "flying fortresses" which flew to South America in February, was built at the Boeing plant at Seattle. It has just been accepted by the Army after tests lasting six months.

Members of congressional committees were the only civilians permitted aboard by a military guard which was thrown about the bomber on its arrival here.

They were told it could fly to Hawaii and back without refueling.

NORTHWESTERN RAILROAD HEARING DELAY DENIED

Stockholders' Committee Wanted Time to Consider Merger With Milwaukee Line.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The Interstate Commerce Commission denied today a plea for a six-month postponement of hearings in the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad reorganization proceedings.

A committee representing Chicago & Northwestern common stockholders wanted the delay to give further time for study of the feasibility of merging the railroad with the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad.

The same committee, which also represents preferred stockholders of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, recently sought unsuccessfully to postpone hearings in connection with the reorganization of that railroad.

Chicago & Northwestern hearings will be resumed April 19.

WISCONSIN TO BACK KANSAS ON CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT

Brief Will Ask Supreme Court to Sustain Ruling Legislature Legally Ratified It.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., April 2.—Attorney-General O. S. Loomis announced today he would file a brief with the United States Supreme Court asking it to sustain a recent ruling of the Kansas Supreme Court holding that the Kansas Legislature legally ratified the child labor amendment to the Constitution.

"The State of Wisconsin, whose Legislature ratified the child labor amendment in 1925, is vitally interested in the outcome of this case, along with the other 27 states which have ratified the amendment," he said.

ARMED POLICE HELD READY FOR TRINIDAD SUGAR STRIKE

700 Volunteers Provided With Rifle and Machine Guns in Expectation of Walkout Today.

By the Associated Press.

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, April 2.—Seven hundred volunteer policemen armed with rifles and machine guns were held in readiness tonight following the threat of 30,000 sugar employes to strike tomorrow.

Manufacturers and labor unions failed to reach an agreement over union demands for increased wages.

The sugar union is affiliated with oil and transport unions. Labor leaders said they would call a general strike if non-union employes were hired to break the prospective sugar walkout. The island of Trinidad is a British possession.

GERMANY ORDERS CITIZENS ABROAD TO REGISTER

New Law Requiring Nationals to Report to Consulates Effective This Month.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2. — German Embassy officials said today that Germany's new law requiring all German citizens abroad to register at consulates would become effective this month.

No special date was set, but Embassy officials said German consuls in this country already were busy accepting the registration forms from Germans and Austrians residing here.

The registration requirement was described as a return to German policy of closely tabulating its citizens in foreign countries. After the war, officials said, the requirement stipulating that Germans must register or lose their citizenship was allowed to lapse.

LONDON, April 2.—The German Embassy announced today that registration would be required for all German "and former Austrian" nationals staying in Great Britain more than three months.

ILLINOIS TO KEEP CHECK ON ALL SYPHILIS CASES

State Follow-Up Planned for Victims Who Abandon Treatment Prematurely.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 2. — The State Public Health Department announced today a plan to keep under observation and treatment all known cases of syphilis until the victims are dismissed as non-carriers of the disease.

Dr. J. J. McShane, chief epidemiologist of the department, said every Illinois physician treating a person for syphilis would be asked to report monthly on whether the patient is still under treatment.

Patients who quit treatment before dismissed by physicians as non-infective, he said, would be visited by representatives of the department for completion of the treatment, Dr. McShane said. He added at least 72 treatments at weekly intervals over an 18-month period were required for a cure.

Dr. McShane said arrangements had been made to treat every person who needs it, regardless of ability to pay.

To date this year, the department has recorded 5336 cases of syphilis.

JOBLESS IN U. S. EXCEED TOTAL IN 23 OTHER LANDS

A. F. L. Figure of 19,973,000 Exceeds by Half Million All in Chief Foreign Nations.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, April 2.—Figures made public today by the International Labor Office of the League of Nations disclosed an increase of unemployment in the United States greater than the combined total for the other 23 nations reporting to the bureau.

Figures supplied the labor office by the American Federation of Labor placed unemployment in the United States for the first quarter of 1938 at 10,973,000, compared with 9,267,600 for the last quarter of 1937 and 9,241,000 for the first quarter of 1937.

The 1,705,400 increase for the period just ended was 500,000 greater than for the 23 other nations. The German increase was second with 550,000 and Great Britain was third with 300,000. Australia was the only country to report a decrease, the number of unemployed dropping from 42,000 to 37,500.

Aside from the United States, the countries leading in unemployment are: Great Britain, 1,807,517; Germany, 1,051,745; France, 444,376; The Netherlands, 439,278; Austria, 302,236, and Japan, 281,212.

AN ARCTIC ADVENTURE THAT MISSED FAME

Last of Crew Thinks People Forgot Northeast Passage Trip Because All Survived.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2. — Harry Stuhr, possibly the only remaining member of the crew that discovered the Arctic Northeast passage, has concluded that it missed fame because the performance was too nearly perfect.

Stuhr, 73-year-old Norwegian, was a member of the expedition headed by Baron Nils Adolf Erik Nordenskjold, which crossed from the Scandinavian peninsula to the Bering Sea in 1878, 1879 and 1880.

"We were provisioned for five years," he said, "and we had no sickness or accidents. That's probably why so few people know much about our expedition. Because we all came through safely, people forgot us, even if we were the first men through those waters."

Stuhr sailed out of Tromsoe, Norway, in the summer of 1878 as a 14-year-old cabin boy on the schooner Vega. After being frozen in the ice two winters, the Vega, with its crew of 43 intact, emerged into the Bering Sea in the spring of 1880 and made its way to Japan, where the news of the first passage was relayed to the world.

The object accomplished was the blazing of a Northern sea route from Europe to the shores of Asia by navigating the Eastern Hemisphere through the Arctic Ocean.

There were Southern sea routes —the long one involving the circumnavigation of Africa and the other requiring passage through the Suez Canal, but Northern European countries had been interested in the possibilities of a Northern route since the sixteenth century.

In 1903, the late Roald Amundsen negotiated another route, the Northwest passage, from Europe to Asiatic waters by crossing the Western Hemisphere. This involved the navigation of ice-choked, unexplored straits far to the north of Canada.

AUTOPSY TO SEEK CAUSE OF GIANT PANDA'S DEATH

Only Other Such Animal in Captivity Being Given Special Care at Chicago Zoo.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 2. — Keepers and officials of Chicago's Brookfield Zoo took extra precautions today to safeguard the health of Mei-Mei, the only giant panda in captivity since the death yesterday of her companion, Su-lin.

Robert Bean, assistant director, said Mei-Mei would be kept in her own quarters until the cause of Su-lin's death was determined. The two had not been together for six weeks. On cool days, the crowds that flock to watch the bear-like animal's funny antics must be content with one hour's exhibition morning and afternoon, Bean said. On warmer days, Mei-Mei will be out two hours, morning and afternoon.

A post mortem to determine the cause of Su-lin's death has been arranged for Monday. Bean said a throat specialist found no evidenc ethat inflammation from an oak twig that lodged temporarily in Su-lin's throat killed her.

Su-lin had been at the Zoo 14 months; Mei-Mei arrived Feb. 18. Both were captured in Tibet by Mrs. William H. Harkness Jr. of New York, an explorer's widow.

'REORGANIZATION ACT OF 1398'

WASHINGTON, April 2.—A typographical error in the Government reorganization bill prompted Representative Taber (Rep.), New York, to declare yesterday that the truth had come out at last.

Taber spotted a line referring to the bill as the "Reorganization Act of 1398." "It carries us back to the feudal system," he shouted. "It's the one time the God's honest truth was told about the bill."

'BOSS' NASH CALLS FOR HONEST ELECTION

Both Sides Make Charges of Irregularities in Preparations for Primary.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 2.—Patrick A. Nash, chairman of the Cook County Democratic Central Committee, issued a statement tonight demanding "an honest primary election" here April 12.

"The poll lists issued by the Board of Election Commissioners are so full of glaring inaccuracies," the statement said, "that this organization has determined to file a petition addressed to the election authorities incorporating all of the facts revealed by our investigation and demanding:

"1. That accurate poll lists be published.

"2. That a search be made of the registration boxes of each precinct polling place to show whether the names omitted from the printed registration lists are actually in the boxes.

"3. That a search be made of the master cards in the Board of Election Commissioners' offices to show whether the names of registered voters omitted from the poll lists are on file."

The Chicago election machinery was attacked from both ends as the primary campaign neared an end. The Kelly forces charged the poll lists had been so "shockingly manhandled" as to endanger the right of franchise. On the other side County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, virtual chief of the county's election machinery, and his supporters, Gov. Horner and State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, had special investigators searching for false registrations.

Judge Jarecki was dropped by the Kelly-Nash organization when its slate was drawn up, and Circuit Judge John Prystalski given his place on the ticket.

Election officials have issued approximately 18,000 suspect notices as the result of the Courtney-Jarecki investigation and because of the affidavits to erase that have been received.

ICKES ACTS TO PROTECT NAVY OIL, HELIUM RESERVES

Orders Land Office to Reject Private Leases Within Mile of Designated Areas.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Secretary of the Interior Ickes directed the General Land Office today to reject applications for private oil and gas leases on lands within one mile of a naval petroleum or a military or naval helium reserve.

The order was part of Ickes' program to reserve these deposits for public ownership. The one-mile limit was imposed as a margin of protection against draining of the oil resources by private wells outside the reservation.

Stringent regulations heretofore applied only to Naval Petroleum Reserve No. 1, Elk Hills, Cal., and Reserve No. 3, Teapot Dome, Wyo.

The present instructions include also the Buena Vista petroleum reserve in California, an undetermined acreage of potential petroleum resources near Point Barrow, Ala., and the military and naval helium preservation in Utah. The reserves approximate 70,000 acres.

LEADERS ARE SHAKEN UP IN A.B.C. TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 2.—Frank Yerse of Cleveland topped a high-scoring afternoon in the American Bowling Congress today by scoring 725 in the singles and taking second place.

Standings in both doubles and singles were altered. Myrton Pritchard and William Ahnert only entries from Dundee, Ill., took second in the two-man event with a count of 1298.

The Dundee team's big count was bad news for Dominick Logest and Thomas Coyne of New Brunswick, N. J. Logest and Coyne had just posted a score of 1290 and advanced to fifth place when the Pritchard-Ahnert figures came along and shoved them down out of the big five.

Fred Krueger of Cleveland, with 688, went into a triple tie for eighth in the individual standings.

Jeremiah Plappert of Detroit accumulated 1948 pins in the all-events, putting himself in runner-up position. He tumbled 714 maples last night for his team, the Jefferson Club recreation of Detroit. He could not duplicate that tonight, but continued evenly with 624 in the two-man and 610 in the singles.

Jerome Julius of the Soutier Tavern team was the lone St. Louis bowler to shoot into the high spots. Julius pounded out 607 in the singles on games of 187-209-211. Chris Reinolds of East St. Louis made the grade on 603 in the solo competition on 186-201-216. Lowell Dennis and John Holden of Union Electric of Illinois five-man team stopped on the border line of pay dirt with 1128 in the doubles.

BASKETBALL COACHES OPEN RULES CONFAB

CHICAGO, April 2.—The National Association of Basketball Coaches will take the floor tomorrow for its annual three-day discourse on better basketball and how to achieve it.

Whether changes comparable to the last season's elimination of the center jump were in store for 1938-39 was a matter of conjecture today. However, it was agreed anything could happen when the reports and reviews of recent regulations come up.

Some, including most of the Big Ten Conference coaches, were well satisfied with the results of the experiment on the center jump. Others continued to frown on it, along with the three second rule within the foul circle. Still others were ready with fresh ideas.

Only the usual preliminaries were was expected to lead to at least one recommendation to the rules committee. High school coaches scheduled for tomorrow night, but on Monday general rules discussion will have a voice in proceedings this year, the first time in the Association's history.

After a banquet Monday night, Tuesday's program calls for action on recommendations by the Rules Committee and election of officers. George Edwards, University of Missouri coach is the present head.

On hand to observe the latest trend of basketball thought will be Dr. James Naismith of the University of Kansas, originator of the game.

SALESMEN
to earn $75
or more per week

The Bendix Home Laundry offers an unusual opportunity to ambitious salesmen who desire to get out of the rut and into a field practically free from competition. Attractive permanent position for the right men.

See Mr. Hunter, Monday morning from 9 to 11 a. m. (No phone calls.) Bendix Store, 1124 Locust.

MEN—STEADY WORK

We will hire men at once who live in St. Louis and vicinity, train them thoroughly at our factory branch at our expense, and employ them immediately in permanent positions, ful time.

Married men preferred, as these positions are responsible and we require no investment or deposit—but you must be reputable and able to learn this work as taught. This is steady, profitable sales work, but our method of putting the prospect into the market for our invention is so unusual that you must be trained in it. While learning, new men must be satisfied on earnings of $35 to $45 per week, but later can increase this substantially.

Previous experience not important because our method is so unusual, but applicants must be willing to work hard and study to qualify for the higher incomes. Apply Monday from 9:15 a. m. to 1:15 p. m. at 512 Paul Brown Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., 818 Olive street.

FREIGHT RATES ON COAL FOUND NOT UNREASONABLE

Interstate Commerce Commission, However, Orders Some Limitations in Area North of Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The Interstate Commerce Commission found to be not unreasonable today freight rates on bituminous coal from mines in Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Verginia to destinations in Cook County, Illinois, north of Chicago. The commission found, however, that the rates were unduly prejudicial in some instances and ordered the following limitations:

Rates to Evanston must not exceed rates to Weber and Rogers Park; rates to Wilmette, Winnetka and Glenview must not be more than 10 cents higher than rates to destinations in the Chicago switching district, and rates to Hubbard Woods, Glenco and Northfield must not be more than 20 cents above the rates to the Chicago switching district.

The complaint was brought by the village of Winnetka and 13 coal dealers, who alleged the rates were unreasonable and unduly preferential to competing dealers in the Chicago switching district and at Morton Grove and Niles City. The complainants asked for reparations, but the commission said they failed to show they were entitled to any damages.

BREWERS COMMEND OFFICIALS FOR ENFORCING LIQUOR LAWS

Directors of Missouri Association Send Copies of Resolution to Stark and Others.

Copies of a resolution adopted by the directors of the Missouri Brewers' Association, commending State and city officials for enforcement of liquor laws, were sent yesterday to Gov. Stark, State Liquor Superintendent Thomas F. Fitzgerald, Excise Commissioner Lawrence McDaniel and President Albert Bond Lambert of the Police Board.

"We believe that with Missouri officials leading in the demand for law observance, complaints soon will be reduced to a minimum," the resolution says after referring particularly to the activity of Attorney-General Roy McKittrick and Fitzgerald.

"The citizens of this country are right in demanding law observance of producers and distributors of beer and liquor and a fearless enforcement of the laws by constituted authorities.

"It was those citizens who, through their legal representatives, freed us from the farcical shackles of prohibition and it is they who know that non-observance and lack of enforcement of the laws may deprive them of their liberties, and the industry of its now respectable status which was restored in 1933. The course being taken by Missouri officials not only has our commendation but assurance of our support."

STORE WORKER WHO ADMITTED EMBEZZLING $8600 GIVES BOND

Oscar Charles Ferry of Famous-Barr Released on $5000 Bail Returnable April 12.

Oscar Charles Ferry, young architect's assistant at Famous-Barr Co. department store, who has admitted embezzling $8676 from the company by writing fake pay vouchers, was released yesterday on $5000 bond returnable on April 12 before Judge James W. Griffin in the Court of Criminal Correction.

Ferry was arrested Friday night at his home, 7500 Liberty street, University City, after he had given a detailed account of his peculations to store executives. An investigation showed he had signed and cashed 147 vouchers in the names of employes who were dead or not working or by using fictitious names.

Employed by the store for three years at $25 a week, Ferry, who is twice-married and has a child by his divorced first wife, told police he began his thefts last September. In the summer he had been doing much overtime work, bossing from 50 to 100 workmen in the construction of the store's new escalators, and as a result of this extra work received pay checks amounting to $60 and $70 weekly. When the work was over, he said, he found it hard to return to his regular salary.

WALLACE SETS SUGAR BEET PRICE TO BE PAID GROWERS

$5 Per Net Short Ton From Processors Called "Fair and Reasonable."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Secretary Wallace proclaimed today that $ per net short ton was a "fair and reasonable" price growers should receive from processors this year for sugar beets of average sugar content.

The rate was set up under provisions of the new sugar control law which provides for the distribution of about $48,000,000 annually in benefit payments to sugar cane and beet growers who comply with quota, labor, production, soil and farm practice regulations established by the Secretary.

Officials, estimating that benefit payments would average about $1.90 a ton, said the $5 price should give growers around $6.90 per short ton for 1938-grown sugar beets. The ruling will not disturb price agreements already made between processors and growers for 1938.

AERO HYDRAULIC SHOCK absorbers, of the type on Chrysler cars, operate on a principle similar to that of the recoil mechanism of heavy pieces of artillery. They are of the same type used in the landing gear of large transport airplanes. This shock absorber consists of a piston working in a closed cylinder. The piston is attached by a rodt road to the car frame and the lower end of the cylinder to the wheel connection. A control valve permits adaptation of the shock absorber to the particular car on which it is installed.

Triennial Meeting Of Women's Clubs In Kansas City

ST. LOUIS club women will take an active part in the triennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held in Kansas City from May 10 to 17. Club leaders, delegates and club members from every State in the Union, the District of Columbia, Alaska and other territorial possessions and from various foreign countries will attend the meeting of the General Federation, which consists of a membership of more than 2,000,000.

Mrs. H. H. Muchall, president of the Missouri Federation, will extend greetings from Missouri, and Gov. Lloyd C. Stark and Bryce B. Smith, Mayor of Kansas City, will also welcome the visitors in behalf of Missouri and Kansas City, at the first session, to be known as Missouri night. A program will be given under the leadership of Mrs. Ruth Kelso Renfrow, president of the Eighth District, after which a reception will be held in honor of Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation. At the formal opening Mrs. Edward J. Heiligers, St. Louis, State chairman of music, will sing a song, "Joy," written for and dedicated to the singer, by Lillian Craig Coffman, St. Louis. The lyrics of another song, "Falling Star," were written by Florida Watts Smyth, poet-laureate of Missouri, and the music was composed by the late Mabel Harris Tarlton of St. Louis. Mrs. Heiligers will be accompanied by Mrs. Irl Johnson, music chairman for the Eighth District. Under Mrs. Heiligers' direction, a chorus of 300 club women from all sections of Missouri will sing the "Hallelujah Chorus" at the closing assembly.

Election of officers will be of special interest at the convention, with five offices to be filled. Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, Portland, Ore., who has served on the executive committee of the General Federation for the past 10 years, is the unopposed candidate for president.

Nine women, each of whom is prominent in the public life of her state, are seeking election to the other four offices.

Mrs. Walter W. Seymour of Illinois, second vice-president of the General Federation, and Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Maryland, chairman of the department of education of the General Federation, are candidates for the office of first vice-president.

In line for election as second vice-president are Mrs. George W. Adams, General Federation Director of Alabama; Mrs. Harold G. Bogert of Colorado, chairman of the division of Conservation of Natural Resources of the General Federation; Mrs. LaFell Dickinson of New Hampshire, treasurer of the General Federation, and Mrs. John Speed Harvey of West Virginia, General Federation recording secretary.

Mrs. Horace Bonar Ritchie, general federation director of Georgia, and Mrs. Jefferson D. Atwood of New Mexico, chairman of the department of citizenship of the General Federation, are opposing candidates for the office of recording secretary.

Mrs. J. L. B. Buck of Virginia, chairman of the General Federation Budget Committee, is unopposed in the race for the office of treasurer.

"Education for Living," which is the keynote of the administration of Mrs. Lawson, retiring president, is to be the basic theme of the triennial meeting, with a special convention theme founded on Proverbs 4:2, "For I give you good doctrine; forsake ye not my law."

Addresses and forum discussions on subjects of vital questions and problems of today will be presented by nationally-known men and women. Miss Alves Long, St. Louis, chairman of the department of international relations, has selected as her subject, "The Economic Approach to World Peace." Mrs. John L. Whitehurst will present a forum discussion on "Character Education Versus Crime." "Problems of Modern Family Life" will be the theme of the discussion to be offered by Mrs. Norman Hubbard Hastings, chairman of the department of American homes.

A memorial service commemorating federation leaders who have died during the last three years will be held at Grace and Holy Cathedral.

Traditionally, the closing session of the convention is "General Federation President's Night." At this time Mrs. Lawson, who is to be honored at a dinner preceding the final meeting, will introduce her son, Edward Campbell Lawson of Tulsa, who will speak on "Palship," stressing therein the relationship between parent and child.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

MRS. HENRY L. STIMSON, wife of the former Secretary of State, returned to Washington last week to find her daffodil in bloom at Woodley, their home.

This is the first battalion of a march of blooms which form a pretty background in the side garden for croquet, the Victorian game which is having a revival in the Capital. Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull are among the notables often to be found on this ground.

John Charles Thomas, opera singer and Maryland Eastern shore man, have been fishing in Florida for the last few weeks. With him is Mrs. Thomas, the skipper of their yacht, Masquerader, and one of the few American women holding a deep sea mariner's license. Frequently the Masquerader slips into Washington harbor and the Thomases attend a few dinners with friends here and in turn entertain aboard their craft.

"Put on Your Easter Bonnet With All the Ribbons On It" will be the sartorial theme song in two weeks but a number of Washington matrons and belles are rushing the straw hat season. One of the prettiest pre-Easter hats was that worn by Mrs. Harry Meem, mother of the "Meem debutantes," a soft black rough straw turned up in the back and coming down over the forehead in front and trimmed with gay spring flowers. Her veil tied under the chin. Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe's new chapeau is a soft black felt with a tiny row of white flowers sewed about the edge of its brim. Mrs. George Barnett's hat, a black straw trimmed with flowers with which she wore a veil.

Mrs. Cordell Hull has a blue straw trimmed with flowers and Mrs. Harry Woodring is wearing a rather wide-brimmed hat of black straw and flowers.

No one can forecast Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's Easter hat choice. Heretofore since entering the White House she has had a new Easter hat each year and also a new Easter costume and has been very generous in describing them in advance. Despite this, so far as we have learned, Mrs. Roosevelt has yet to meet her sartorial double.

Mrs. Harding, however, was not so fortunate. One afternoon she received two women from Ohio at the White House for tea and they arrived wearing replica of Mrs. Harding's fawn colored velvet afternoon dress, even to the embroidery in the same colored beads. Mrs. Harding had put her dress on for the party never dreaming that when she looked into the mirrors of the Red Room they would reflect three ladies in similar dresses. Mrs. Harding had had her gown made from a design of her own. The visiting ladies volunteered the information that when Mrs. Harding had last been in Ohio she had worn this gown and an Ohio dressmaker had copied it for loyal Harding supporters. Thus when they were invited for tea at the White House they had worn their "Mrs. Harding" dresses.

Sylvia Kleinschmidt Wed to R. H. Denckhoff

THE wedding of Miss Sylvia Kleinschmidt, daughter of Edwin J. Kleinschmidt, 6652 Washington boulevard, and Robert H. Denckhoff, son of Mrs. Josephine Denckhoff, 4919 Lindenwood avenue, took place Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the chapel of the Church of St. Michael and St. George. The Rev. Dr. Karl Morgan Block officiated.

Mrs. Homer Rapp, the former Miss Christine Chapin, was the bride's only attendant. Frederick Denckhoff, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Mr. Kleinschmidt gave his daughter in marriage. She wore her traveling suit, a costume ensemble, of French blue wool crepe. Her hat was a large dark blue straw model and her accessories were also dark blue. At her shoulder she wore white orchids. Mrs. Rapp was attired in an afternoon gown of dusty pink crepe, with which she wore navy blue accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

After the ceremony a reception for the bridal party, the families and a few friends, was held at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John O. Lowell, 631 Belt avenue. After a honeymoon in New Orleans, Biloxi and Pass Christian, Miss., the pair will live at 6624 San Bonita avenue. Mr. Denckhoff and his bride were graduated from Washington University, where she became a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

NO "man on the flying trapeze," no clowns, no fire-eaters . . . but Phineas Taylor Barnum himself would have agreed today with thousands of I. Miller enthusiasts who say: "No greater showing of Beautiful Shoes was ever assembled under one roof."

AND more complete than a Three-Ring Circus are our co-ordinated Accessories. We have a large assortment of Bags and Hosiery, keyed to "I. Miller Beautiful Shoes."

THE Circus hasn't come to town yet . . . But to women eager for correct, beautiful fashions, the I. Miller showing of Shoes and Accessories is even more completely exciting . . . And much more important in attaining Costume Perfection for Spring! See Stix, Baer & Fuller's collection!

pring Clothes An Answer to Jaded Feelings

his Season's Fashions Have Many New Details and Crisp Charm.

By RHEA SEEGER

EW spring clothes that are completely guaranteed to revive women's jaded feelings and wardrobes are the kind that fairly shriek new details, a flattering unt of crisp new spring charm, and make all that s into them years younger. You'll find them now, in the spring-wise collections. Daytime dresses especially are going strong. They have a typical spring twang, ure all the newest materials, lush spring colors and neat, small waistlines the like of which we haven't in years. Skirts are the youngest affairs ever, pant gay pleated numbers, or the flared ideas under d smooth hip control.

Such outfits are ideal buys for immediate wear, for y'll brighten up a well worn winter coat of fur or h, and can be worn later on without benefit of coat jacket, with all sorts of accessories. Whether you've undernourished clothes allowance or the cash supply a feminine Croesus, these are the dresses you buy ht now. Lots have been accomplished in the way of genious detail, that make these daytime charmers ss parade as well as good practical finds. Shirtwaist ps, sleek as a whistle, short sleeves that end above elbow, buttons that are delightfully unusual as well decorative, belts that accentuate the small 1938 waist-e, short skirts and expert workmanship, together with fabrics that take repeated trips to the cleaners with per behavior.

MOST OF THE NEW MATERIALS are soft, femi-ne, and clinging, fabrics that keep a sharp press in the high fashion plaits, or that drape suavely and shirr or tuck gracefully. Soft nubby textures, spongy fect basket weaves, and hop-sacking are first favorites. er wools are exceptionally effective in these spring-e dresses because they're thin without being stiff, y, or unwieldy and still warm enough to wear for reet without an extra coat when the weather is warm.

The bodices of blouses are made to really blouse fly over the belt, a stunt that makes the waistline en smaller. Yokes in back and front, sleeves that ar the elbow to wrinkle softly or that can be worn low if needed, are new. Blouse tops of contrasting lor and material, vastly different belts, soft bows, and en loops, contrast color introduced in pipings, edges, d even pockets are but a few of the clever new 1938 eas.

Some of the dresses are two-piece in finished effect. at means the skirt and blouse top are completed with brief fitted jacket. Thus the jacket and skirt look e a snappy two-piece dress. Light colors are combined, such as beige with brown, print with plain, and ay with blue or black. Again, practicalness is assured th such a team, for the dress can alternate with other ckets or coats and the jacket may be used with any her dress or skirt in the wardrobe.

—o—o—

YOU WILL DOUBTLESS remember last season the st appearance of those smart printed satin jersey esses that were so comfortable to wear during the rm days, and yet so dressy and easy on the figure. women's sizes the dresses were simply grand, and e first crop of the best styles were shown in large ints on white grounds. Many of them were matched th little turbans or head bands.

This season, as usually follows, this fabric is available in many new patterns. The celanese rayon printed tin is shown in both dark and light grounds, and right now is a od time to run up a neat little dress for yourself in one of these cellent patterns.

—o—o—

FOUR NEW SPRING OUTFITS have been sketched, each model pical of the new spring styles.

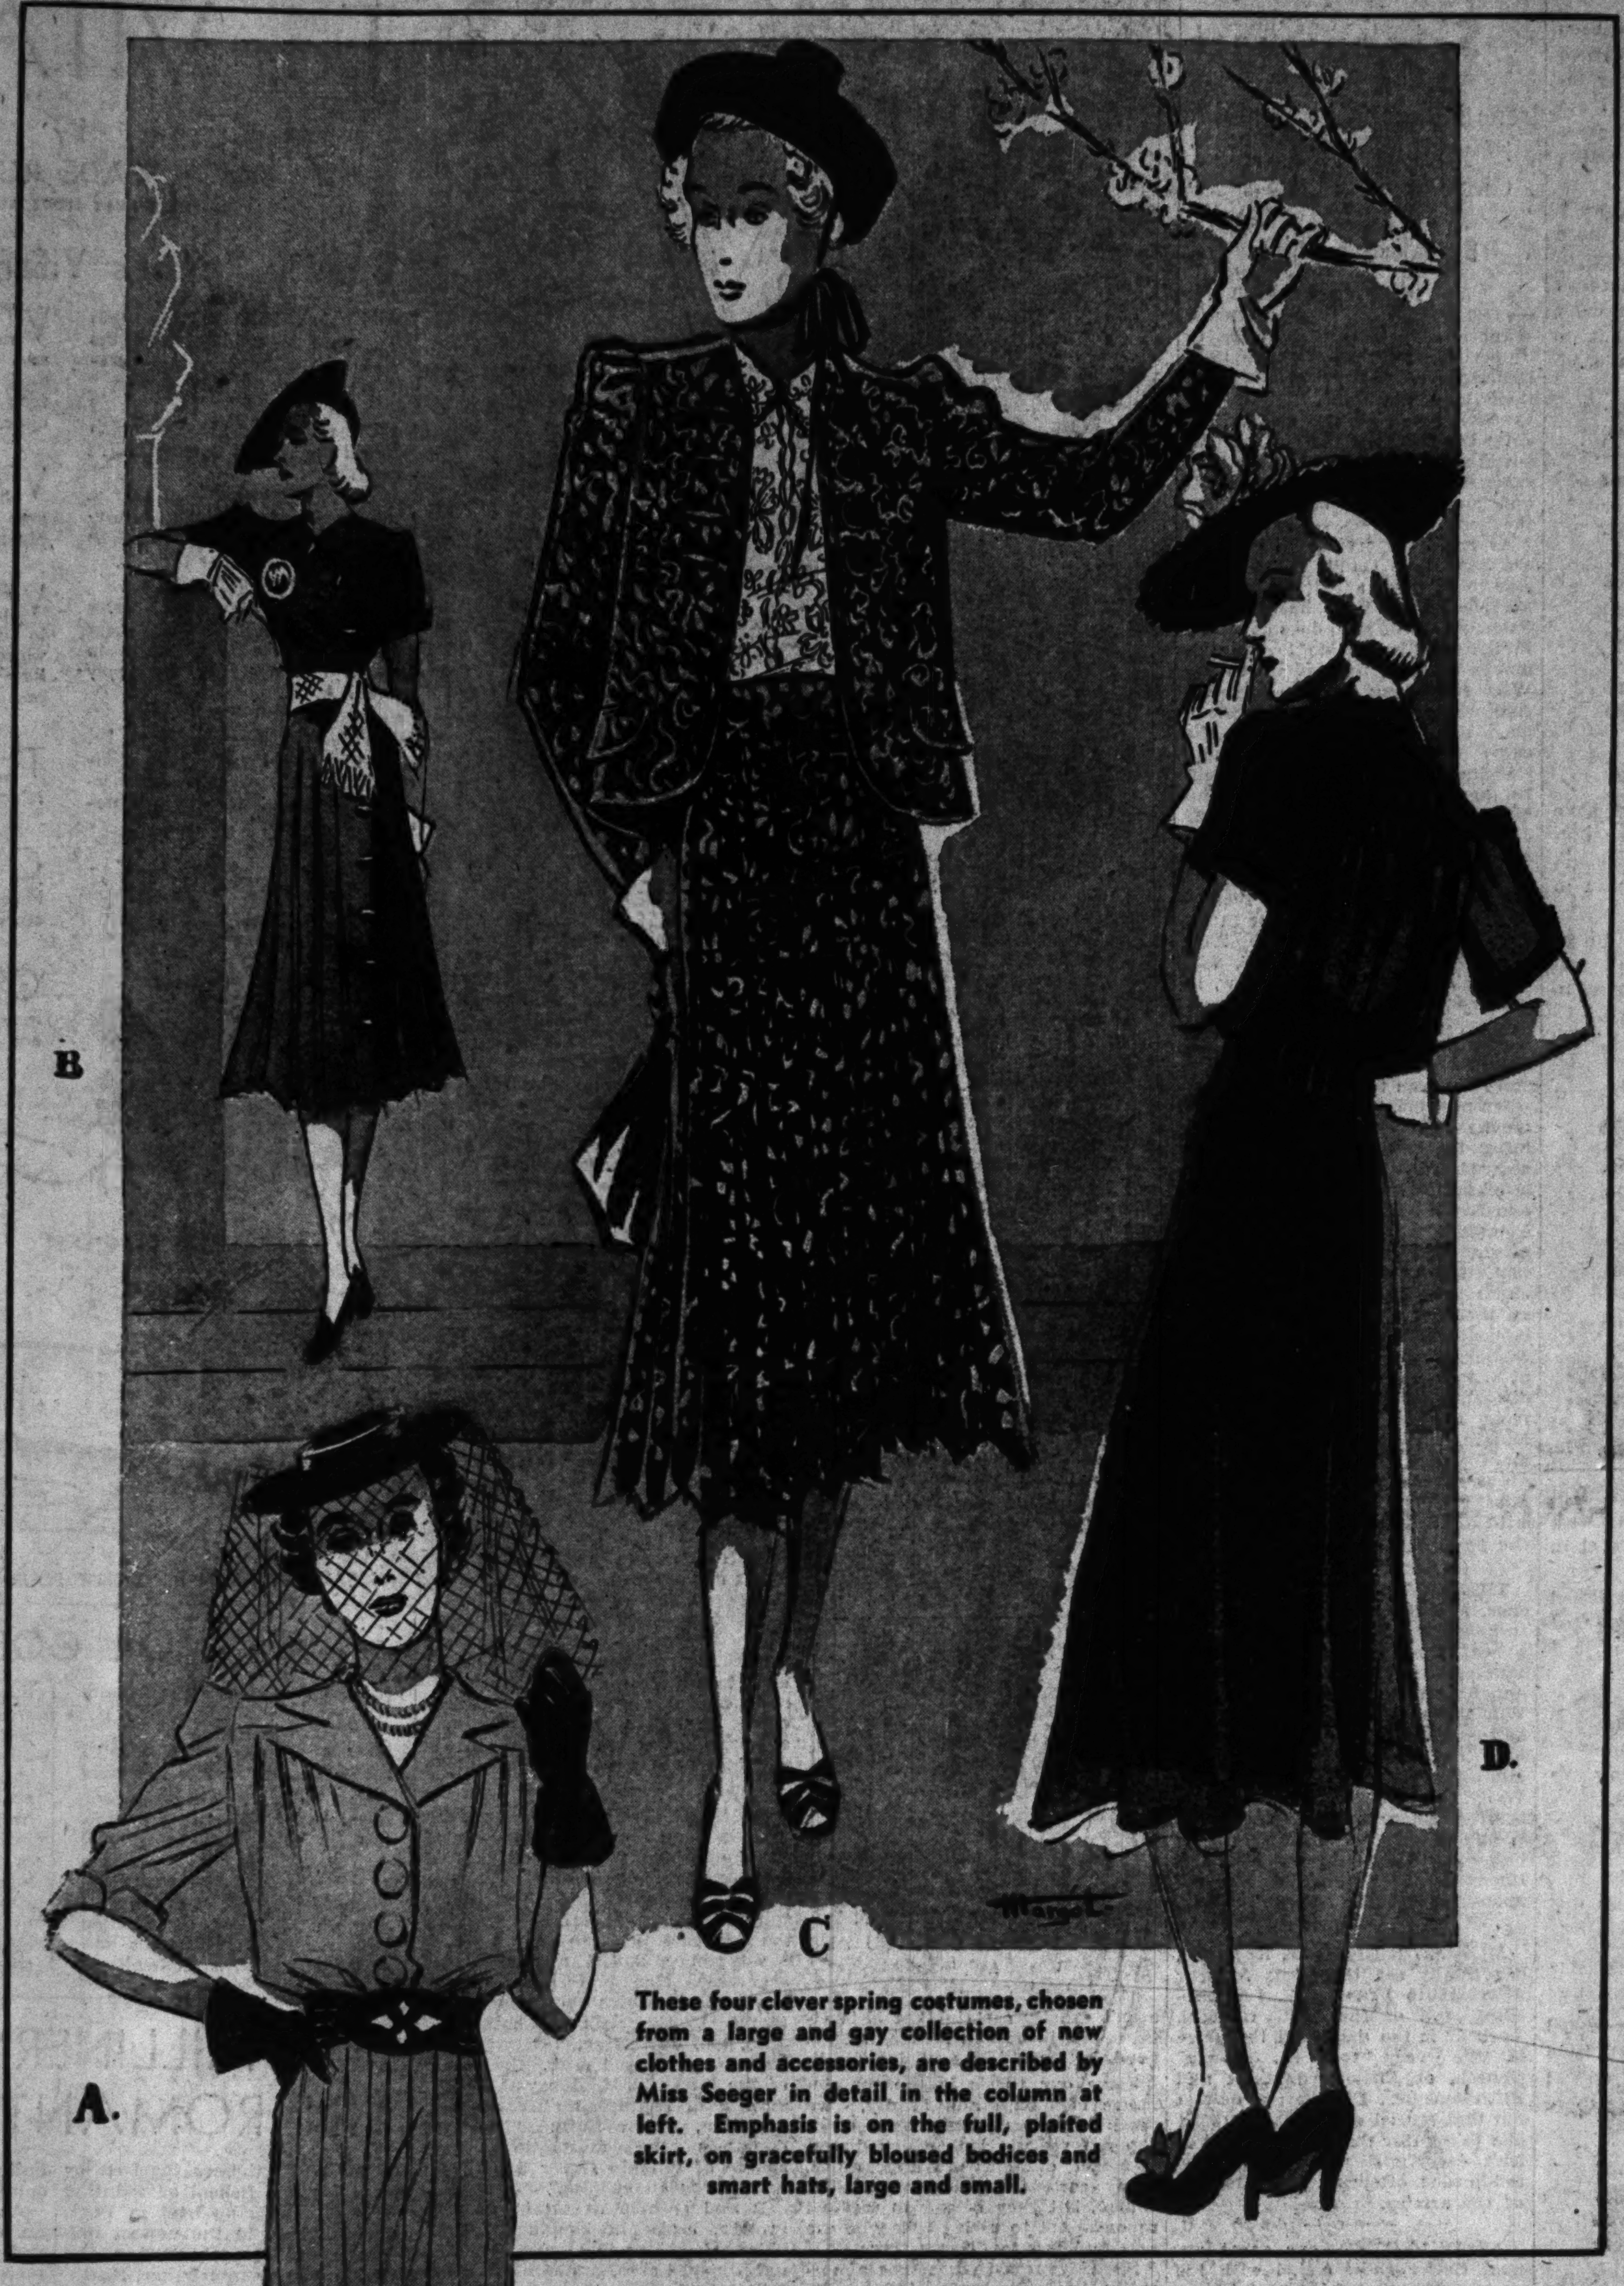
A . . . For all the beige enthusiasts, a soft caramel-beige, spongy, in wool dress made with a flatly pressed plaited-all-the-way-round irt, with the plaits stitched well down over the hipline to preserve slim smoothness. Around the waistline is a rusty brown suede belt th a cut-out design directly in front. The belt ties with short ends the back. A sailor hat with a veil completes the outfit.

B . . . Navy blue sheer wool, made with snap and flavor. The im streamline is accented with a side row of black smooth buttons om shoulder to hem. Short sleeves have tiny inverted tucks and e snow white belt is made of woven bands of quarter inch wide aid. The high hat is of blue to harmonize. This is the super art daytime dress ready for any and all occasions. The accessories u choose dress it up or down to suit the need.

—o—o—

C . . . ONE OF THE MOST DISTINCTIVE of new spring prints. A typical feminized version of a good daytime dress, for any hour of a all as to resemble a striking Japanese print. A plaited skirt is buttoned with large black buttons to a lovely sheer white blouse top of exquisite embroidered organdy. The snug short jacket is worn unbuttoned, the better to show the white top of the skirt. Completing the costume is a salad bowl hat of scarlet Milan straw tied at the side.

D . . . Another navy blue dress of the new spring collections. A typical feminized version of a good daytime dress, for any hour of a busy day. Notice the new shirred effects in the bodice top and the repetition of the shirred cords at the waistline. The skirt is flared and the sheer material has small snowflake nubs for contrast. Underneath is a fitted slip of navy blue taffeta. This is another ideal all-purpose dress to use as a background for high colored accessories.



These four clever spring costumes, chosen from a large and gay collection of new clothes and accessories, are described by Miss Seeger in detail in the column at left. Emphasis is on the full, plaited skirt, on gracefully bloused bodices and smart hats, large and small.

PAY AS YOU GO -:- -:- -:-

By Elsie Robinson

NEVER has there been a time in human history when so many people needed, desperately, to make a new start.

Life has changed with incredible speed during these last 20 years. Every department of life is affected by it. The tempo of both thought and action, our ability to feel, adapt and adjust—in home, office or factory—are constantly challenged by the ruthless standards of the machine age, leaving millions of men or women, who yesterday were considered record breakers, now rated as has-beens.

Maybe you're one of these millions—a discouraged man, a frantic woman—who can't understand how or why it has all happened. Desperately you try to reassure yourself . . . try to give yourself an honest once-over. Yes, it's true . . . you do look a little seedy. Perhaps you have let yourself slump . . . become a bit set in your ways. And you haven't the glib line of these youngsters around you, who've never slaved as you have done.

But you'll snap out of it. Everyone lets down, once in a while, don't they? After all, you're only 35 . . . 40 . . . 45. And people don't have to let themselves get old, nowadays. "Life begins at 40"—thank heaven!

So you murmur to yourself, promising that you'll get a decent suit for the office . . . read that new book . . . spruce up generally. And momentarily, you're comforted. Then some unexpected word or glimpse of the new line-up forces realization upon you . . . makes you see how antiquated you've become in method and attitude. As out-of-date as Gramma's bustle! No wonder the boss glares . . . the husband yawns.

Oh, you must make a new start before it's too late! You haven't yet lost those qualities which made you efficient and beloved 15 or 20 years ago. You still have what it takes . . . the courage and understanding, the patience and pluck. You want to come back . . . and you can come back . . . and (remember the old war song) "there's a whole world waiting for you."

But are you willing to pay the price?

Think it over. Why did you lose your place in the big parade? You lost it because you let go.

Life is the most expensive game there is. It costs to stay in it. It costs—constantly. It costs discomfort and change . . . experiments and adventures. There's no such thing as a permanent life ticket. You have to keep buying your way in, new and fresh, all the time.

And for every new step you take you have to give up old prejudice and peevishness . . . old sentimentality and stupidity . . . old ways of doing and feeling and fearing.

You can't be a wise and beloved comrade to your child at 40 just because you were an adoring mother at 20. You can't be a valued employe at 46 because you hung up the biggest sales record at 26.

You've got to go on . . . and pay as you go.

One Register Of Prosperity Out of Whack

You Can't Tell by New York Crowds Whether Times Are Good or Bad.

By LUCIUS BEEBE

NEW YORK, April 2.

UNTIL recently anyone with a feeling for the Manhattan pulse could instantly detect the trend of the business and economic times simply by walking into the Colony or El Morocco of an evening. Without having seen a closing stock edition, it was possible for a perceptive observer to tell from a glance at the tables at Voisin's the direction and approximate range of the day's market. Luxury trade and cafe spending were the most instant and sensitive indices of how things are going. Now that nobody knows what is going on, anyway, this once faithful register of prosperity or adversity is totally out of whack.

For no apparent reason at all and in the midst of a relatively steady market the entire town will seem ready to fold up. There will be nobody in the theaters, nobody at "21" but Jules Glaenzer, and nobody at the Colony but Beth Leary. The band at Morocco will be playing to empty tables, and Perona will be thinking of buying himself a length of the most expensive sort of rope.

Then suddenly there will be a day of universal business gloom. More even than the customary malice and insanity will characterize the news under Washington date lines. The market will have the vapors and Connecticut real estate will enjoy a frantic boom (Connecticut real estate always booms when the end of the world threatens), but, perversely, you won't be able to fight your way to the bar at the Plaza; ticket speculators will be juggling half a dozen phones at once, and the Stork will have run out of truffled foie gras by 7:30 in the evening. From the sheer contrariness of everybody, it begins to look as though the only thing that really could bankrupt New York's luxury trade would be a boom market and a permanent return to good times.

THERE COMES TO HAND the anecdote of the liquor importer who called recently on a Manhattan department store executive, from whom, after the customary salutations, he inquired where, did the executive think, could he come by 20,000 little woolly lambs? The department store man, accustomed by nature and his calling to the seemingly preposterous, wrote down the names of several manufacturers who might be relied on to stock such items, and then ventured to inquire what use might any one have for 20,000 little woolly lambs?

Well, said the liquor man, he was about to undertake the exploitation for a great firm of distillers of a new brand of Scotch, and they wanted, as part of their advertising campaign, a symbolic animal like the little white horses that come attached to the bottles of White Horse, or the twin Scotties associated with Black and White. "Gentle as a lamb," was going to be the staggeringly original advertising slogan of the new whiskey, but that wasn't, it appeared, the real pay-off. The name of the brand was to be Old Angus, and Angus, as everyone knew, so swore the liquor wholesaler, was the Latin for lamb, a very nice classical tie-in with a traditional Scottish name

The department store executive, stunned by this erudition, said it was wonderful, and sped his friend on his way. Later, mistrusting his memory of Latin, he called up Lewis Titterton, of N. B. C., who is, by way of being a classical scholar, and inquired what, please was the Latin for lamb? "AGNUS, you dope!" was the answer. The department store man called back his friend and painstakingly explained the situation, but apparently a small thing like a quite different Latin word isn't going to stand in the way of big business, and the advertising campaign is soon to be on full blast, hymning the joys of "Old Angus, gentle as an Angus (Latin for lamb.)"

—o—o—

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER JR. seems to be the last of the city's great to wear old-time high button black shoes with his evening clothes . . . Substantial and conservative right down to the ground . . . Railroad fans will be enchanted to know that Ed Hungerford has bought a beautiful Virginia & Truckee locomotive and Leland Stanford's private car, famed at Promontory in '69, for the New York World's Fair rail exhibit . . . Gourmets with a leaning for Chinese food are swearing by the six duck-course dinner at Lum Fong's . . . Each course is so skillfully prepared (including, of course, the celebrated Peking duck) that you're hardly aware of eating the same sort of bird six times in succession . . . Harvard Club frequenters report there has been a very considerable and general pocketing of Porcellian Clum watch charms since Whitney sported one while being fingerprinted . . . A Fifth Avenue beautician, Robert, makes a practice of taking chemical tests of the scalps of toupee customers, to determine which type of adhesive will best hold the wig in place . . . The carriage starter outside the Famous Door imitates bird calls as he goes about his business, and all the cab drivers in Fifty-second street know that when he whistles like a cuckoo he's steering a good fare into their hack.

MY OPINION

by

Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a young man 20 years old. My problem is that I have been going with a girl for about a year and a half and have learned to care great deal for her; but recently she has seemed very indifferent. That is, she acts as if she is always angry when I am around her. She tells me that she cares for me but that she can't help acting the way she does.

I only see her about twice a week and I should think she would be more talkative. Sometimes when I speak to her she doesn't even answer. I hate to give her up, but it seems I just can't stand being hurt any longer. What do you think I should do? B. M. K.

If you really care for her, and feel that you can't give her up, I would suggest that you—for a time at least—space out your visits to once a week, or once in two weeks. Less frequent visits may give you a better perspective of the whole affair.

Your complaint that the young woman isn't talkative is just a bit unusual. What do you talk about, when she doesn't answer? Is your conversation interesting? The fault may, in part, lie with you. If you find you can't get together on a friendly conversational basis—which means that your interests are apart—it would seem that you would be wise to stop seeing her entirely.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM 14 YEARS OLD and in high school. This year I have been invited to three parties and my mother, who is rather old-fashioned, has not permitted me to go to any of them. I have not been to a movie this year. In fact I haven't been anywhere but to school, church and a friend's house.

My mother is always telling me that I am too young to go anywhere by myself. She objects to all my friends. Don't you think that she ought to let me go out sometimes and stop trying to keep me tied to her apron strings all my life? Please help me.

A GIRL.

In my opinion, your mother is right in saying that you are too young to go anywhere by yourself—even if some other girls of your age do so.

It is possible, of course, that your mother is leaning backward in objecting to "all your friends," but if so, she is doing so because she has your best interests so much at heart. Perhaps you can open her eyes to their good qualities by mentioning their good points while you are helping her with the dishes in the evening.

As for going to the movies; watch the papers, and when you find one advertised that you would particularly like to see, ask your mother to go with you. Perhaps if she goes with you a time or two she will let you go later with several of your girl friends.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I HAVE FOLLOWED YOUR COLUMN for some time and at last I have found the opportunity to use it. I have been going with a boy for two years and until recently he has been very careful in his appearance and general cleanliness, but lately he has grown careless in certain matters. I do not know how to broach this subject to him. If you will be so kind as to tell me what to say or do so that I will not hurt his feelings I will be more than grateful to you.

ANXIOUS.

Your question is a stickler, and I am not sure that I can help you. But here is a suggestion. The next time the two of you are in a crowd, say to him, later: "Did you notice that person who sat on the other side of me? She had a most unpleasant condition, and I WOULD draw the next seat, my olfactory sense being what it is!" That remark, and similar ones later if necessary, may enlighten your friend without hurting him, and bring him to the point where every night will be Saturday night with him, in a manner of speaking.

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

● MY WEDDING DAY is only three short weeks away and I have suddenly awakened to the fact that it was only an infatuation I felt for my intended husband. I am frantic. What shall I do? I can't break the matter off now, as it would kill my fiance. Is there any possible way out of this? BRIDE-TO-BE.

You are just a little late in waking up, aren't you? Even so, better to wake up now, than after the wedding. If you are sure your present feelings are your real ones, you will save both you and the young man great unhappiness later in life by backing out now.

Are you sure your breaking off now "would kill your fiance?" Lots of persons have been left at the altar, you know, but offhand I can't recall any who died outright from the shock. Men especially have been known to recover in a disgustingly short time.

—o-o—

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● WILL YOU PLEASE GIVE ME the address of the Missing Persons Bureau in Toledo, Ohio. Thank you very much.

A WASHINGTON.

Address the Director of the Bureau of Missing Persons, in care of the Police Department, Toledo, Ohio.

—o-o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

WE ARE TWO GIRLS who graduated from Webster High last year, and we want to object to the statements made by "Senior in Webster High," in your column in Tuesday's paper.

First of all, the boys that do the most bragging and swaggering are not the "successful masculine seniors." Also, some of the most popular boys do not have "unlimited" spending money. Their only qualification for popularity is that they are considerate. This does not mean that they have to spend money, but that they enter wholeheartedly into whatever is planned. Many times the boys have come to our homes and eaten heartily, but more often they preferred to take us to a popular place on Clayton road.

As to corsages, the boys themselves started the custom of sending them, and naturally, the girls aren't going to object.

Our advice to "Senior" is to spend more time finding out what the girls are really like and less time worrying about the other boys. However, we are with him in wishing for more friendship.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

The Adoption Of Babies by Screen Stars

Irene Dunne Is Latest Film Player to Enlarge Family Circle.

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, April 2.

THE women of the screen show no abatement in their desire to become mothers by adoption. Deprived of motherhood during their long years of trouping in vaudeville and on the stage, they enter the late thirties with the maternal urge still unfulfilled. So they reach out to a foundling hospital and pluck a little brightener for the home.

As you have probably read long ere this, Irene Dunne is the latest star to do some adopting—she and her pleasant, grayish husband, Dr. Francis Griffin, who does dentistry in the East while his lovely wife makes faces at the camera in the West—with long visits in between. And what gives our civic pride a good nudge is the fact that she came to New York's Foundling Hospital for her Mary Frances Griffin, aged 4, instead of going to Chicago's famous "Cradle," where the Jack Bennys and the Al Jolsons, to name but two famous families, found their household joys. Hollywood, in fact, has always seemed to feel that Chicago was the farthest possible boundary for adoptable children. Thus, lovely Irene, who is as nice a woman as I know, is, in a sense, a pioneer.

Aroused by this happy event, I visited Sister Agnita Miriam at the hospital, whose prime aim is to restore children to their own parents when possible. It tries to mend the cracks in broken homes, and to bring together parents who have strayed. Miss Mary F. Godley, who is executive secretary of the Catholic Home Society, which runs the Foundling Home among its enterprises, told me one fascinating fact. Most people prefer to adopt children under 2, and cease to look on them as prospects at 6. "This is easier to understand," says Miss Godley, "when one remembers that at 6 the child is entering the most difficult behavior period." And from my own experiences with Martin, who is now within a few months of 6, I heartily agree. He grows more difficult by the minute. Miss Godley should spend a day with him! But good luck to Irene, the pet!

—o-o—

THE FAMED and able photographer, Mr. Horst, who works for a fashion magazine, just stepped off a boat from Paris, says his brilliant press agent, Eleanor Lambert, announcing that the Duchess of Windsor is no longer wearing those hats—meaning, of course, the high halo thing which she affected beginning with her wedding skimmer. Wally, says Comrade Horst, has brim millinery this spring, and is "going in for colors more than ever before, with some of her new costumes in torch red, a new shade sponsored by Mainbocher."

—o-o—

MURIEL RICHARDS, local girl, has finally set the plans for her marriage to Francis Warren Pershing, son of the old General. April 22 is the date, and the place is the very tony St. Thomas' Church, at Fifty-third street and Fifth avenue. I'll bet my newest hat that Muriel will line up at least one bishop for the ceremony, for it isn't every girl who marries the red-headed offspring of a General of the armies.

—o-o—

AS EXPECTED, our great annual flower show ended with the super-gold medal going to a garden of orchids! A man named Wadsworth R. Lewis lined up the gaudy display, which got the judge's nod, and nearly 10,000 of the exotic and costly blooms made up the picture. One plant alone contained 13 spikes, each with some 30 blossoms. That pappy of all orchids is the cymbidium, the nation's largest. All in all, Lewis put on a mighty show, but all the time I gaped at it I remembered with joy my little bed of nasturtiums back home. To me, a flower's a flower, and love goes into its growing. Orchids, pooh!

—o-o—

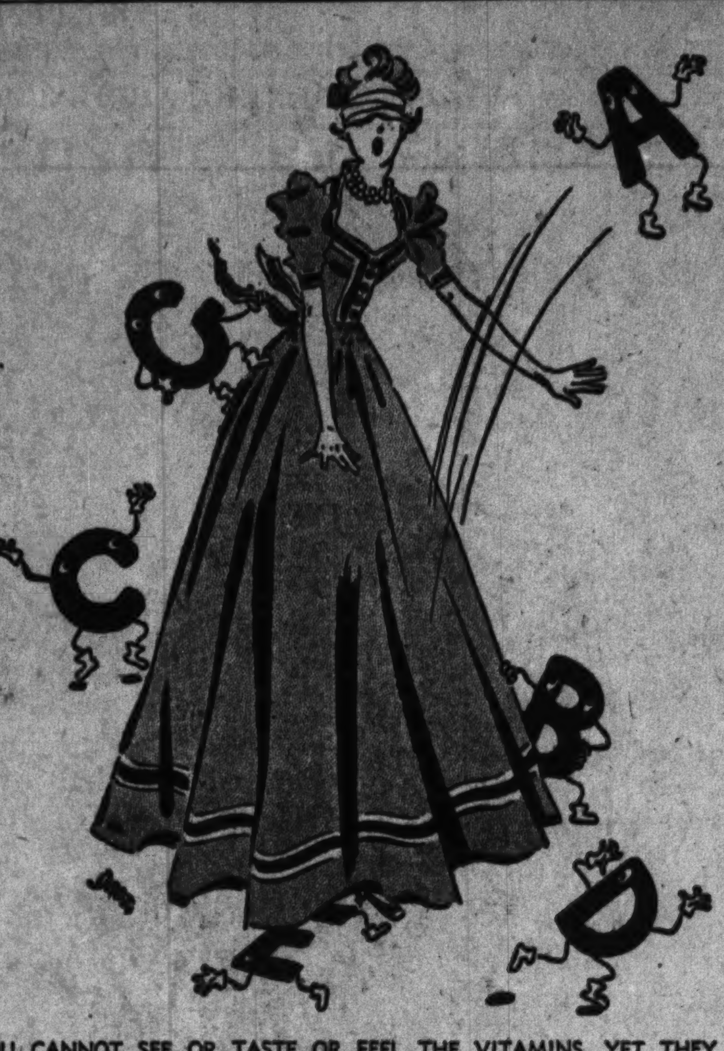
AT LAST the greatest living American author (in my opinion) of our sex is being honored with a collected edition. Her name, of course, is Willa Cather. I'd rather have written her "A Lost Lady" than almost any book I can think of.

—o-o—

WANT TO LEARN how to make gloves? We have an expert teacher here. Her name is Magda, and she comes from Vienna, and she tells me that a fairly talented amateur can turn out a pair in a day. And can also make a matching belt. This makes happy the girls who like the costly, hand-sewn glove!

—o-o—

NOW THAT the orgy of spring fashion shows is over, I've come all over with pity for the lovely girls who model the clothes. The grimmest, sourest, most dismal audience in the world is the professional fashion show audience. How the gorgeous mannequins must suffer, looking night after night at those dour faces!



YOU CANNOT SEE OR TASTE OR FEEL THE VITAMINS, YET THEY HOLD THE KEY TO HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

VITAMINS For VITALITY

By

ALICE WADE ROBINSON

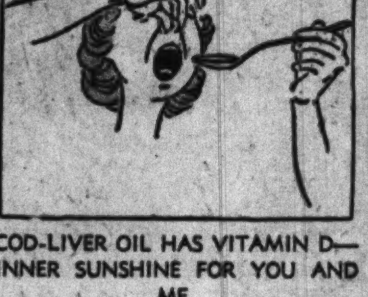
NOTED BEAUTY NEWS AUTHORITY

YOU cannot see or feel or taste vitamins—yet they hold the key to health and beauty. And there's this about them, too: Let them be present as they normally are in a well-balanced diet, you feel tip-top. Full of energy and vim, you work, play and look your best. But let A, B, C, D, E, G, be absent from your diet list long enough—you'll hie yourself to your doctor. And well you should. You'll be a pretty sick woman—off your food, off your good humor and away off on your looks.

That's why it's wise if you're planning to reduce or to put on weight that you consult your doctor. He will devise a diet right for you nutritionally — and correctly balanced as to calories and vitamins. I want you to be happy for Easter, to have you feel right and to look attractive in your new spring wardrobe. So, read well.

Watch your diet all the year, but now that Lent is with us, here's some vitamin wisdom to memorize and follow during this special dieting time:

Experts in nutrition say we need vitamins A, B, C, D and G. They aren't exactly certain that E is vital to life in human beings, but it's good for them. So we'll include it.



COD-LIVER OIL HAS VITAMIN D—INNER SUNSHINE FOR YOU AND ME.

Since our thesis is the maintenance of health and beauty, we shall concentrate only upon those signs of vitamin lack which directly affect our outward appearance. Many serious illnesses result, of course, but they belong to medical reports—not to us lay folk who are not qualified to discuss them.

So—if your skin becomes abnormally dry, your scalp itchy, your eyes sore or failing in vision, you may not be getting enough vitamin A. Drink more milk. Eat more egg yolks and green and yellow vegetables. They contain vitamin A—plus several other good ones. But they are especially rich in A.

Lack of B may be suspected if you lose your appetite, your temper without reason, your ordinary vitality and energy. Include such foods as these in your family menu: Unpolished rice, whole unrefined cereal grains, orange juice, tomatoes, raw cabbage, kidney and navy beans, green peas, buttermilk. They are good staple foods, easy to prepare deliciously — and they are builders of an optimistic outlook plus "red cheeks."

Drink a pint of orange juice daily and you'll make your quota of vitamin C—and do much to banish a pale or sallow complexion. It will help prevent spongy and bleeding gums and assist in guarding your skin against easy black-and-blue bruises. These foods are also rich in C: raw and canned tomatoes, canned pineapple, grapefruit, lemon juice, rutabaga juice and raw cabbage.

And now to vitamin D—the sunshine vitamin. Since Nature apparently intended us to get most of D from reasonable sunnings, she didn't deposit much D in food. But she gave cod-liver oil such an inexhaustible supply that infants everywhere depend on it for correct growth. Many of us adults go back to it in winter for the bulwark of resistance it gives us against disease. It builds us up until come spring, when we can get our ultraviolet directly from the sun.

—o-o—

VITAMIN E is a vitality builder —increases one's come-hither appeal. Wheat germ oil is its best source. But there's some in yellow corn, butter fat(green peas, spinach and summer milk (when the cows are in fresh pasturage).

Vitamins B and G are almost inseparable. Egg white alone, of all the foods in which they appear, is minus B. Egg yolk has both.

So, too, have liver, kidney, dried brewer's yeast and milk. Speaking of the latter, Prof. Henry C. Sherman, a distinguished authority on nutrition, has written: "Milk is doubtless the most important source of vitamin G for American and European peoples."

B and G help us attain proper growth, assist in keeping weight balanced, aid us in having smooth, unblemished skin, sometimes retard falling hair. They're a dependable workaday beauty team. Worthy members of the alphabetical vitamin faternity upon which much of our health, beauty and charm undoubtedly depend.

Beauty Editor's Vitamin Check-up

DON'T lose half the B vitamin content by pouring down the sink the water in which B vegetables are cooked.

—o-o—

USE the liquid in the can which held the canned vegetables. It's vitamin rich.

—o-o—

HAVE you tried the beauty creams which contain vitamins? Many women like what they do.

—o-o—

INCLUDE spinach, kale, water cress, raw carrots, parsley, beet greens, dandelion leaves and turnip tops in menus meant to supply vitamin A.

—o-o—

"VITAMINS," according to Dr. L. Jean Bogert, "are body regulators . . . necessary for normal growth and for the maintenance of health."

VITAMINS are active in most minute quantities. One writer says that in energy they bear the same relation to the rest of our food as the spark plug does to gasoline.

—o-o—

VITAMINS A, D and E are soluble in fats and are usually associated with fat in foods or in green plants.

—o-o—

VITAMINS B, C and G are soluble in water. So don't be too quick in throwing away the water in which those types of vitamin foods have been cooked. Use it if you possibly can.

—o-o—

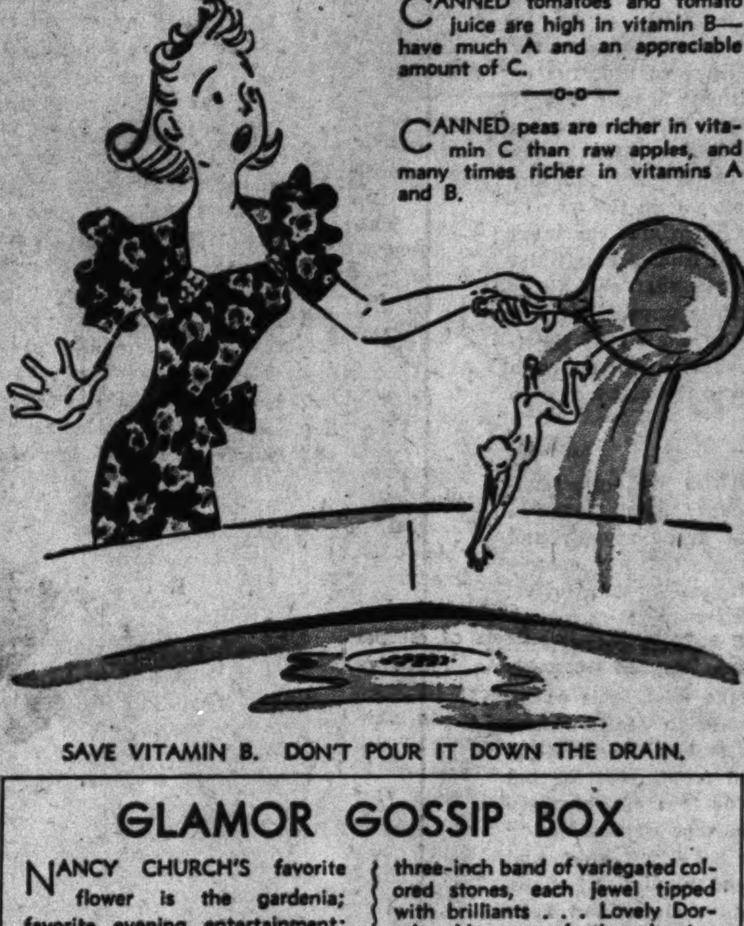
THERE'S no danger of getting too much vitamin content. The body rejects over-supply.

—o-o—

CANNED tomatoes and tomato juice are high in vitamin B—have much A and an appreciable amount of C.

—o-o—

CANNED peas are richer in vitamin C than raw apples, and many times richer in vitamins A and B.



SAVE VITAMIN B. DON'T POUR IT DOWN THE DRAIN.

Easter Dresses For Little Girls

THERE'S just about enough time left before Easter to give serious thought to that new Easter frock that Jane or Nancy is going to look eagerly for on Easter Sunday morning. Eggs, rabbits and baskets, notwithstanding, every little girl must have a new dress, and that new dress must be quite gay with a party air.

Many adults have always felt that girls, aged 5 to 12, put on their best Sunday airs in printed silks, and this season there are some very charming prints in Pussy Willow, that lovely serviceable silk our mothers have always known as one of the finest silks to use for best dresses.

There are many fascinating prints in little conventional floral motifs that seem to be painted on the backgrounds of roses or blue or navy, and smart mothers are making these frocks with little puffed sleeves, straight waists and full skirts, often trimming the sleeves and fronts of the bodice with tiny velvet bows matching the color of the print, and tieing the waist with several strands of the same velvet ribbon ending in little bows at back.

Only a little time and silk will be necessary, and think of the happy smiles on Easter morning that will reward you.

Don't Kiss Babies!

WHEN you see a tiny baby in his carriage or his crib, your first impulse is to kiss him. But beware, lest you literally "kiss him to death."

Wise parents early make it a rule to kiss the baby only on the back of the neck, but this is hard to enforce with fond relatives and friends. Babies have not the resistance and immunity to infection that older children and adults have acquired with the years. They pick up colds and contagious diseases more easily than older people. Aunt Sarah has a bad cold; she kisses Baby Mary, who sniffles and sneezes.

It is routine treatment with the majority of pediatricians to immunize babies against diphtheria before they are 6 months old. But there are times before the treatment is given or before it is completed when an older person, immune to diphtheria, may transmit the germ to a child. Measles, scarlet fever, modified forms of these diseases, mumps and tuberculosis are also highly communicable.

NEW MILLINERY MODES IN ROMANTIC THEMES

ROMANTIC themes inspired by the English School of Painting Exhibition being held in Paris are highlighted in the newest millinery modes for late spring and early summer. Winterhalter, Northcote and Lawrence, whose nineteenth century portraits of court ladies occupy such an important place in this exhibit, have influenced the designers of hats until all of them have a picturesque, festive aspect.

The broad-brimmed hat appears most frequently in the portraits but there also are sufficient tiny models with gently rolling sides and perky flower ornaments to supply variety to the mode. Crowns of many of the hats with sweeping brims are so small that it is difficult to find them in the flower-garden display of trimming and the flutter of lace and veiling.

The French designers have been the first to catch the spirit of the English portraits exhibition but several leading American designers who recently returned from Paris also have employed the themes in their creations. While the silhouettes differ greatly all give the same impression of very feminine and flattering emphasis and, when properly chosen, tend to make the wearer look romantic.

—o-o—

NATURAL LEGHORN, as might be expected, is used extensively in the design of the large capelines. Sheer hairbraids also are effective while paillasson and panama are straws that are attractive when developed in black brimmed hats. One large leghorn hat that defies the great interest in flowers and veils as trimming has a twisted scarf of two-toned satin ribbon around the crown. This ribbon is tied at the back in a large bow that lies flat against the crown. Pastel tints are used for the ribbon so that the entire hat is very summery and dainty in appearance.

Another leghorn hat taken from an early victorian English print and given Harryson's modern interpretation is of the natural colored leghorn. A navy blue veil is draped over the rolling sides and caught in a bow at the back of the crown. This is suggested for wear with a printed jacket ensemble or a semi-tailored coat and illustrates the vogue of dressy hats for daytime wear.

Veils are employed to drape some large hats that are a version of the off-the-face bonnet. When the hat turns up from the forehead the tendency is to place the veil over the entire face and let it hang loosely to the shoulders. Occasionally it is caught at the back so that streamers extend almost to the waistline.

—o-o—

FLOWERS AND VEILS, although sufficient without the aid of the other, often are used together this spring. There is one arresting hat, very small and close fitting, that is made of black shiny straw and has a pouf of multi-colored taffeta flowers at the front. A black veil with scalloped edge is attached to the edge of the hat and covers the upper part of the face. A little tricorne named "Three Cornered Moon" is made of navy ballibuntl and employs a chou of navy veiling caught in loops at the side back. A wreath of white lilies of the valley covers a bandeau at the left side.

Another inspired by one of Wintenhaler's most famous portraits, "Imperatrice Eugenie" and designed by Harryson rolls up at the sides. The crown is very shallow and has two roses in shades of deep red placed at the center of the crown. Deep red veiling binds the hair at both sides of the head and ties in a bow beneath the chin.

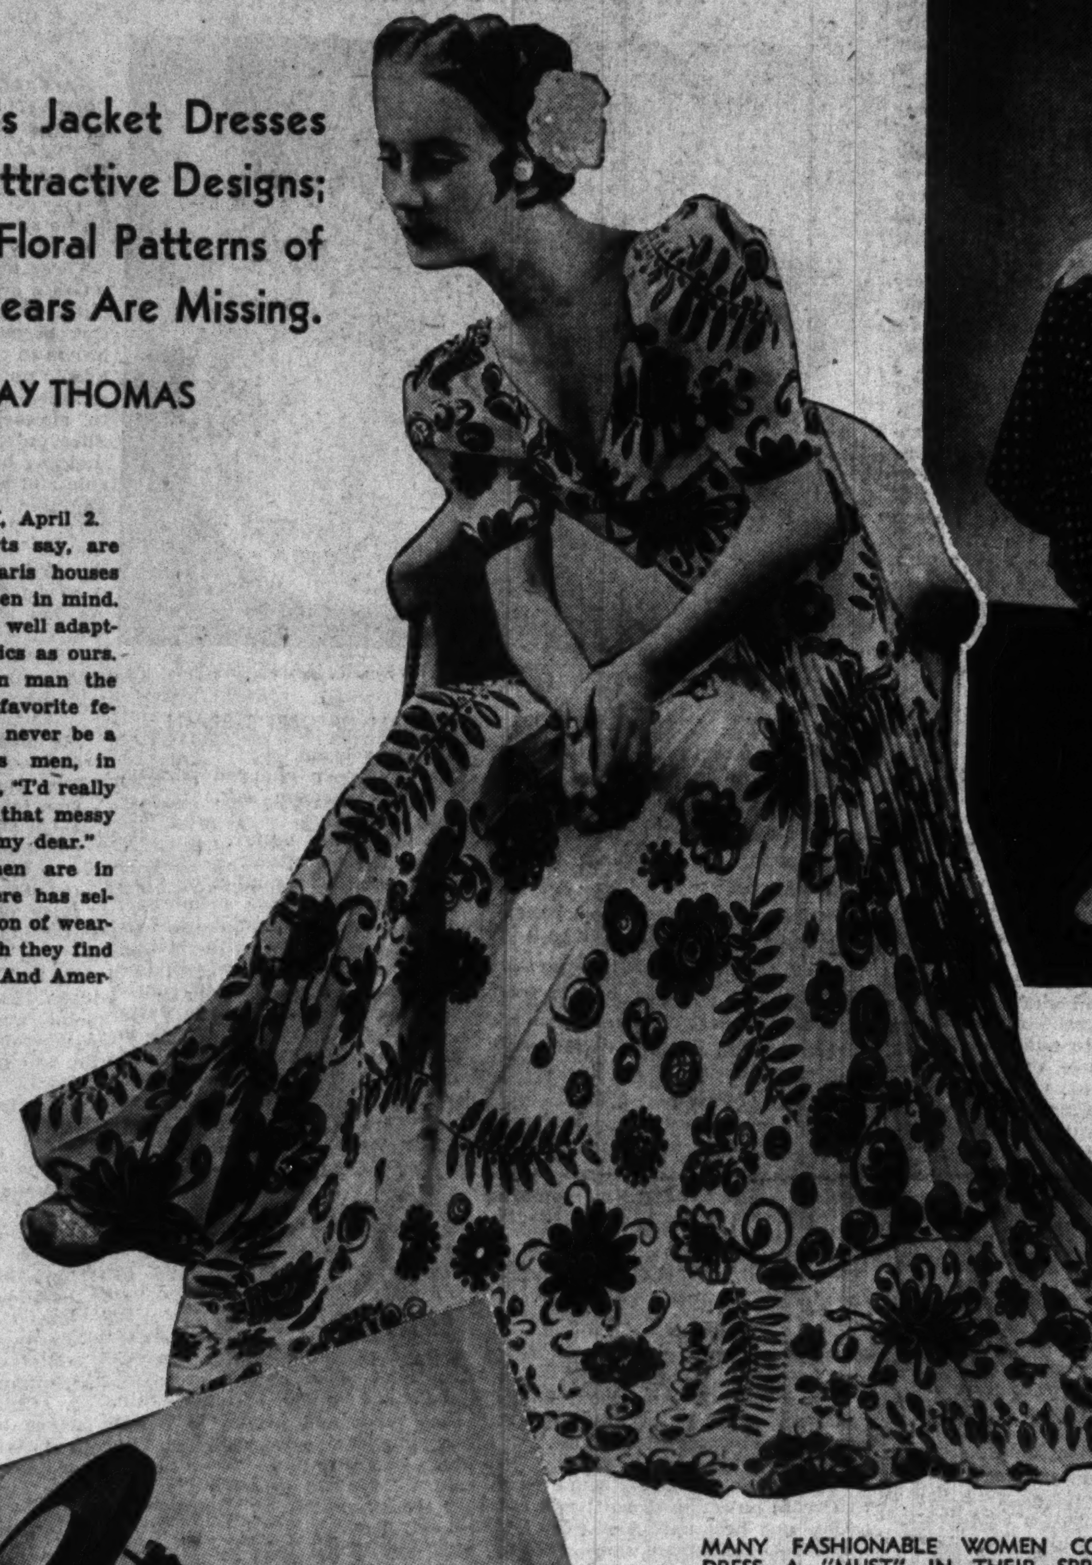
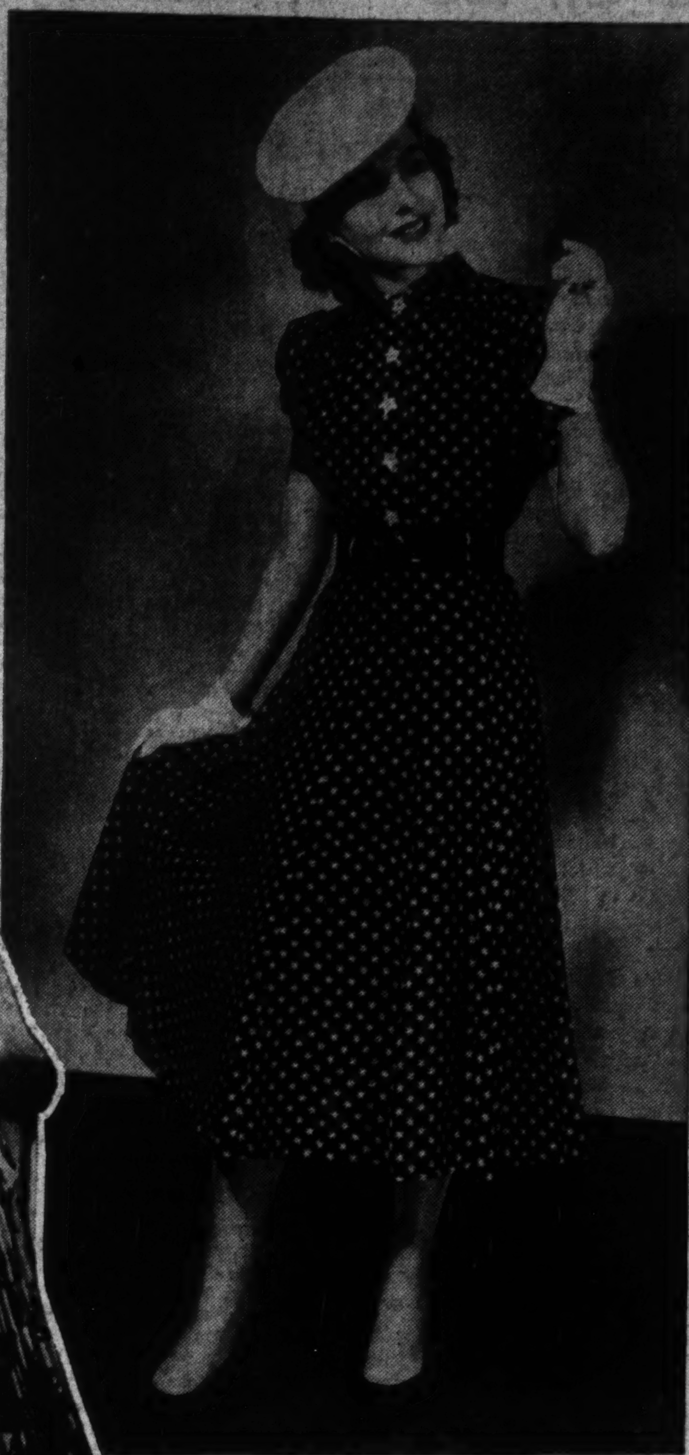
Fashion-Conscious Women Are Breaking Into Print For Late Spring Season

This Year's Jacket Dresses in Many Attractive Designs; Unsightly Floral Patterns of Previous Years Are Missing.

By KAY THOMAS



MANY FASHIONABLE WOMEN CONSIDER THIS DRESS A "MUST" IN THEIR SPRING EVENING WARDROBE. THE BEAUTY OF THE COLORS IS BREATH-TAKING IN INTENSITY. BRIGHT BLUE, RED AND YELLOW ARE SPLASHED IN A BOLD MEXICAN FLOWER AND LEAF PATTERN ON A STARK WHITE GROUND. THE BODICE IS SLIM, THE ALL-OVER PLEATED SKIRT FALLING FROM A LOW, EXQUISITELY FITTED WAISTLINE.

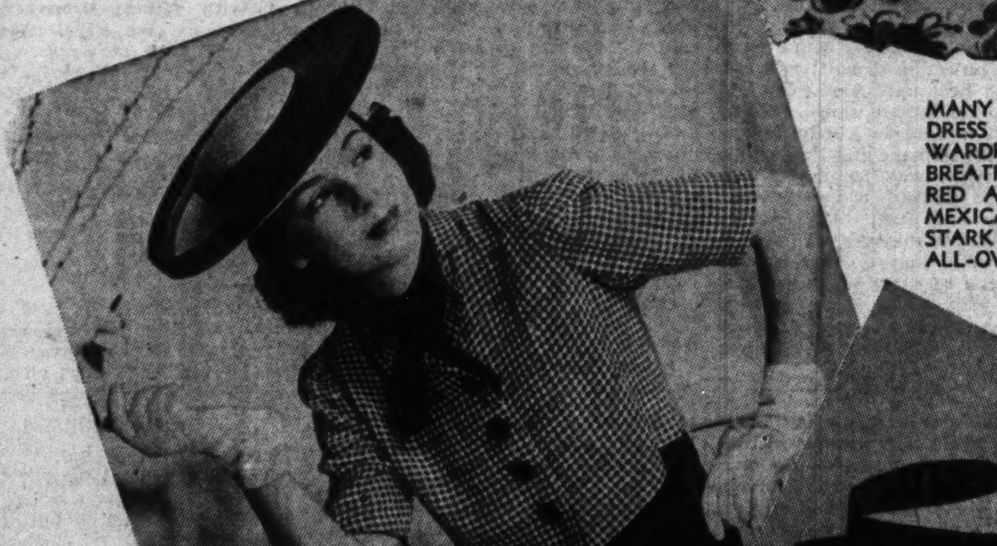


YOUTHFUL BUT VERY KNOWING IS THIS STAR PRINT PETTICOAT DRESS. THE FULL, GORED SKIRT IS MADE OVER A RUFFLED TAFFETA PETTICOAT, THE TAILORED BODICE CLOSES WITH STAR SHAPED PEARL BUTTONS, AND THE BELT IS PATENT LEATHER. IT CAN BE BOUGHT IN A NAVY, BLACK OR WINE GROUND WITH WHITE STARS.

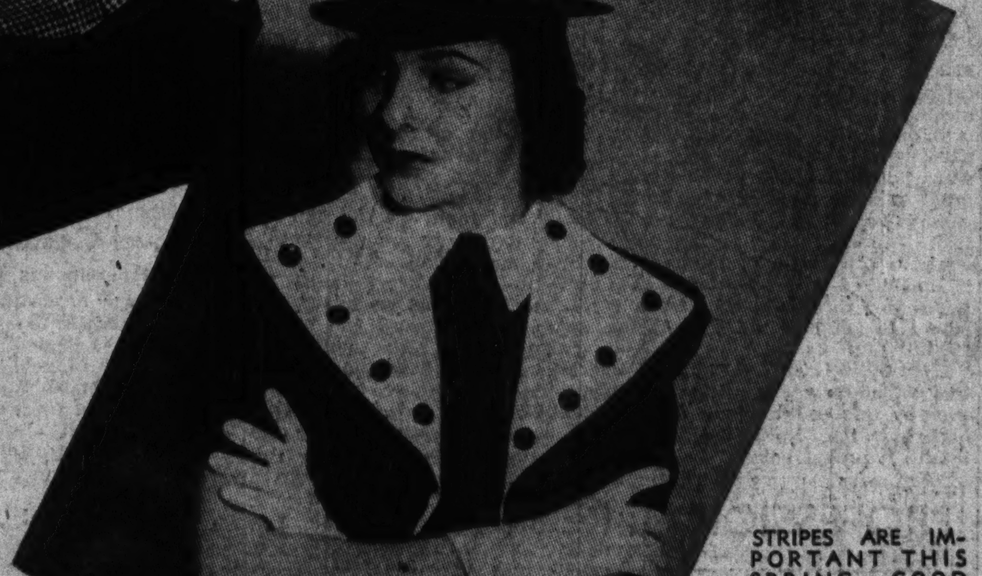
NEW YORK, April 2.

PRINTS, style experts say, are designed by the Paris houses with American women in mind. For no climate seems so well adapted to the designed fabrics as ours. Yet, ask any American man the favorite dress that his favorite female wears, and it will never be a print. Some audacious men, in fact, go so far as to say, "I'd really rather you didn't wear that messy looking floral number, my dear."

Well, American women are in luck this spring for there has seldom been such a collection of wearable jacket dresses which they find so practical a uniform. And American men are in luck, too, for the designs are not so much those all-over florals. Rather they are clear cool, well spaced sprigs of flowers, not to mention the even more prevalent checks and stripes and dots and plaids. And for evening, even, the flowers are so enormous, so brightly colored, so beautifully spaced on white or dark grounds, that the most art-conscious man will be impressed by them.



FOR SPRING AND ALL THROUGH THE SUMMER IS THIS BOLERO JACKET DRESS. THE NAVY DRESS IS SLIM AND ACCORDION PLEATED, THE SLEEVES SHORT, THE NECK TIES SIMPLY WITH A BOW, AND THE BODICE ZIPS DOWN THE FRONT. THE JACKET IS OF NAVY AND WHITE CHECK WITH A RED CROSS BAR, GIVING A PLAID EFFECT.



STRIPES ARE IMPORTANT THIS SPRING. GOOD LOOKING IS THE FABRIC IN THIS BOLERO ENSEMBLE. THE STRIPES ARE CHALK-LIKE ON A FINE NAVY WOOLEN. THE SKIRT IS SLIM, THE REMOVABLE JACKET HAS BUTTON-ON WHITE PIQUE LAPELS TO MATCH THE WHITE COLLAR OF THE FROCK. IN BLACK, TOO, AND INEXPENSIVE.

Most original in the new prints, of course, are the Molyneux fruit designs—in muted brown or a pale blue ground, or Schiaparelli's white and black circus characters on cyclamen, or her pink and white snails on black, but aside from these, the geometric lines and circles and checks far out-number the confused character prints.

The dresses underneath the bolero or fitted jackets this spring are simple and finished with a nice detail, so they can be worn without the jackets and with large brimmed hats later.

Stripes, really, look newer than any design this spring. They are used horizontally, diagonally, or straight up and down (plump) women please note.) Dots are sometimes small and neat and regularly spaced, but more frequently they are of different sizes and form an interesting geometric pattern. Sometimes they are used in flowing arch-like lines, to suggest a waterfall.

Many of the small, neat florals are in stripes. Many of the plaids are shadow-like in effect and give more the impression of a check at first glance. Look for the occurrence of a third color in these plaids—such as a red cross bar in a navy and white checked jacket over a blue dress. Pick up the red again in a patent leather bag, say, or the flower trimming for a navy sailor.

Among the less usual geometric designs are white stars, bow knots, lace effects. Charming is the use of embroidered motifs on a two-toned print. This is amusing in an imported fabric where white ballerinas dance all over the printed Oriental motif of a navy dress with tan figures.

The evening prints are unusually beautiful for spring. Flowers several times as big as life are even more brilliantly colored. There is much of the rich yellows and reds and blues associated with Mexican modern painters. Patou's giant purple poppy print will be seen, and Mainbocher's white feathers on black will get around in the afternoon, too.

If you choose your prints now with a view to wearing them through the summer, remember that a touch of white goes a long way, that it supplies marvelous possibilities for the use of fresh accessories. The less print, the more scattered the design, the cooler you'll look when it's very hot. Stripes and checks and plaids and dots look cooler than flowers, often, and a print jacket with a solid dress is apt to bore its wearer less than an all-over print ensemble.

Spring Combination

Purple and lavender no longer can be considered as colors to be worn by the older matron. Both of them are featured extensively for spring and often appear together. One attractive ensemble on display in town combines a fitted coat of purple crepe with a dress of sheer lavender crepe. Another reverses this theme by allying a printed frock which displays much violet in its design with a coat of lavender woolen.

Flowers on Lapels

All of the bugs and insects that have been fastened on coat lapels are getting competition from spring flowers and it looks as though the botanical variety of decoration will control the field before many weeks have passed. Gold metal, enamel in bright colors and metal pieces set with stones all are designed to resemble floral shapes.

Spring Styles Have Assumed Youthful Flair

'Little-Girl' Fashions in Vogue for Mothers as Well as for Daughters.

SPRING fashions have assumed such a youthful flair that "little-girl" styles are in vogue for mothers as well as for daughters. Eton jackets, boleros, pleated skirts, jumper frocks and sailor hats are some of the juvenile modes that are making it difficult to tell the young from the old.

Costumes which combine pleated skirts with jaunty short jackets are among the youngest to gain wide acceptance this season. The practical daytime suit, once so trim of skirt and so dignified in its entire silhouette, has become decidedly girlish. Pleats are arranged from a yoke if the owner insists upon a slender hipline, but more often start at he normal waistline. The jacket is boxy or fitted, but it always is short in accord with the young appeal and theme. Stiff little collars are being worn with tailored blouses that accompany some of these suits and, needless to report, a flowing middy tie is an essential accessory.

EVERYONE regards the bolero as youthful, regardless of how long or how short, how flaring or how fitted the designer prefers to make it. It, to, has become a part of the tailored mode for spring and often appears with a blouse having a juvenile type of Peter Pan or pointed collar. When developed of navy blue fabric having a serge-like weave, a suit with bolero and pleated skirt typifies in every way the youthful emphasis upon daytime clothes for spring.

Jumper frocks and suspender skirts are being adopted by many women now. Although the majority of these costumes are created for active or spectator sportswear there are some dressier ensembles employing guimpes or suspenders. The sailor collar is another evidence of the "little-girl" vogue in women's clothes. It is seen on coats, on blouses and on dresses. Ric rac braid, incidentally, is a fvorite mode of trimming.

—o-o—

SAILOR HATS that have upturned brims and are worn far back on the head continue their popularity and seem so suitable to accompany the pleated-skirt and short-jacketed costumes that they are chosen of straw as well as felt. Bonnets, chin straps and velvet ribbons that tie under the chin also are fashionable and as young as any millinery styles could be.

Footwear also shows certain influence of the youthful trend. Low-heeled pumps, for example, have tailored grosgrain bows, while low-heeled T-strap sandals are sufficiently popular to make one wonder whether mother is wearing daughter's shoes.

New Monotone Sheers Arrive

EVERY season fashion writers are thrilled and surprised to find so many new styles, colors or fabrics that carry out ideas we have all looked for in previous seasons, and found impossible to get.

How many times have you asked for a certain color or style, and watched the clerk raise a disdainful eyebrow at your apparent lack of fashion knowledge—all because you have asked for it too soon; all because you know what you want and can't get it. However, stores all over the country are now stressing the functional qualities of their fashions. Part of this has come about since the last general meeting of the Fashion Group, which discussed the influences on both style and interior decoration, and made functional qualities of paramount importance. Much of it, however, is the work of American design.

Ensembles of monotone sheers are due to make spring and summer history. First of all, they feature beautiful silk fabrics sheer enough to wear on a hot day, but of a quality that has a firm, dependable look about it. The prints are in the kind of monotones or one-color-and-white combination that is always a desirable style note.

As far as the practical quality is concerned, the jackets are removable, leaving short sleeved dresses fit for dinner wear or other dressy events that are not formal. These frocks are of exceptional workmanship, with new necklines and flattering draped and fitted details.

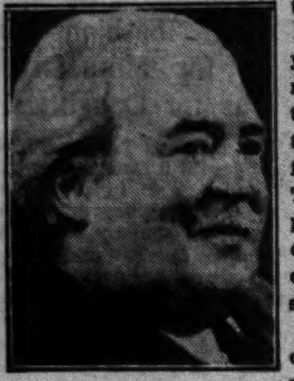
RECTOR'S Own RECIPES

By GEORGE RECTOR

THERE is no doubt but what Delmonico's was one of the best restaurants in the world. I remember when I was a kid Verona Jarbeau was starred in a musical show "Delmonico's at Six." The title of the play was quite appropriate because dining at six in those days was the vogue.



GEORGE RECTOR

Things have changed a great deal. Can you imagine anybody sitting down to dinner at 6 p. m. in the swank places around the country? Why, 6 p. m. is the peak of the cocktail hour. Seven-thirty to 9 is the fashionable hour to dine in these days. The shows in the theaters start later. The places that have those elaborate cabarets don't get under way until 8 o'clock; otherwise, I find night life about the same.

Actors, writers, in fact almost every one connected with the theater enjoy night life. Pete Dailey, for many years with Weber and Fields, hardly ever got to bed before dawn. Some fellow actor in the Lambs Club asked him what hour in the day he arose. Pete said: "Oh! about 5 p. m.," and then added, "If I get up earlier, I don't meet anybody I know."

—o—o—

SPEAKING OF DELMONICO'S, I received a letter from an old friend who is now retired and living in Southern California. He wanted the recipe for Ragout of Beef a la Deutsch. This dish was named after a bon vivant by the name of William Deutsch, one of Delmonico's best customers. It's a dish which calls for the tip ends of the tenderloin of beef. We served it in Rector's, but we never got any culinary citation for it.

—o—o—

I wanted to know more about this famous Ragout a la Deutsch so I went over to Delmonico's one evening and ordered it. It was delicious! Our chef tried very hard to match it, but some one little thing in the sauce was missing. We got it all right within a couple of weeks by hiring out of Delmonico's the sauce cook who made it. This chap was only 28 years old and two years later was appointed chef of Rector's, perhaps the youngest chef ever to have had charge of a kitchen in an important restaurant. So now, my dear readers, I will introduce to you the recipe for Ragout a la Deutsch.

—o—o—

● THE TAIL ENDS of the large-tenderloin taper down to a rather thin point, which could not be formed into a filet mignon, so every few days we were stocked up on these filet tips. Now I am not asking you to purchase these filet ends, because they would be terribly expensive. You can, however, purchase about two pounds of sirloin and ask the butcher to slice it about one-quarter of an inch thick and then cut in irregular size pieces about the size of a half dollar.

—o—o—

Suppose we start with two cupfuls of this thinly sliced sirloin. Now melt in a saucepan three or four tablespoons of butter and when very hot toss in the meat and also one-half cup of lamb kidneys thinly sliced, Season with salt and pepper. Brown and cook meat and kidneys quickly over hot fire. On the side have ready one-half cup of boiling water in which has been dissolved two teaspoons of extract of beef. Pour this in the pan. Also add one-half cup of cooked potatoes thinly sliced and one-half cup of green peppers thinly sliced and previously blanched. Stir well and let simmer for about five minutes and then finish it with one tablespoon of butter.

Ragout a la Deutsch is not exactly a stew, so there should not be too much sauce, nor should the sauce be too thin. You are going to like this ragout very much and I am sure you wil serve it often in your home.

● I LIKE THE WAY the Bohemians cook sauerkraut and spareribs. We all know sauerkraut requires long, slow cooking. Pour two quarts of sauerkraut in a large heavy pot, along with one cup of water. When it starts to boil, add one-third cup of bacon fat, two tablespoons of sugar, two apples sliced and two grated raw potatoes. Let this all simmer, covered for about one hour. While the sauerkraut is cooking, place a nice strip, say about two pounds, of spareribs in a pan and start them to cook in moderate oven for about one-half hour, basting frequently. Remove the ribs from the oven and put them right in with the sauerkraut and cook slowly together for a good two or three hours with cover on pot. Stir occasionally and add more water if necessary. If you like caraway seeds they, too, may be added; one teaspoonful will suffice.

A few years ago, I wrote into one of my articles for the Saturday Evening Post a recipe for Boston baked beans. I thought it was a good recipe, until a woman up New England way wrote me about her version of baked beans. I cooked them and they were the best I ever tasted. May I pass this recipe on to you? This is the woman's title for Boston baked beans, "1001st Recipe for Baked Beans." The only good one!

Cover two cups of pea beans with four cups of cold water and place in a cool place to soak overnight. In the morning, if the beans have not absorbed all the water, drain it off and save it, although this proportion is just about right for complete absorption of the water. Start the beans to cook with fresh cold water to cover, about three and one-half cups, and cook over low flame in a tightly covered saucepan.

—o—o—

● BEANS MUST NOT BOIL, so remember to keep the flame low and the saucepan tightly covered while they are simmering. By doing this our process becomes one of steaming and the beans will swell and gradually absorb some of the water. One hour of simmering (from the time the simmering point is reached) is ample time to prepare the beans for the bean pot and oven cooking.

Carefully drain the beans, saving the water. Place a slice of salt pork on the bottom of the earthen pot and pour in the beans. Now bury a piece of scored salt pork weighing about one-half pound in the center of the beans and prepare the seasoning as follows:

One-half cup of Puerto Rico molasses mixed with one-half cup of bean water or plain boiling water, one-half teaspoon of mustard, one-quarter teaspoon of paprika and one scant teaspoon of finely chopped onion. Mix thoroughly and pour over beans, lifting the beans carefully with a spoon, so the seasoning will go to the bottom of the bean pot. Cover the bean pot and place in a slow oven to bake for six hours.

Once an hour, add a little water, lifting the beans gently so that water will go through. The water should be about even with the beans. If too much water the beans will be stewed, if too little, they will dry.

Uncover the bean pot the last hour of cooking so the pork may become crisp and browned. Serve with Boston brown bread. A real treat.

Use china of a different pattern from that used by the rest of the family on the tray for the sick room. It gives a note of interest to the invalid and makes it easy to keep the dishes separate for special washing. The finest china should appear on the invalid's tray to create an appetite just by daintiness.

Outdoor Games For Your Yard In Summertime

Do You Simply Loathe Them? Or Do You Just Think You Do?

By Josephine Walter

THIS is the time of year when even those people who take only the mildest interest in their yards and gardens are likely to go slightly haywire. Having seen profusions of bloom at the flower show and having poured over seedmen's catalogues, it is most difficult for the flower fancier to restrain himself from using every available bit of space to try the new varieties and specialties that are introduced each season.

However, before you devote every nook and cranny to that new species of wistaria or have roses practically growing out of the chimney, give a thought to games. Yes, I said games, and if you are one of those people who simply loathe games, this is addressed particularly to you. For, whether you believe it or not, a rousing game of croquet played on even the hottest summer day will go far toward making you forget the climate.

Today, in laying out a yard plan, most professional landscapers as well as amateurs, allow some spot, in even the smallest plot, for a game area. For there are many types of games which take up very little space and can be tucked into a corner of even the tiniest lawn. And, while you are learning to become a sports enthusiast, you can always console yourself with the fact that the exercise is good for the figure and better at that than doing the daily dozen on the floor in your room.

OF COURSE, there's not much use in talking about such things as tennis courts and swimming pools 'cause if you have enough money to afford such things you probably don't need my advice on how or where to put them. However, many people, of even modest circumstances, have discovered that a small swimming pool costs no more in upkeep than a summer vacation and that in the long run it is really a better investment. A small wading pool is possible of achievement by practically any master of the house, if he will expend, mainly, a little time and patience upon it.

Before I list some of the games which are available for practically any type of yard, I want to say a word or two about where courts and such should be placed. There are two schools of thought on this matter and in addition, naturally, the size of the yard is a determining factor. If there is room enough, I prefer that a court or game field be placed in some rather secluded spot with decorative planting around it so that when it isn't in use, it does not interrupt more pleasing views. However, many people, especially those who devote quite a bit of time to these outdoor games, feel that they should be placed in direct relationship to the porch or terrace, so that those who are not playing may be able to watch the sports in comfort. If, however, the court is set at some distance, there should be comfortable chairs or swings placed around for those who are resting or watching.

AND NOW for the games themselves. I have already mentioned croquet, that game that Alexander Woollcott has put back in circulation. And in case anyone thinks it a sissy game, I might mention the fact that we have three sprained ankles, two broken toes and a dislocated shoulder to out credit, in our own circle. Of course, your regular lawn may be used as a croquet field, with the wickets being taken up when not in use, unless you have a great deal of space and want the game in readiness at a moment's notice. The field we play on, at a friend's, adjoins an orchard which is considered within bounds and it takes you three strokes and four curses to get back on the playing field.

Badminton is an old English custom which is rapidly being taken over by this country, and a grand game it is, too. Not as strenuous as tennis, it proves popular even with beginners. It requires a space about 20 by 40 feet and anyone can make the court as it does not have to be overly smooth. The game is played with raquets similar to those used for squash and a "bird" with feathers that is kept in the air, so it is not necessary to have a smooth surface for it to bounce on.

—o-o—

THE BADMINTON COURT may be used for other games as well. There is a game called miniten, with two large disks attached together into which you place your hand and then bat the ball. The badminton court may be used for this game as well.

Deck tennis always proves popular and may even be played with a rope strung between two trees, All it requires is some gaily colored rings and a lot of vim and vigor. Another game that requires no special space and very little equipment is lawn Hi-Li, or trinet, as it is sometimes called. The only things needed are a pair of scoop-shaped baskets and a ball to be tossed back and forth.

Then, of course, there is that grand old-fashioned game of horseshoes, which even the most modern gent is apt to adore. And such games as quoits and lawn bowls, in up-to-date styles resembling clowns, penguins and the like. But if you put in any or all of these games be prepared for a gregarious summer for you will probably be over-run with gaming enthusiasts.

POTATO TRICKS

This Simple Vegetable Can Be Used as a Base or Background for Unusual Flavor Combinations.

A FRAGILE POTATO ROLL FILLED WITH CREAM OF CALF'S BRAINS.

SIMPLICITY ITSELF—POTATOES WITH POOR MAN'S SAUCE.

A POTATO! A simple vegetable, composed mainly of starch, minerals, protein and water. Yet the bland potato, with very little expense, can be used as a base or a background for startling flavor combinations.

Variations of boiled, fried, baked and mashed potatoes, new sauces, new soups, new meat and potato combinations, recipes of foreign origin, strange and good; family dishes making a niche in the palate's memory; these are the types of recipes offered today.

Here, for example, is a mixture very similar to a potato souffle. It is baked in a jelly roll pan, and filled with a mixture of creamed sweetbreads or calf's brain. A trifle delicate to make but no more so than an ordinary tender jelly roll. This certainly reaches extravagant heights of texture and flavor.

POTATO ROLL

One-half cup butter.
Four eggs, separated.
Three medium-sized, cold boiled potatoes, riced.
One-fourth cup sifted flour.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Two-thirds cup heavy sour cream.

Cream butter until soft; add egg yolks and beat until blended. Add potatoes, flour and salt. Stir in cream, then fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Grease and line a jelly roll pan with wax paper. Grease paper and spread batter evenly. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit) 20 minutes. Turn onto clean towel, remove paper, spread with cream of calf's brain and roll as for jelly roll. Place on hot platter and serve at once. Approximate yield: four to six portions. Garnish with parsley.

CREAM OF CALF'S BRAIN

One calf's brain.
One tablespoon chopped parsley.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Dash of pepper.
One tablespoon butter.
One tablespoon flour.
Three tablespoons milk.

Wash brain, remove membrane, and soak in cold water one-half hour. Rinse, cover with boiling water, add one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon vinegar and boil gently 15 minutes. Plunge into cold water to make firm, drain and cut in small pieces. Add parsley, salt and pepper and mix well. Melt butter, blend in flour, then add milk. Add calf's brain and stir until creamy. Use as filling for Potato Roll.

POTATOES WITH POOR MAN'S SAUCE

Six medium sized potatoes.
One-half clove garlic, finely sliced.
One sprig of parsley, chopped.
Two tablespoons butter.
Salt.
Pepper.
Two cups boiling water.
Six hard-cooked eggs.

Pare and slice potatoes thin. Saute garlic and parsley in butter two minutes, add salt, pepper, water and potatoes. Cook uncovered 20 minutes or until potatoes are tender and water almost evaporated, leaving a thin sauce on potatoes. Turn into serving dish and garnish with eggs, cut into quarters. Approximate yield: six portions.

Here is a dumpling with a pleasing and unusual flavor twist.

POTATO BALLS

Three large, cold boiled potatoes.
One egg, well beaten.
One-fourth teaspoon nutmeg.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One-half cup sifted flour.
One slice bread.
One-third cup butter.
Three medium-sized onions.

Grate or rice potatoes. Add egg, nutmeg, salt and flour, mixing well. Cut bread into small cubes and brown in two tablespoons of butter. Add to potatoes and mix well. Form mixture into small balls and cook in simmering water 15 minutes. Slice onions thin and saute in remaining butter. Push onions to one side and brown potato balls lightly, adding a little more butter if necessary. Transfer to hot serving platter and garnish with onions. Approximate yield: six portions.

Now for some sweet potato soup. As you read the ingredients over, you savor the flavor blend in the imagination, and it is just as good as it sounds . . . but rich.

SWEET POTATO SOUP

Six medium-sized sweet potatoes.
One quart milk.
Two cups chicken stock.
One teaspoon salt.
Dash of pepper.
One-fourth teaspoon nutmeg.
One cup heavy cream, whipped.
Croutons.

Cook potatoes in boiling salted water until tender. Mash or force through ricer. Stir in milk slowly, then add chicken stock and seasonings. Heat slowly almost to boiling point, and stir in cream. Serve with croutons. Approximate yield: Six to eight portions.

For a different potato salad try this recipe.

SALAD ROUGE

Three cups cold mashed potatoes.
Four slices crisp cooked bacon, chopped.
One medium-sized onion, grated.
One-half cup celery, minced.
Two tablespoons French dressing.
One-fourth cup mayonnaise.
Two teaspoons paprika.
Lettuce.

Combine ingredients in order given, mixing with a fork until blended. Chill. Serve neat scoops on lettuce leaves and garnish, if desired, with additional mayonnaise and slices of ripe olive. Approximate yield: Six portions.

Here is a family favorite, called Potatoes on the Stump. Neither plain baked nor scalloped, these have a flavor as individual as a brand-new type of vegetable.

POTATOES ON THE STUMP

Six large potatoes.
One-half cup butter.
Salt.
Pepper.
Paprika.

Pare and slice potatoes very thin and let soak in cold water 15 minutes. Drain and dry on towel. Place potatoes in casserole, slices overlapping in spiral design. Dot each layer with butter and sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika. Cover very closely, so that no steam will come from dish, and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) one hour and 15 minutes. Remove cover and cut potatoes in six portions. If desired, turn over each section without breaking shapes, and bake 15 minutes longer. Approximate yield: Six portions.

BROILED MUSHROOM SURPRISE

Six large mushrooms.
Two tablespoons butter.
Two medium-sized potatoes.
One tablespoon milk.
One egg yolk, slightly beaten.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Dash of pepper.
Dash of paprika.
Two tablespoons toasted bread crumbs.

Wash and peel mushrooms. Remove stems, cut in small pieces and saute in one tablespoon butter. Cook and mash potatoes, adding chopped mushroom stems, milk, egg yolk and seasonings. Dot mushroom caps with remaining butter and broil 10 minutes, turning frequently until tender. Fill with potato mixture, sprinkle with crumbs and brown in broiler. Approximate yield: Six portions.

Herewith is submitted a recipe with a Russian slant.

POTATO BLINI MUSCOVITE

Five medium-sized potatoes.
One-fourth cup butter, melted.
One-half cup sifted flour.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Five eggs, separated.
One cup heavy sour cream.
One small jar caviar.

Cook potatoes in rapidly boiling salted water until tender. Force through ricer, add butter, flour, salt and beaten egg yolks. Mix until blended and add three tablespoons sour cream. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Drop batter by spoonsful on hot griddle and cook until light brown on both sides. Serve each with sour cream and a little caviar. Approximate yield: Twelve cakes.

MELTING POTATOES

Six medium-sized potatoes.
One cup seasoned chicken stock.
One tablespoon butter.

Pare and cook potatoes in rapidly boiling salted water 20 minutes or until almost tender. Drain and press each into a perfect round in a cloth. Place in small casserole, add stock and dot with butter. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) 20 minutes or until stock is absorbed, turning potatoes carefully at frequent intervals. Approximate yield: Six portions.

CREPES AU KIRSCH

Three eggs, separated.
Two tablespoons sugar.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One-half cup melted butter.
One cup milk.
One-half cup flour, sifted.
One-half cup powdered sugar.
One-half cup Kirsch.

Beat yolks well; add sugar, salt and two tablespoons melted butter. Add milk and flour, beating until smooth. Stir mixture into stiffly beaten egg whites and spoon small portions of the batter into a greased six-inch spider. When slightly browned, turn and brown other side. Roll and place over heat in chafing dish. When four or five are made, sprinkle liberally with sugar, melted butter and Kirsch. Light liquor and burn until it goes out. Add other pancakes as they are cooked, and repeat additions of butter, sugar and Kirsch, serving as needed. Approximate yield: Six portions.

Greengage Plum Cups

One tablespoon gelatin.
Two tablespoons cold water.
Three-fourth cup canned greengage plum syrup, heated.
One-fourth cup hot milk.
Two tablespoons orange juice.
One-fourth cup honey.
One cup drained greengage plums, mashed.
One egg white.
One-half cup heavy cream, whipped.

Soften gelatin in cold water; dissolve in syrup and add milk, orange juice and honey. Chill until thickened, then fold in plum pulp and egg white. Turn into small ramekins and chill until firm. Serve with a spoonful of whipped cream. Approximate yield: Six portions.

Novel Costume Jewelry

Schiaparelli has some new ideas in the way of costume jewelry. One of her latest novelties is an ear clip that is shaped like a miniature ear. It is of gold that is studded with diamonds. Another novelty is a triple ring for wear on the little finger and it also combines gold with the brilliant stones.

"THAT'S all very well, D ald, but the writing is bad that I can't give full credit for the composition. don't you write so people ca least read it?"

Donald wrinkled his brow twitched his nose. Why didn't write better when he tried hard? Other boys that didn't half so hard wrote beautifully. was out of luck, that's all.

Report card day came al Donald had good marks except penmanship. That was D a what was worse, there was a on the card that said, "If Do took pains with his writing he co be on the Honor Roll."

If there was one thing more th any other that mother wanted was that she could send the we ly paper out to grandpa with D ald's name published in it as honor pupil in Greenway Sch Martha's children always had th names on the roll and grandpa delighted about it. Here was D getting no honors when he mi just as well be a star.

ON THE FLICKER FRONT

By H. H. NIEMEYER

HOLLYWOOD, April 2.

WE haven't mentioned Idwal Jones lately. Not because we were off the Sage of Hollywood, who happens to be one picture publicity man who is on the up and up with the newspaper correspondents—when the cow-eyed hero of a cinema classic in the making fails to show up for work Idwal doesn't pass out the word that the star has had a sudden attack of the epizooty unless that happens to be the truth. If it is a return of the old bottle trouble Idwal says so. Maybe you can't print it, the libel laws being what they are, but at least you know what's what.

No, the reason we haven't quoted Jones lately is because he has been dashing around the country to stir up interest in C. B. DeMille's "Buccaneer"—for a living—and chat with book reviewers and managing editors and persons like that about the war in Spain, the trouble in China, Hitler's latest moves and what is happening in Russia. For Idwal Jones is one of the best posted men on most subjects—including the films and the shortcomings of some of the men who make them—we happen to have run across.

We mentioned Russia. That is one of his pet topics so it is small wonder that he came back from the "Buccaneer" boosting tour pretty well sold on the abilities of Akim Tamiroff, who has a fat part in the show.

"Stars," says Jones, "will do very well to dress up the marquee of the picture houses, but if the lines form both right and left at the box office, and a policeman keeps the crowd moving, then you may suspect there's a character actor in the cast. It may be Spencer Tracy, Porter Hall or any one of a half dozen dynamic fellows that make a picture worth seeing for themselves alone. Just now its Akim Tamiroff."

—o-o—

IT HAPPENED when DeMille displayed the premier of this film in New Orleans, where it was made and where Lafitte (played by Frederic March, the star) is still a demi-god, it was the chunky, sallow Russian actor, Tamiroff, who got mobbed by the local enthusiasts and had to be rescued by the police. At least that is Idwal's story and we have already pointed out he is inclined to be truthful.

Jones, who was Tamiroff's companion on that occasion, says the actor didn't mind it very much. After all, mobbing is a form of applause. He regarded it not as a personal triumph but as a compliment to his old school, the Moscow Art Theater, where, he says, he learned to act. Most stars look upon the screen as a mirror that reflects themselves. Tamiroff, sitting in a balcony seat at that New Orleans theater, bit his fingers, scowled and stared critically as the bluff, semi-comic, grotesque yet somehow heroic figure of the Napoleonic gunner, Dominique You. It was a part he had created outside of himself. A figure with a false nose, huge mustache and padded midriff. A figure he had kept alive for months while De Mille was filming the tale.

"Well, it is good, I think," he admits. "With that part, I am afraid I couldn't have done better. My teachers in Moscow, in the old days, might have done better with it—Stanislavsky or Kachalov, the greatest Hamlet of Russia."

—o-o—

TOO MANY YEARS in Stanislavsky's group have made Tamiroff shrink from the beam of publicity. The trouble with acting, he feels, is that it is made subordinate to the actor—which is all wrong.

"We had that nonsense knocked out of our heads in pre-revolutionary Moscow," he says. "The posters gave the name of the drama and its author. No other names. And when the curtain fell, we slipped out of the side door along with the musicians and the stage carpenters—unknown and unsung.

"The one exception was when an actor toppled off the stage into the drums, and thereby crashed into print. We quaked. Better for that actor if he had never been born. He had done a deed that we all trembled at. What a furious rage Stanislavsky would be in the next morning! But he forgave the culprit. Because the heading was funny: 'Actor in "The Lower Depths" Falls Still Lower.'

"Often we played 'The Cherry Orchard' by Chekov, and the dramatist's widow acted with us. She worked hard and modestly, and at no more pay, and slipped out with the rest at night into the falling snow, with a shawl over her head, and trudged afoot to her room. No, there wasn't much glamour for actors—nor many kopeks. The chief reward was the satisfaction in being the small part of a perfect performance."

—o-o—

HE REMEMBERS when he was standing among the 500 from whom the director was to choose just six for admittance to his troupe. Most of them were under 40 years of age. Stanislavsky shook his head and remarked to each:

"Go and learn some more about life. You are too young to have had any experience of it."

Tamiroff thought it was all up with him, but the director said:

"You look as if you might become an actor in time. Here, read these lines."

He read them well enough, and was admitted.

"A great school, and a hard one," says Tamiroff. "After three years of it I came to New York with the Russian players that gave 'The Cherry Orchard,' 'The Lower Depths' and 'Three Sisters' and I stayed on, to play for three years in 'Chauve Souris.'"

He played in several Broadway dramas, and came to Hollywood first in "Wunderbar" with Al Jolson, and remained to act in a movie, "O. K. America," and struck fire in a small part in "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer." You remember him, of course, in "Louis Pasteur" and as the tyrant in "The General Died at Dawn."

Tamiroff likes straight dramatic roles, but he prefers costume drama. Thinks that if you have a false nose and eyebrows and wear a cloak, you can swagger and cut loose for all you are worth. But if you have to wear a business suit and act a banker or dentist or hotel manager, you are cramped. You look too much like yourself. Very few actors can appear versatile in a series of roles that haven't much make-up. Tamiroff says that Spencer Tracy, his favorite actor in Hollywood, can.

CLOTHES MAKE the MEN---CRAZY!

And All Because Women and Tailors Have Joined Forces in Determined Effort to Make Husbands Spruce Up; Writer Still Votes for the Old Blue Serge.

By LEONARD HALL

RALLY, men! For the annual drive to turn us into dressy dudes is now on!

When it comes to coatings, vestings and pantings, we are a die-hard, conservative lot. Occasionally a he-orchid appears, but all most of us want is a simple jacket to cover the torso, and a pair of pants with the usual two legs. But will the tailors and our women folks leave us in peace with our shiny blue serge? They will not. Every year the cutters and basters launch a vicious attack on our colorless rig-outs, and their strongest allies are our women, whose pet idea is to turn the old male moths into pretty butterflies.

The tailors, almost daily, stir up the situation with their plotting, which includes picking the usual best-dressed gents. President Roosevelt won the most recent crown of love and beauty for his appearance in a double-breasted dinner jacket, or "tux," as we called it at old North High. A Clark Gable, who does something in the films, got the nod as sports-wear king; "Luscious Lucius" Beebe, New York newspaper man on the hotspot-shift, was judged best dressed for whisking around in cutaways and ruby jewelry.

The final objective of the tailors, abetted by the girls, is to colorize the drab and conventionally-cut clothes we wear by choice.

But tailors are only cream-puff punchers when compared with the women.

When they get all togged out like lilies of the field for a cocktail debauch, they don't want to drag along a mess of jimpson weed miscalled a man. They want their boy to look so dandy that all the other girls will twitter: "Who is that thu-rilling-looking thing with Gwladys?" So we're in for it.

My case is typical, for my storm and strife (Alice Hughes) is a power in the Fashion World, and we had no sooner met and ignited than she began infecting me with clothes consciousness. Gripped by love, as I was, I gave in. At the time I owned one suit—nominally black, but growing green from age—and two neckties, both polka-dotted with cafeteria gravy. She promptly burned these dismal rags, and turned my poor old body over to a first-rate tailor. As for haberdashery, she soon bulldozed me out of pure white shirts and into dark-colored, or thousand-mile chemises, complete with the proper ties. I admit that the general effect was good. If the girls didn't gasp with delight when I stumbled into the parlor, at least they didn't laugh.

The new trends in men's clothing carry many blessings—especially in the type called "casual," which in the old days would be called "slightly sloppy." Take the vogue for wearing coats which don't match the pants, and that's a honey. Every man's closet contains a few suit jackets whose pants have long gone past the patching point. Once mere space-wasters, those dear old coats are now valuable assets.

The king of casual suit wearers is Fred "Rubberlegs" Astaire, whose vestments are imported at vast cost from Bond street and Saville Row.

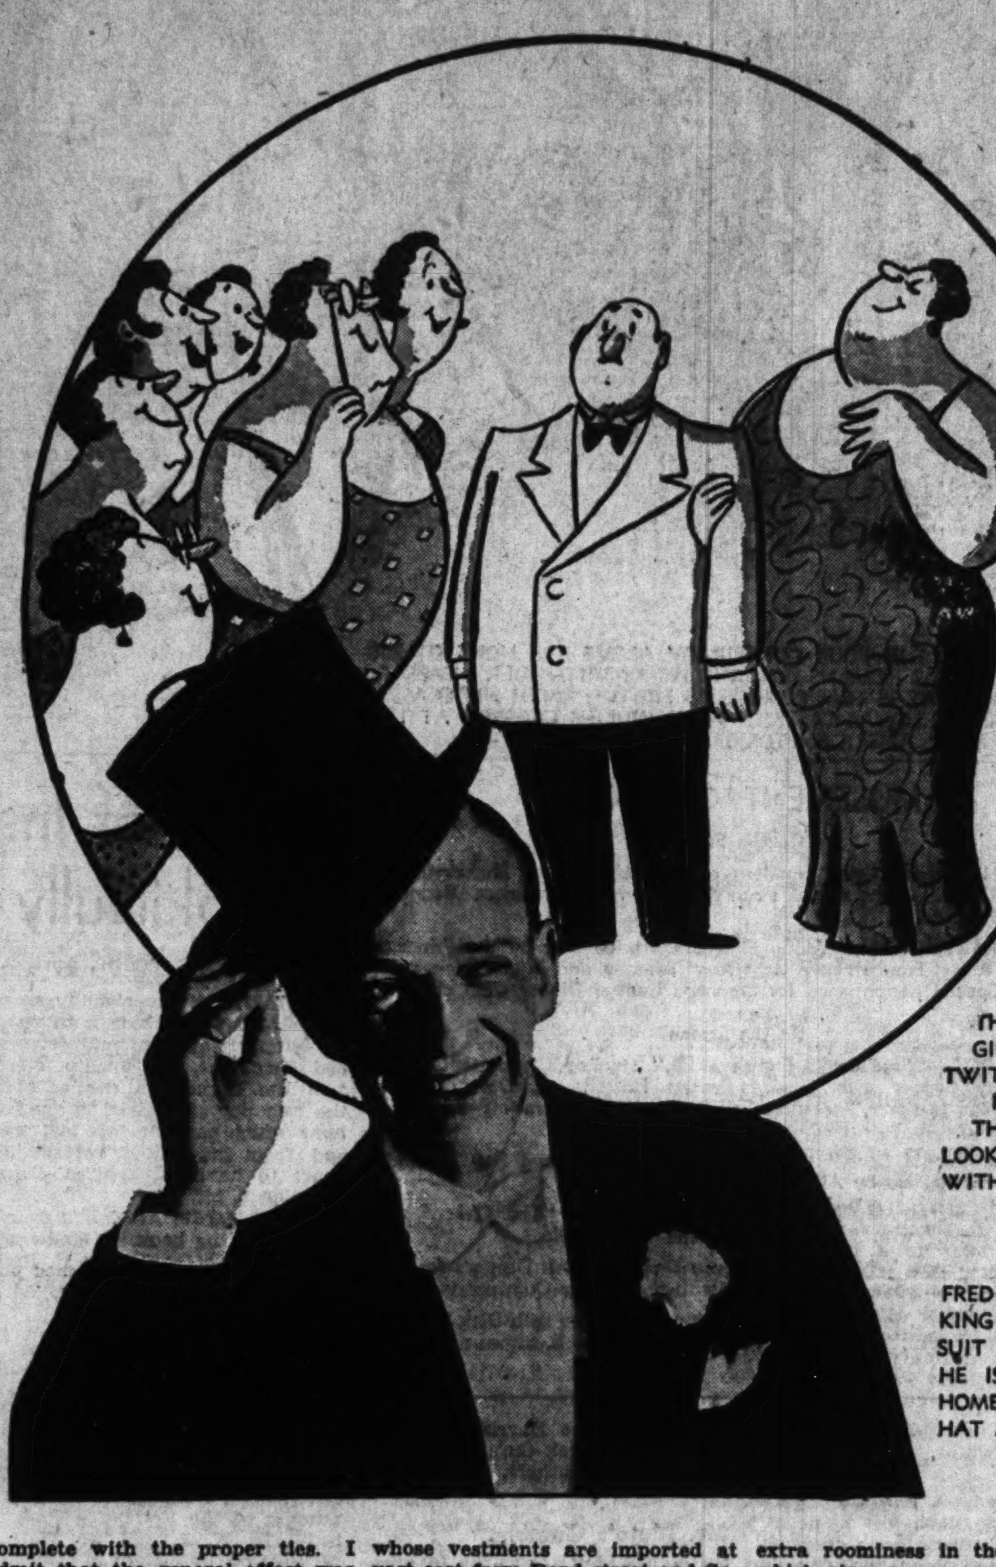
The efforts of the women to spruce us up were rewarded when they discovered the modern cut called "the English drape." This sort of swank suiting has nice shoulders to build up the chicken-breasted, high-peaked lapels and a neatly nipped waist. And the trousers are roomy at the top, and pleated. Twenty years ago a man would have gone crazy and cut people if anyone tried to put him in pleated pants—but today they are worn amiably by box-fighters, bowling champions and those gangsters still outside the cooler.

The cute trick in this dido is extra roominess in the shoulders, which gives more ease and play in forking up the ham and cabbage.

The tailors now say that no less than three-fourths of the men's raiment in the country is chosen by women, and that our mousehood far outruns our manhood.

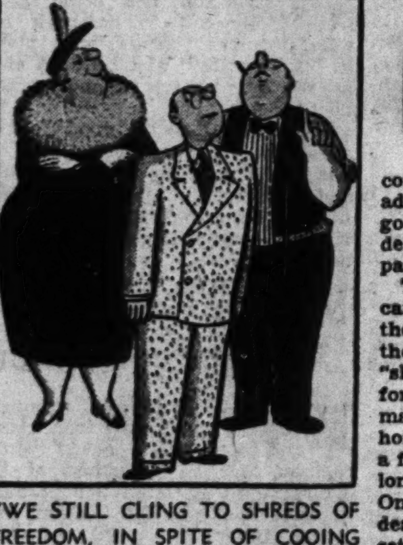
But all is not lost. Only the other day I sneaked into the tailor shop, sneered down a fancy stripe picked for me by the little woman, and chose a plain but handsome blue, but don't tell her!

Despite all the attacks, we American men are stubborn and we'll keep on dropping into our pet shop and mumbling: "Well, Jake—just show me something in a blue serge."



THE OTHER GIRLS WILL TWITTER, "WHO IS THAT THRILLING-LOOKING THING WITH GLADYS?"

FRED ASTAIRE . . KING OF CASUAL SUIT WEARERS; HE IS ALSO AT HOME IN TOP-HAT AND TAILS.



"WE STILL CLING TO SHREDS OF FREEDOM, IN SPITE OF COOING TAILORS AND BROW-BEATING WOMEN!"

Neckwear counters are blooming with colored gilets and lace—the pale pinks, blues and yellows outnumbering white in many instances.

Life and Work Of the Curies Full of Thrills

Doctor Pays Tribute to Them in Commenting on Book, "Madame Curie."

By
Logan Clendening, M. D.

OUT of the welter of halfbaked books, out of the milling mass of shrill specious celebrities of our times, comes one arresting volume, the record of two noble lives—"Madame Curie"—which tells of the life work of Marie and Pierre Curie, the discoverers of radium.

Theirs was a strange mixture of romanticism, mysticism and hard-headed scientific ability. How the two sensitive souls who had ruled love and marriage out of their lives that they might bring independence to their vocation, suddenly found their souls fused in a passionate love affair, how mutually stirred by the imaginative possibilities of Becquerel's discovery of a spontaneous emanation of rays from uranium salts, how in a miserable old shed, with crude apparatus, stirring all day long a mass in ebullition in a cauldron with an iron rod nearly as big as herself, the best and happiest years of Mme. Curie's life were spent, how they naively wondered "what IT would look like," never losing faith in "ITS" existence or their ability to isolate it; how Pierre hoped "IT" would have a beautiful color, how finally, 45 months after they announced its probable existence, Marie isolated a decigram of pure radium, how by a happy accident Becquerel found, as he was carrying a piece around in his pocket, that it would destroy skin tissue and they knew that their discovery was not simply an advance in pure physics, but that it had a use in the treatment of cancer—it would be a dull clod who was not deeply moved by this story.

But the finest part of all, to me, is the decision they made as to their ownership of radium. Pierre had received a letter from some technicians in America who wanted to exploit radium.

"We have two choices," he explained. "We can describe the results of our research without reserve, including the processes of purification"——

Marie made a mechanical gesture of approval.

"Yes, naturally."

"Or else we can consider ourselves the 'inventors,' patent the technique of treating pitch blende and assure ourselves of the rights over the manufacture of radium throughout the world."

Marie said: "It is impossible. It would be contrary to the scientific spirit."

To appease his conscience, to be certain that she understood all the implications of the decision, Pierre dwelt on it, mentioning that dream of their hearts.

"We could have a fine laboratory, too."

Marie thought this over and said, "Physicists always publish their researches completely. If our discovery has a commercial future, that is an accident by which we must not profit. And radium is going to be of use in treating disease. It is impossible to take advantage of that."

RIGHT FROM THE PADDOCK

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

WE have never boosted nor rapped the habit of betting on hoss skirmishes at the Southern tracks. Everybody has a different idea of where to hide his money.

—o-o—

However, it seems that we have been touting certain gentlemen off on the merits of the giant whippets. Our attempts at half-baked philosophy cover secret information.

—o-o—

It remained for a Chicago lad to decipher the code in "Life's greatest daily double is health and happiness."

—o-o—

Here is his letter to the bug:

My dear Mr. Baer:

I want to world to know that I think you are the best handicapper to be found anywhere. In a recent column you said "life's greatest daily double is health and happiness."

So right away I found the racing section of the newspapers. I looked over the entries for the first and second races at Hialeah Park. The first and second are the daily double, you know?

In the first race I found a horse by the name of French Bread. This horse was my health horse. In the second race I picked Happy Knott because it denotes happiness.

And I want you to know that your daily double of health and happiness came in and paid me $162.60 for my $2.

Yours truly,
WILLARD FLETCHER GARNER.

P. S.: Change the letter as you see fit. I am not much at writing.
W. G.

—o-o—

Well, W. G., we didn't change the letter at all. We are glad that you shook down those coconuts. But we had no idea we had opened up a tipping bureau. There are lessons in the life of the ant, there are sermons in stones and information in crackpots, even though the Bug had no idea he was giving away valuable stuff.

—o-o—

From now on we intend to read our articles twice over against the grain. If we are that smart we want to know it ourselves. The next time you get a tip like that from One Word Led to Another, you just telephone it in to a man named Gortatowsky at the offices of the Chicago Herald-Examiner. He has been trying to clip a daily double since Hector's fleas had pups of their own.

—o-o—

Gorty also believes that life's greatest daily double is health and happiness. But only a man like you can pick them one, two.

DRAMA MOTION PICTURES MUSIC

Bold Version Of 'Caesar' To American

Shakespearean Drama Done in Modern Dress And Without Scenery.

THE modern dress interpretation of Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," which has been one of Broadway's most striking theatrical novelties this season, will be presented at the American Theater for the week beginning tomorrow night. The company is one, organized for the road, which has traveled from Boston westward since the first of the year.

Tom Powers plays Brutus, Lawrence Fletcher is Caesar, Morgan Farley is Cassius, Edmond O'Brien is Antony, Edgar Barrier is Casca and Helen Craig, wife of John Beal, the movie actor, plays Calpurnia.

As conceived by Orson Welles, 22-year-old theatrical producer, who acts in the New York company himself, as Brutus, the play is a melodrama running an hour and 45 minutes, without intermissions and with no more scenery than the bare stage and back wall of the theater afford. Instead of the togas of ancient Rome, players wear modern civilian and military outfits. Curtain time, incidentally, is 8:45 o'clock in the evening and 2:45 o'clock for the Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Lighting effects, which are elaborate, lend what contrast of scene is necessary. The whole play has a strong flavor of Fascism and anti-Fascism, an effect that was not unforseen by Welles but not definitely intended.

Explaining his purposes, Welles has said, "I produced the play in modern dress to sharpen contemporary interest rather than to point up or stunt up present day detail. I'm trying to do the job of making the play applicable to the tensions of our time. It's a timeless tragedy about Caesarism and the collapse of democracy under Caesarism."

Brutus, in reality the play's main character, is, according to Welles, "the classical picture of the eternal, impotent, effectual, fumbling liberal; the reformer who wants to do something about things but doesn't know how and gets it in the neck in the end. He's dead right all the time and dead at the final curtain. He's Shakespeare's favorite hero — the fellow who thinks the times are out of joint but who is really out of joint with his time. He's the bourgeois intellectual, who, under a modern dictatorship, would be the first to be put up against a wall and shot."

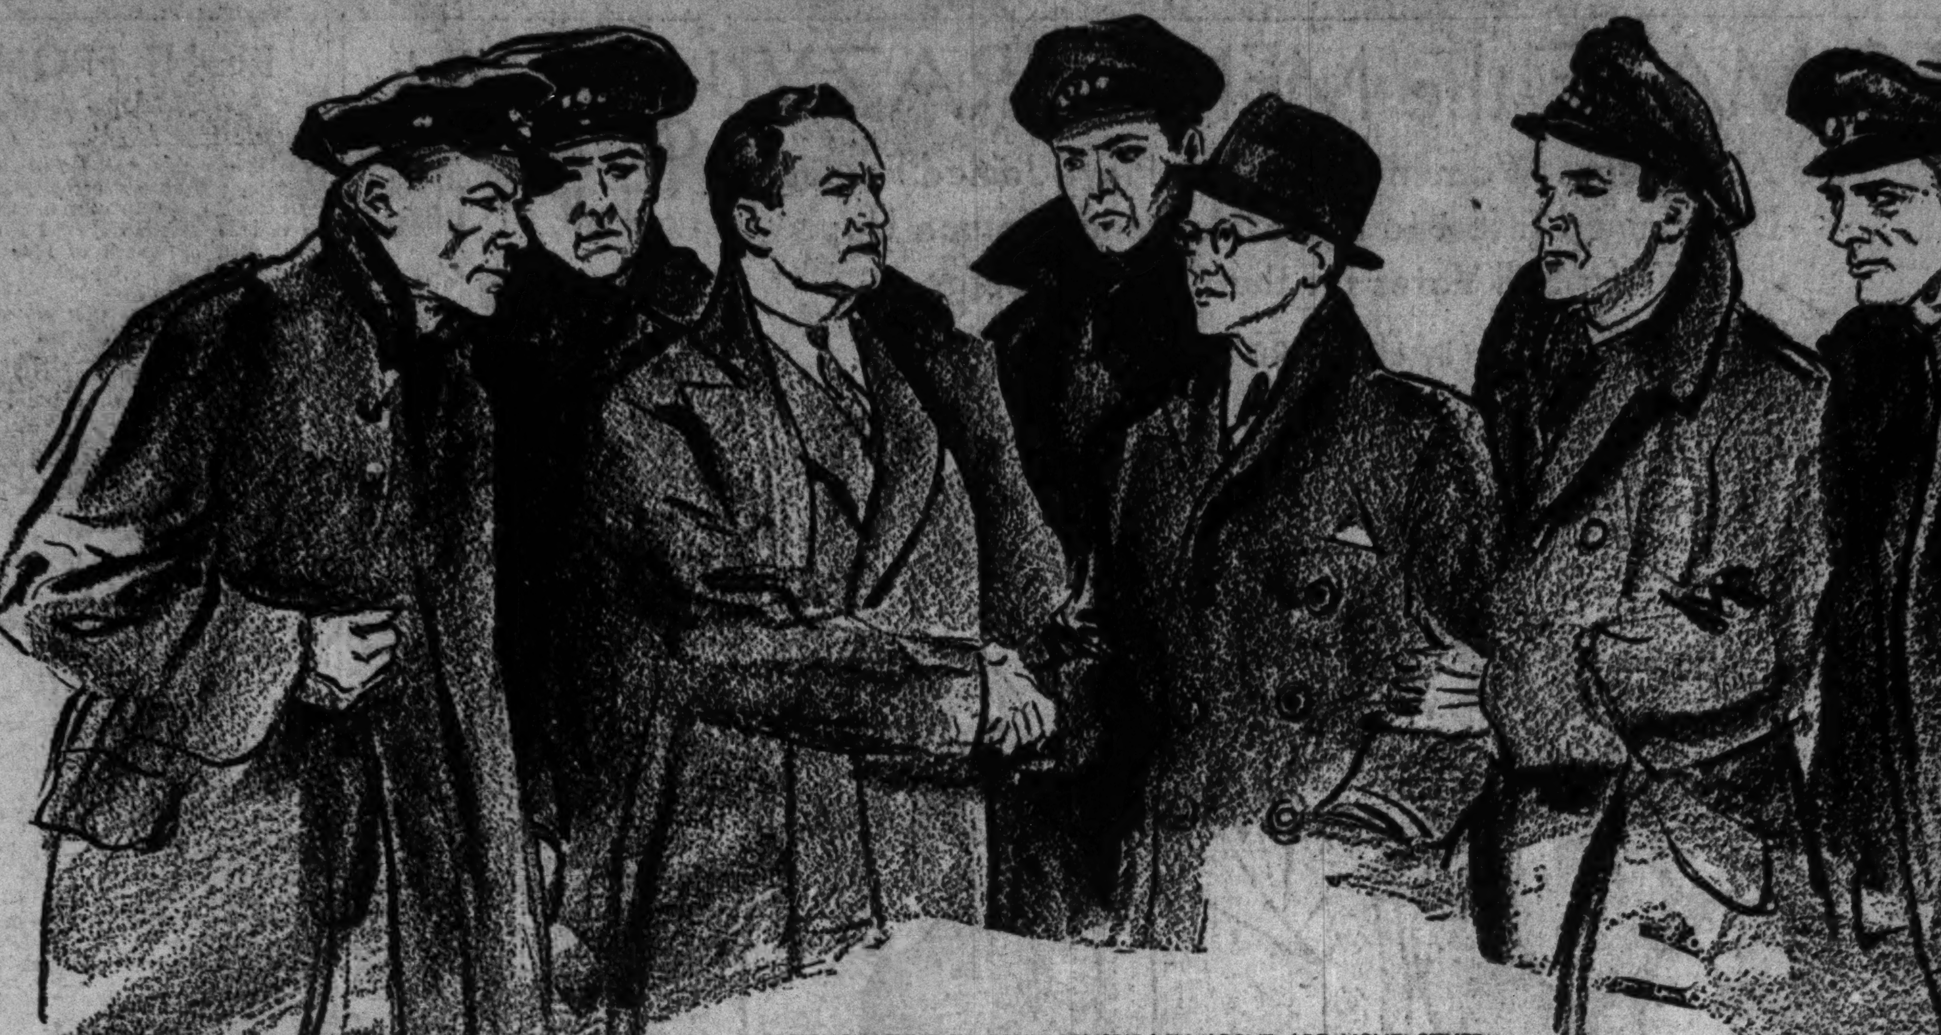
WHATEVER the meaning of "Julius Caesar" in the current scene, it broke like a bombshell on Broadway last November. As columinist and feature writers have pointed out, the $120,000 revival of "Antony and Cleopatra," in which Tullulah Bankhead was starred, opened on the night ahead of it and failed miserably. The $7000 Mercury Theater production of "Julius Caesar" caught on from the first and now has broken the 103-performance record for the play established back in 1875-76.

Welles and his partner in the Mercury Theater, John Houseman, have gone on to produce two other hits—a revival of "The Shoemaker's Holiday" and the satirical revue, "The Cradle Will Rock," are going to bring forth George Bernard Shaw's "Heartbreak Heartbreak House" on April 29 and are hard to work on a Shakespearean chronicle series that will embrace "Henry IV, Parts 1 and 2," and "Henry V," all in one performance, and "Henry VI, Parts 1, 2 and 3" and "Richard III," in a second performance. The chronicle series will open the Mercury Theater season next fall.

Welles himself recently won the plaque awarded by the New York Drama Study Club for the outstanding theatrical achievement of the year, the first director or actor ever to win it. Even before "Julius Caesar" came out, he enjoyed some thing of a reputation as a Shakespearean scholar. He had played in Shakespearean productions with the Gate Theater in Dublin, Ireland, and with Katharine Cornell in "Romeo and Juliet," in which he appeared in St. Louis in 1934, and had written, at the age of 18, a textbook, "Everybody's Shakespeare," which is now used in many colleges. As a director for the Federal Theater Project, he staged the Negro version of "Macbeth."

In giving his own construction to "Julius Caesar," the text of which he has not altered except to condense its latter portions, he has ample precedent. When the play was first performed more than 300 years ago, many read into it some connection between the conspiracy and the ill-fated rebellion of Shakespeare's patrons, Essex and Southampton, against Queen Elizabeth. During the days of the French revolution, Brutus was compared to a Girondin, Cassius to a Jacobin. Shortly after the turn of this century, when audiences flocked to see the Richard Mansfield production of the play, Cassius was compared to the late William Jennings Bryan by opponents of that famous champion of monetary reform.



THE TOUGH GUYS IN FOUL CONSPIRACY ABOVE ARE NONE OTHER THAN THOSE GOOD ROMANS WHO DID AWAY WITH JULIUS CAESAR. WITHOUT HIS HAT IS TOM POWERS AS BRUTUS; WITH HIS GLASSES ON, MORGAN FARLEY AS CASSIUS. FROM "JULIUS CAESAR," AT THE AMERICAN TOMORROW NIGHT.

'Bluebeard's Eighth Wife' Reveals a Masterly Style

By Colvin McPherson

THE famous "Lubitsch touch," which at times recently has seemed to be only another of Hollywood's more harmless fictions, was never better exemplified than in the Ambassador's comedy, "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." Here is completely agreeable entertainment.

An analysis of the Lubitsch style would point out that his direction is perhaps the smoothest in Hollywood, that he gets laughs out of simple incidents, that he carries every gag one step farther than his rivals so that it illuminates human nature, that he puts over a fast one here and there or brings forth some subtle meaning that might have worried the censors had it been set down in dialogue. Generous in use of pantomime and chary of slapstick, Lubitsch tells a story with all the suavity of a parlor car raconteur and diplomacy of theater manager.

"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" is perfect material for the sly producer-director. It is about a young American millionaire who has been married seven times, likes to read the newspaper comics and sleep in the tops of his pajamas only. In a department store where he is haggling with a clerk about buying only the tops of pajamas, he meets the daughter of a poor and not-too-honest French marquis. She is seeking to buy only pants to pajamas for her father.

Boy meets girl, boy marries girl but girl decides to teach him a lesson about marriage. Although getting a promise of $100,000 a year in the event of a divorce, she treats the lad as if he were a stranger. Each thinks up tricks to embarrass the other and the outcome is plain French farce—the screen play, as a matter of fact, was taken from a work of one Alfred Savoir.

As the millionaire, Gary Cooper is put through some of his best comedy performing. Scenes in which he kisses Edward Everett Horton, the marquis, on both cheeks, in which he tries to put himself to sleep by spelling "Czechoslovakia" backwards, in which he tries to tame Claudette by Pertruchio's method, are delightful. Cooper plays them with perfect control.

Miss Colbert, as the eighth wife, has not had a fancier wardrobe or a more suitable role in years. A scene in which she gets tipsy on champagne and saves herself from romance by eating onions is the equal of the time she slid under the table in "The Gilded Lily."

Horton, David Niven, Herman Bing and Warren Hymer give aid as supporting players but not much is necessary. Herr Lubitsch makes his two main characters quite interesting enough in themselves.

"Dangerous to Know," the Ambassador's bargain piece, pretends that Akim Tamiroff is a cultured racketeer who plays the pipe organ and wants to make love to Gail Patrick, of the social whirl. His hostess, housekeeper or whatever the movies won't call it, Anna May Wong, is jealous. Finally Ann May kills herself, Akim is arrested on a charge of murdering her and Gail flies away with her own true love.

The Girl of the Golden West.

THE title of "horse opera" was never better deserved by Hollywood creation than it is this week by "The Girl of the Golden West," at Loew's. Gold mine and saloon, Sheriff and outlaws, settlers and Indians, lovely lady and bad bandit are all there as Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy again shower golden music and tender romance on the public.

An afterward impression of the show is that while it has a good deal of singing of songs by Sigmund Romberg (not by Puccini, who tossed away a greater talent on the same book once), there is not much to remember, that few scenes would inspire a patron to sit through two performances, that Nelson Eddy is not very wicked as an outlaw and that Miss MacDonald runs a poor second to Ann Harding, in the other talkie version of the same play.

Aside from that, however, the show is sufficiently diverting and one can see some tall timber, impressive California style settings and a big fiesta number called the "Mariache." Miss MacDonald has a Southern accent that is heavier than her six-shooter and Eddy is too, too blond for even a foster-son of the Ramerez family but if one can just believe—it only takes faith—then everything is all right.

Some of the shortage in "The Girl of the Golden West" is made up by Bob Benchley in a short subject in which he tells how to fill out an income tax return. Except that it needs a stronger finish, it is wonderfully good humor.

Her Jungle Love.

SOME Hollywood interviewer sought to ask Dorothy Lamour what she's thinking about when she sings those Malayan ditties to Ray Milland or goes walking with a chimpanzee. For half the people who see "Her Jungle Love" at the Fox will be wondering just that.

Lamour plays Tura of the South Seas—probably the name came from a travel folder and was originally "Tour of the South Seas" — and Milland is an aviator who cracks up on the beach. Since he has a cut on the forehead, Tura takes him to her cave. Lynne Overman, another aviator, goes along as chaperon.

From then on, it's the works. Tura is a goddess, who helps with human sacrifices to a crocodile statue. One such sacrifice takes place before the startled eyes of Milland and Overman, but Tura can't be blamed, for Hollywood has her help with the bloody business only while hypnotized. And she's not really Malayan, but of the English nobility, like Tarzan, and when things get really tough for Milland and Lamour and they are about to be sacrificed themselves, along with Overman, an earthquake shakes the life out of everything and they all escape.

Producing the picture in color has not covered up its hokum and two or three landscapes shoved in front of the camera are obviously fakes and very poor ones at that. One relieving feature is Overman's dialogue and seasoned humor.

The film feature is considerably secondary, however, to the stage show, headed by Al Pearce and His Gang, from the radio. The fellow who started all the kids to saying "I hope—I hope—I hope" presents one of his own sales talks and introduces Arlene Harris, Andy Andrews, Tizzy Lish (he's really good, isn't he?) and others.

Mr. Moto's Gamble.

PETER LORRE, as the Japanese detective, Moto, turns his attention to the classroom and the prize ring in the main feature at the St. Louis Theater. One of his students is Keye Luke, as the son of Charlie Chan. In thus combining two detective picture series, "Mr. Moto's Gamble," is something of a novelty.

The feature has, besides, sufficient action and mystery to keep it alive. Its young hero is Dick Baldwin of St. Louis but as much promise of future talent is shown by Maxie Rosenbloom, formerly of the prize ring himself. Mr. Rosenbloom is becoming quite a comic.

"Wide Open Faces," the second feature, has Joe E. Brown round up bank robbers by the dozens, in some removed community called Willow Springs.

The phenomenal, the exquisite, the delight-filled "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" has entered into its fourth week now, at the Missouri Theater.

Drama of Insane Asylum Skillfully Staged in East

NEW YORK, April 2.

By the Associated Press.

BROADWAY occasionally sees a new play which is both entertainment and an impressive social document, and such a one is "All the Living," a drama about the unhappy subject of insane asylums which came in late last week and, from the critical reviews, appears to have an assured chance of being a hit.

This is Hardie Albright's dramatization of the book, "I Knew 3000 Lunatics," by Dr. Victor R. Small of Clinton, N. C. Cheryl Crawford, formerly one of the executives of the Theater Guild and the Group Theater, made a smart move in making this her first independent production. She called in for advice on the production not only Dr. Small, but also Dr. Joseph R. Blalock, superintendent of the Southwest State Hospital, Merian, Va., Dr. Samuel N. Weingrow, superintendent of the Epileptics Hospital, Skillman, N. J., and Dr. Harland M. Dale of the American College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Both the doctors and the authors seem to have done an efficient job, for the play excited the first-night audience to long applause and one critic to say that "it is a pulsing drama about a dark corner in modern life" and another to say that "it is a serious treatment of a vital social problem."

The story concerns young Dr. Kromer who believes that his new formula will cure many insane patients. But, he is frustrated by political red tape in a State medical institution and is driven so angry by the politicians that he is almost insane himself. A new associate comes in and the experiments are finally carried out to success.

In this plot is woven the story of two doctors in love with the same nurse, and one of them finally wins her. But what is really important and dramatic is that this play gives a close-up, human view of what goes on behind the scenes of a social institution that ordinarily is closed to the outside population. It not only gives this intimate view of the patients who are recovering under the benefits of the State, but is also an indictment of politicians who hold the rulling reins and who try to handicap the little doctors and nurses who are doing their best to give honest service.

Miss Crawford, who cast so many plays for the Theater Guild, does well by herself in this production. She has Sanford Meisner give a moving, passionate performance as the frustrated scientist. Elizabeth Young is pretty and apt in the minor role of the nurse, the love interest.

Leif Erickson has come East from Hollywood to be with his wife, Frances Farmer, who plays in "Golden Boy" and he does well as the sympathetic friend of the doctor.

It is an all-round good job of producing, writing and acting. It has every indication of being a hit, and if it should fail to do so, that can be blamed only on the fact that it does concern itself with a sad subject.

Martha Graham Dance Concert

MARTHA GRAHAM, exponent of the modern American dance, and her troupe of 12 young women, will be presented at the University City High School auditorium, Jackson and Balson avenues, tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock, in a program interpreting the modern scene. The Women's Physical Education Club of St. Louis and vicinity is sponsoring the appearance.

Numbers in the recital are "Praeludium" and "Celebration," dances of salutation and rejoicing; "Frontier," decribed as a "perspective of the plains," and "American Lyric"; "Satyric Festival Song"; "Deep Song," concerned with the sufferings in the Spanish civil war; "Tragic Holiday," on the theme of war memories; "Steps in the Street", dealing with unemployment, and "Prelude to Action," an invocation of a new world spirit.

Six members of the troupe are from the Eastern states and six from the West, but all are Americans. Their ages run from 18 to 25 years. Two gave up Hollywood engagements to study with Miss Graham. The dancers are Anita Alvarez, Ethel Butler, Frieda Flier, Nelle Fischer, Natalie Harris, Marie Marchowsky, Sophie Maslow, Marjory Mazia, May O'Donnell, Gertrude Schurr, Kathleen Slagel and Thelma Babitz.

THE MARTHA GRAHAM DANCERS, WHO GIVE A RECITAL AT THE UNIVERSITY CITY HIGH SCHOOL TOMORROW NIGHT.

Martini With Symphony Next Sunday Afternoon

Nino Martini, noted young Italian tenor, will be guest artist at the pension fund concert of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, with Vladimir Golschmann conducting, next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the Auditorium Opera House. It will be the orchestra's final concert of the season.

Martini's program for the benefit concert will feature Italian, Spanish, French and English songs and arias. The arias, to be sung with the orchestra, are Rodolfo's Narrative "Che gelida manina" from Puccini's "La Boheme," and "O Paradiso" from Meyerbeer's "L'Africana." Martini will sing two other groups of songs, accompanied on the piano by Miguel Sandoval, Guatemalan composer-pianist.

Four Opera Directors Re-engaged

Colvan, Hirst, White And Adolphus to Have Charge in Park Again.

FOUR principal members of the Municipal Opera production staff from last summer, in addition to Productions Manager Richard Berger, will again direct various phases of park activity in the approaching twentieth anniversary season.

Zeke Colvan returns for his fifth year as stage director; George Hirst, musical director, for his fourth season; Theodore Adolphus, ballet master, and Al White Jr., dance director, for their second seasons.

Colvan has been a leading American stage director for 20 years and in that capacity here will again supervise the production of "Show Boat," which he staged for the late Florenz Ziegfeld in its original New York presentation. Hirst, before coming to Forest Park, had studied at the Conservatory of Music in Leipzig, and conducted for grand operas, light operas and operettas throughout the country.

Improvement in the dance department was one of the more notable features of the 1937 season, which saw the employment of separate ballet master and dance director for the first time. Adolphus, who was born in Russia and for several years was one of the principals of the Diaghileff Ballet. Besides achieving fame as a dancer and choreographer, he is noted as a teacher, and many popular dancers have been his pupils.

White is a descendant of a well-known family of dancers. He has appeared in vaudeville and musical plays, produced dances for several Broadway musical hits, conducts his own dance school in New York and arranges dance ensembles for revues in New York's leading night clubs and hotels.

Tryouts for the singing and dancing chorus of 92 will be held May 2. The place for the auditions has not been selected.

The season will open Friday night, June 3, with the world premiere of "Gentlemen Unafraid," a new operetta by Jerome Kern, Oscar Hammerstein II and Otto Harbach. Five shows of the season are being seen for the first time in St. Louis. These are the world premiere offering; an American premiere of "Lost Waltz," which is a stage adaptation of Robert Stolz' world-acclaimed Viennese motion picture operetta, "Two Hearts in Waltz Time;" a pair of New York Center Theater hits, "White Horse Inn" and "Virginia," and a musical romance based on the life stories of the immortal collaborators, Gilbert and Sullivan, called "Knights of Song."

Works being given for the first time at the Municipal Theater are George Gershwin's "Of Thee I Sing," Ziegfeld's "Rosalie," and an extravaganza for children, "The Gingerbread Man." Only three revivals have been selected—"Chimes of Normandy," "Show Boat" and "Roberta." The Municipal Theater Association is now negotiating to complete the repertory of 12 works with another new production.

Lanny Ross Recital At The Principia

LANNY ROSS, tenor of the radio and motion pictures who made his debut as a concert artist a little more than a year ago, comes to Howard Hall, The Principia, Friday evening as the final artist of the season in the concert and lecture course there.

Ross, who went into radio work from the Yale University Glee Club, came originally from Seattle and studied at the choir school of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and the Taft Preparatory School before going to Yale. At the University he was voted "the best looking, most popular and most versatile member of the senior class." A track star in addition to a singer, he had an opportunity to enter the Olympics of 1928 and turned it down for a glee club tour.

Singer in KSD Series to Make Debut in Opera

John Carter, the Tenor, Wins Contract at the Metropolitan — Here and There on the Air.

JOHN CARTER, the tenor of KSD's "Charlie McCarthy" program, and Leonard Warren, the baritone, who won the Metropolitan Auditions contest which has been running Sundays for months, are to make their opera debuts in the next season at the "Met." Two others of the finalists, Kathleen Kersting, soprano, and Phil Duey, the baritone, may also get chances in roles at the Metropolitan. Carter and Warren were the survivors of 60 singers, chosen from 707 competitors, who sang in the 26 weeks of radio auditions. Carter, who is 26 years old, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., attended high school there and studied civil engineering at City College. Financial difficulties caused him to turn to singing. His first chance to attract public notice came in one of the radio auditions about three months ago. When Nelson Eddy decided to leave the Charlie McCarthy program for a concert tour, Carter was chosen as his successor. Warren, who is of Russian parentage, also is 26 years old. He is a native of the Bronx, New York City, attended school in New York, and enrolled in extension courses at Columbia University. For a time he traveled in the woods with his father who was a trader in raw furs, but five years ago turned to singing as a career. He, too, got his first real chance in a Metropolitan Opera Audition, and this resulted in a six-months contract to sing on a network. Currently, he is singing on WGN and the Mutual net at 6 p. m. Tuesdays with Morton Gould's orchestra and at 1 p. m. Saturdays with Benay Venuta's Varieties. Felix Knight, tenor, another finalist in the auditions, will sing at 4 p. m. today on the WJZ net and KWK.

IN addition to covering the opening of the baseball season Monday, April 18, the NBC announces plans to cover virtually every sport event of note in Europe as well as in America. Its program for the WEAF and WJZ networks includes all championship boxing matches, among them the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling fight June 22; all intercollegiate 4-A track meets, the Preakness horse race, the 500-mile Indianapolis auto race, the international fishermen's sailing race off the Grand Banks, the tennis matches at Wimbledon, England, the All-Star baseball game at Cincinnati on July 6, and the world series baseball games in October. There will also be coverage of the Yale-Harvard, Poughkeepsie Regatta, Washington-California and Mid-Continent rowing races, the Walker Cup golf tournament on St. Andrew's course in Scotland in July, and all notable golf tournaments and tennis tournaments in this country. Other sport broadcasts will include the All-Star football game in Chicago Sept. 1, the All-Star game in New York Sept. 7, outstanding college football games, the Army-Navy game, the Rose Bowl and Sugar Bowl games, the national cornhusking contest in September, the national softball finals in Chicago Sept. 12, and the national air races at Cleveland Sept. 5.

A weekly 1:30 p. m. Sunday At Aunt Fannie's program, set to start April 10 on KSD and WEAF net, will replace the Thatcher Colt Mysteries. It will be a variety show featuring Frances Allison as mistress of ceremonies, Sid Ellstrom in rural characterizations, an orchestra led by Rex Maupin and Clark Dennis and Annette King, singers.

A series of dramatizations of adventures in the West under the title, Under Western Skies, is planned for the WJZ chain Thursday nights on and after May 5. The actors will be the KDKA Players, of the staff of the big Pittsburgh station.

Whether there will be any broadcasts from the Salzburg Festival on the WEAF or WJZ network this summer is uncertain. A contract made by the NBC with the recently overthrown government of Austria had five years to run. It is said that nothing has been done by network officials to check on the status of this contract or on the prospects of a Salzburg season worth broadcasting.

Beginning April 10, the WEAF net will carry at 10:30 a. m. Sundays talks on the Department of State, its operations and relations abroad by Pattie Field, who was the first American woman sent abroad as a vice-consul. Her topics will be "China—How Our Representatives Live There," "Passport Work," "International Conferences," "Trade Agreements Policy," "Preparation for the Foreign Service," "Life in Latin-America" and biographies of men prominent in the department.

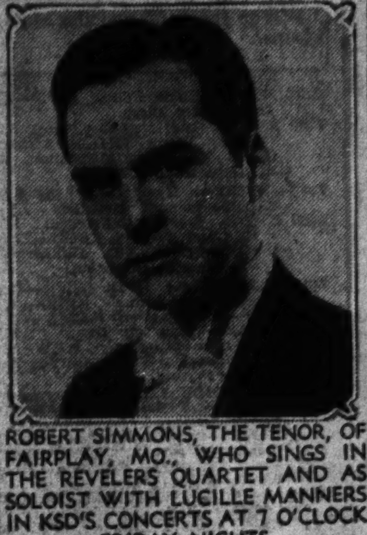
WITH REVELERS



ROBERT SIMMONS, THE TENOR, OF FAIRPLAY, MO., WHO SINGS IN THE REVELERS QUARTET AND AS SOLOIST WITH LUCILLE MANNERS IN KSD'S CONCERTS AT 7 O'CLOCK FRIDAY NIGHTS.

In addition to sending his annual report as president of the CBS to stockholders, William S. Paley plans to broadcast the report on the network and KMOX at 9 o'clock Tuesday night.

A series of dramatizations by Burr Cook, under the title "It Might Have Happened," is set for 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays on the WJZ net to replace the Edgar Guest program, which has been shifted to the CBS net. Each story will deal with an historical situation as to which there is an authentic record up to point where evidence and tradition begin to diverge. The opening episode next Tuesday will concern the legend about Jean Lafitte, the Louisiana pirate, and his scheme to rescue Napoleon from St. Helena and take him to New Orleans. The second episode, on April 12, will deal with the mysterious death of Capt. Merriweather Lewis, of Lewis and Clark Expedition fame, who was slain in a tavern beside the old Natchez Trace road in Tennessee.

The Concordia Seminary Chorus, which has just completed a tour which took it to Chicago, Detroit, Grand Rapids and North Tonawanda, N. Y., will sing on KFUO at 10:15 tomorrow night.

A drama with music, entitled "The Holy Grail," and based by Wells Hively on the King Arthur legends, will be broadcast at 1:30 p. m. Thursday, April 14.

Scenes in the annual Army Day parade in Washington, passing in review before the President, will be described at 1:15 p. m. Wednesday on the WJZ net.

The story of the writing of the song "Loch Lomond" will be dramatized in the Jamboree at 9 p. m. Tuesday on the WJZ chain.

The Max Schmeling-Steven Dudas fight at Hamburg, Germany, will be covered Saturday afternoon, April 16, on the WEAF chain.

Alexander Woollcott and Kirsten Flagstad have been booked for next Sunday's Magic Key program, from 1 to 2 p. m.

Indications are that the National Farm and Home Hour will be broadcast in this area and throughout the Middle west from 10:30 to 11:30 a. m. after April 24 when New York will go on daylight saving time. In the past, the network schedules have been rearranged whenever changed because of New York City's time shifts so as to keep the Farm and Home Hour in the 11:30 a. m. to 12:30 noon spot.

A new steel tower aerial, 625 feet high, will soon be in use by WGY, the 50,000-watt station at Schenectady, N. Y., which broadcasts on 790 kilocycles. The tower rests on a porcelain insulator only 20 inches in diameter that has been tested to support four times the tower's weight of 500,000 pounds. The station's new ground system consists of 13 miles of copper ribbon, an inch wide, buried in the earth at a depth of 18 inches and radiating to a distance of 625 feet from the base of the tower. A 1000-watt flasher beacon has been placed at the top of the tower to give warning to aviators.

When the salmon begin running in the Columbia River, which should be within a week or so, there will be a broadcast on the WEAF or WJZ net. Interest in the run is greater than in past years because of salmon fishers' fear lest the Bonneville Dam block the fish from reaching their accustomed spawning grounds.

Setting of KSD Drama Tuesday In Dust Bowl

Boris Karloff in Lights Out Play Again Wednesday—"Love for Love" at 4 p. m. Saturday.

SCENES in the Dust Bowl and consequences of the devastation wrought by wind and dust will be the subject of KSD's Paths of Destiny dramatization at 9 o'clock Tuesday night.

Beginning tomorrow, the Dan Harding serial will be moved to the 11:30 a. m. spot on KSD Monday through Friday.

A new Let's Celebrate transcription series at 6:15 p. m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays on KSD features Joe Rines, his orchestra and singers.

Jan Garber is to take over leadership tomorrow night of the orchestra on George Burns' and Gracie Allen's program on KSD. Ray Noble, whom he will succeed, plans to sail for England in a few days.

The story of the capture of four Iowa bank robbers and the heroism of Officer Moran in Peoria, Ill., will be dramatized in KSD's Public Hero No. 1 period tomorrow night. Attempting to hold up a bank at Davenport, Ia., where a new protective device had been installed, the robbers were routed by two policemen. One of them was killed, another wounded and captured, and two escaped. One of the two fugitives was captured in Peoria, Officer Moran losing his life in the fight. Now, every police radio message goes through Moran's shield, which was soldered into the police radio station's aerial as a mark of honor.

Dale Carnegie will dramatize an incident in the life of the late Theodore Roosevelt Tuesday night to illustrate ways of handling children.

BORIS KARLOFF and Betty Winkler will play the leads, at 11:30 Wednesday night, in KSD's Lights Out period, in a revival of "Cat Wife," an Arch Oboler play. Miss Winkler created the role of the cat wife in a broadcast in the summer of 1936 and played it again Feb. 17, 1937. Karloff will play the husband, and in the supporting cast will be Templeton Fox, Phil Lord and Robert Guilbert, who took part in the 1937 broadcast of the play.

Fred Allen plans to feature Elliott Wisbrod, who tests bullet-proof vests by wearing them and serving as a target, in his Wednesday Town Hall Tonight on KSD.

KSD is broadcasting the Music and American Youth programs at 10:30 Saturday mornings. Next Saturday's broadcast will come from Rochester, N. Y.

From 2 to 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, KSD will broadcast the quarter-finals in the high schools spelling tournament. The Cleveland High team will be pitted against that from Blewett High and Soldan High's spellers will meet those from Rosati Kain.

William Congreve's "Love for Love" will be performed in KSD's Great Plays hour at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Jack Haley's program, which was concluded last night, will be replaced on KSD next Saturday by two programs—Barry McKinley, the baritone, from 7:30 to 7:45, and Alistair Cooke, the British dramatic critic, from 7:45 to 8 o'clock.

Roy Stockton is expected to return from the Cardinals' training camp in Florida in time to appear with Frank Eschen on KSD's Sportslight program at 5:30 tomorrow afternoon. He has been in Florida for the past three weeks, sending daily dispatches for the 5:30 programs and several times broadcast over a special wire circuit which KSD had run to St. Petersburg, interviewing Manager Frankie Frisch, Joe Medwick, Pepper Martin, Johnny Mize, Sammy Baugh and Don Padgett.

A novelty vocal and instrumental ensemble called the Kidoodlers is scheduled to replace Bob Becker's Dog Chats at 1 p. m. next Sunday.

Eminent Biologist Examines Theory of Racial Superiority And Concludes It Is a Myth

Prof. J. B. S. Haldane of London Decides Progress Comes With Social, Economic and Individual Betterment.

BY ELLWOOD DOUGLASS,

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

CHIEF among aristocratic hangovers is the tradition of superiority. "Divine right" gives way to "genetic superiority," with the great popular advantage that even a cat can claim it, though every dog may say him nay. It might have possibilities for humor except that it carries a powerful modern accessory, the conception of "the unfit," which sounds like science, but acts—in the motivation of a man, a class or a race—like a throwback to the more remote and benighted reaches of savagery.

It has been used, finds the eminent (and upper-class) J. B. S. Haldane of London, professor of biometry in University College, to justify not only private vanities and racial skulduggery, but conquest, tax-dodging and — he cites chapter and verse—the bombing of civilian populations; and so, in his "Heredity and Politics," recently published by W. W. Norton & Co., he pulls up the whole luxuriant growth to examine its biological roots.

Specifically, he sets out to examine the doctrine that "all men are created equal" as against four doctrines of inequality: "the unfit should be sterilized"; "certain classes are superior to others and should reproduce more rapidly"; "certain races are congenitally superior," and "crossing between different races is harmful."

On Crossing of Races.

Haldane says nobody knows whether "crossing" of radically different races is harmful, but that, since it is irreversible, the British Empire and probably the United States urgently need to find out. He finds the "civilized" races already so scrambled that no version of a "color" line serves its purpose, for if there ever was a hereditary racial character indicated by fair hair and blue eyes, or curly hair and dark eyes, the inner and outer characteristics are reshuffled now in every generation. With Dr. Raymond Pearl and others, he questions the widely advertised menace of low birth rates in the "superior" classes. He points out that these hardly coincide with the "upper" class, and he argues on scientific grounds that eugenic attempts to breed more gifted men may be less effective than intelligent effort to discover an equality of opportunity to foster those we have.

He notes that in the last few years the impression that the unemployed were necessarily "unfit" seems to have died out in England, with a million and a half out of work; but even in the restricted category of congenital defect, where the "fit" feel most assured of the Darwinian blessing, he has a word of caution. Quoting a writer in Living Philosophies, "I do not believe that the care and pity given by the strong to the weak have helped civilization," he comments:

"Similar views have been expressed in England and Germany. Others hold that the care and pity are an essential part of civilization and worth while for their own sake. If they tend to make civilization self-destructive by fostering the spread of undesirable genes, I suggest that the remedy may be found in the exercise of still more care and pity by segregating mental defectives under humane conditions."

Congenital Defects.

He makes it clear that there is no hope, in familiar boast, of "emptying the asylums by sterilizing the defective." Congenital defect is only one of a myriad causes of mental disablement. Only a few defectives, about 8 per cent, come of defective parents. Eleven and one-half times as many defectives are born to "normal" parents.

Only about 8 per cent of those defectives' children—where reproduction is not prevented by confinement or the defect itself—will themselves be defective. Some of the remainder will be "backward," but most of them will be "average" and a few will be even exceptional.

From these figures Haldane concludes that sterilization of all defectives might be expected to cut down the crop in the next generation by something like 10 per cent—"some people put it as low as 5 per cent, others as high as 30 per cent"—and also to eliminate 10 times, perhaps only 3, but possibly 20 times, as many children not defective.

Dominant Characterics.

The case is a great deal clearer with respect to a few defects which are hereditarily dominant, never skip a generation and never remain hidden until late in life. Here, he says, sterilization might hope for 100 per cent effectiveness. But even here the biological deck is full of jokers. One of them is that the most serious of such defects render the defective "unfit" in the Darwinian sense—they make it impossible for him to propagate or even to live—and so the least desirable genes, or hereditary elements, are self-eliminating. When, however, a "bad" card thus removes itself from the deck, the dealer, to continue the metaphor, produces another just like it. The process is called mutation—the spontaneous appearance of an hereditary trait which was not present among the ancestors, but still may be transmitted to progeny.

Albinism, some kinds of mental and eye defect and congenital deaf mutism are recessive, that is, they show up only in a double-dose, from both sides of the family. Haldane concludes that sterilization, except in case of a tendency to interbreed, would have no effect on these recessives "in less than 30 or 40 generations."

Even in the clear case of dominant inheritance of disease, Haldane points to means, short of compulsory sterilization, of discouraging or forbidding marriage, or encouraging continence or birth-control or voluntary sterilization.

"Which of these alternatives is to be adopted is not, I think, a question for the biologist," he says. "It is a question of the relative value which is attached to various different goods, for example, to health on the one hand and liberty on the other . . .

"I think that the following proposition would be accepted by most biologists: 'It is never possible, from a knowledge of a person's parents, to predict with certainty that he or she will be either a more adequate or a less adequate member of society than the majority.'

"In a very few cases, it is true, we can predict that a given unborn child, if legitimate, will have a certain physical defect. . . . But our knowledge of the heredity of psychological characters, desirable or otherwise, is insufficient to make predictions of this kind.

"We can, of course, make statistical predictions. But we do not, in my opinion, know enough to accord rights to any individual, or to deprive him or her of any rights, on the basis of ancestry only."

Two Chief Objections.

He cites two chief objections to compulsory sterilization. Since the operation is serious and sometimes fatal to women, it violates the sanctity of human life, and it expresses "a state of mind . . . which we may not find entirely admirable."

"In the past," Haldane remarks, "we have had the feudal theory of noble blood and the monarchist theory of divine right. These are now discredited, but many able men believed in them in the past. Their modern equivalent is, I suppose, the doctrine of the innate superiority of the children of the well-to-do. . . .

"At the present time nearly all cases of lunacy or gross idiocy are probably reported in all social

What Labor-Saving Machines And "Decentralization" Have Done to the Rubber Workers

BY MARQUIS W. CHILDS

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

Akron Once Made Two-Thirds Of All Rubber Products, Now Makes One-Third—Labor Leader Calls Threat to Move Plant Effort to Break Union's Power.

AKRON, OHIO, April 2.

ON Ohio automobile license plates this year there is a covered wagon in honor of the hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the great trek across the Allegnenies into what was then known as Northwest Territory. The pioneers came along the water courses, down the broad valleys, into a virgin land of great richness and beauty.

What is happening here today—yes, all through the Northwest Territory—dramatizes this anniversary as nothing else could. It makes the black symbol of the covered wagon on the silver license plate, all the pageantry that has marked the observance of the passage of a century and a half, seem somehow irrelevant, if only because the contrast between that earlier time, 1788, and the present is so overwhelming.

Big Business Migrating From Exploited Region.

Today a new trek is on. Big business is migrating. Industrialists are leaving behind an area that has been exploited, gutted of its resources. They are seeking virgin territory where labor is cheaper and taxes are lower if not non-existent.

It has been going on for a long time in other parts of the country, this process of migration. New England textile mills were moved to the South to escape union wage scales and high taxes.

In Massachusetts, the shoe industry was dispersed and many of the plants were moved to St. Louis; later the shoe industry was again dispersed and several of these same plants placed in rural Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas.

Big Steel moved an important share of production from the Pittsburgh area to Alabama and it is a striking fact today that while Pittsburgh mills are operating at 30 per cent of capacity, or less, the Alabama plants are running at a profitable level.

Now the process of decentralization—that is industry's word for it, has begun seriously to affect this highly industrialized region.

Akron Fast Falling Off As Rubber Industry Center

In Akron the effects are sharply accentuated because for so long a single industry, rubber, was concentrated here. Formerly, according to the estimates of one of the large companies, more than two-thirds of all rubber products were made in Akron, at present only about one-third of production remains here. And the migration is not ended.

The forces that have worked to bring about this migration are many and diverse. But today the primary motive is to break union wage scales, and, incidentally, to curtail the power of organized labor. Until recently this was an open shop town. High wages, or comparatively high wages, but no union was the rule. The big companies tried in every possible way to prevent the organization of the rubber workers. They failed. Strong unions within the C I O have functioned for two years. Migration, or the threat of migration, is the final effort, in the interpretation of union leaders, to break the unions.

Company representatives have very little to say directly about the union. They talk in terms of competitive wage scales and technological changes which make migration almost inevitable. They say that the union has functioned in such a way so as to reduce efficiency. Sit downs, "quickies," deliberate slacking, all have tended to reduce the volume of production per man hour, it is said.

Question Already Thrust Into Arena of Politics

So much of America's industrial history is concentrated here. The story of this gray, smoke-ridden city is in many respects the story of American industry. No change in American life but has been reflected here, often in exaggerated form. Two hundred fifty thousand people breathe, eat, sleep, marry and die in terms of production, lay-offs, overtime, the stretch-out, strikes. And now it is the threat of migration, a fear that strikes deep into many lives.

It is certain to become a political issue. In fact, it has already been plumped into the political arena by the action of a delegation from Akron that journeyed to Washington a week ago to demand a congressional investigation into the migration of industry, its implications and the serious burden it places upon government. This same problem was directly behind President Roosevelt's speech in Georgia the other day when he condemned Southern wage levels as feudal and called for support of the wage and hour bill to provide uniform standards throughout the country.

A brief look at the past will help to make clear some of the forces involved in the present problem. In 1917, there were 527 tire factories, 30 per cent of which were situated here. At that time the industry employed about 125,000 workers.

Today there are only 16 separate corpora-

Sabotage in Soviet Industrial Plants a Stubborn Fact Which Purges Are Designed to Combat Resulting Terror Hits Higher-Ups Most Directly—Revolution Has Grown Steadily More Popular With Common People.

By JOSEPH BARNES,

A Staff Correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune.

MAGNITOGORSK, Siberia, March.

ONE aspect of Soviet Russia's militant crusade against sabotage which is usually slurred over in the newspapers, both here and abroad, is the sabotage itself. In Magnitogorsk, as in other cities inthe Urals where the Soviets have built a new industrial base in the last 10 years, this sabotage is a blunt, stubborn fact.

The history of any one of 20 major plants in this region is a story of men trying to build quickly and of other men trying to wreck their building. Engineers who have worked in the Stalin Steel Works here since the Soviets began their billion ruble investment in its blast furnaces and open hearths know that sabotage is no legend of Bolshevik propaganda.

There have been at least three clear-cut attempts to blow up the dam across the Ural River here which protects the water supply of the iron and steel mills. Ground quartz has been found in the bearings of power turbines. Fires have broken out which were obviously planned and lighted. Blueprints have been used which were manifestly drawn up with deliberate attempt to sabotage the plant.

Story of Two Tanks.

The Soviet definition of sabotage is broad enough to include some instances of what Americans would call inefficiency. In the middle of the Stalin Steel Works here, for example, there are two gas tanks, with capacities of 100,000 and 50,000 cubic meters, respectively. They were imported from Germany in 1932 at a cost of 2,500,000 gold marks (approximately $1,000,000), at a time when every dollar of foreign money meant going without food for many Russian people.

After the tanks had been erected, someone thought to check the temperature to which they were guaranteed. The answer was 5 degrees above zero Fahrenheit. Every winter here the thermometer drops to 49 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, a temperature under which they could not work. So they are now used to support revolutionary posters; only those who know they are empty and useless see them as grim reminders of why the Soviet Union still needs a political police.

This case is a useful illustration because it shows what a blurred and shifting line divides sabotage from inefficiency in the Soviet Union. Local gossip here holds that not a single arrest was made as the result of this purchase; blame could not be fixed on any individual.

Trotskyists Among Builders.

The blame has been fixed in literally hundreds of other cases, with the long Soviet campaign against sabotage reaching a climax in the last 12 months. The city is only nine years old, but many of its original builders were Trotskyists exiled to the Urals in earlier purges, "liquidated" kulaks (well-to-do peasants), and common criminals organized in labor camps. Although the iron and steel mills were set down on empty steppe, they inherited all the bitterness of Russia's class war.

Consider the record. The original Communist party secretary of Magnitogorsk was Lominadze, a well-known Trotskyist who was demoted to this post for his political sins. Within 10 days of the assassination in Leningrad, 2000 miles away, of Sergei Kirov on Dec. 1, 1934, he drove out into the country and shot himself. This was not even mentioned in the Soviet press.

Maryasin, another formerly important Trotskyist, was head of the construction of the coke ovens here. He was arrested in 1936. Switzen, chief metallurgical consultant in the construction of the mills, twice has been sentenced to be shot, and twice the sentence has been commuted.

Kynasev, former head of the Southern Ural Railroad which serves the plant, was one of Karl Dadek's fellow-defendants at the trial a year ago of the "parallel Trotskyist center." He was the gentleman who confessed to having organized plans with a mysterious "Mr. H." for infecting troop trains in the Urals with bacteria. He was shot. Zavenyagin, former director of the plant, was promoted to Moscow in 1936. A month ago, he disappeared.

Lesser men have been taken from every unit of the mills. The best estimates of arrests among Magnitogorsk's 200,000 population range between 2000 and 4000 in the last 12 months. Most of the arrested were engineers or functionaries of official rank. Few were rank and file workers. Many of them were Communists, and the dialetic which explains their swift transformation into class enemies is a little subtle for all but the most hardened Marxists.

A Future for Some.

The purge has struck with extra severity in the Urals, where earlier purges, especially in 1929, had sent hundreds of Trotzskyists and older engineers for whose political health the cold Siberian winters had been prescribed. The present purge is taking fewer chances. Of those arrested in Magnitogorsk during the last year, it is believed, some have been shot, a few have been given lesser jobs in smaller cities, most have been sent to Yakutia or Kamchatka, the wilderness of Northern Asia.

For those who were not too important, or too guilty, there is a future. Two men now in Magnitogorsk have learned this. The first, sentenced with Prof. Ramzin in 1929 after the first of the sensational sabotage trials, is now head of the ore mine here. For successive triumphs in its operation he has been decorated twice, his police record completely expunged. The other also is a former "wrecker," given a 10-year term which he still is technically serving. He is at the same time in charge of the plant's entire power resources, a quiet, able engineer who apparently has the respect of every one in the city. Both these men have gone through the last year's purge unscratched.

Labor Correction Camps.

Magnitogorsk is full of less fortunate survivors of earlier purges. One of the city's biggest buildings is the headquarters of the I. T. K., or labor correction camps which, in scattered barracks through the city hold an estimated 15,000 prisoners. On the edges of the town are the tents, shacks, huts and caves of the "special exiles," or "liquidated" kulaks, moved here in 1930 and 1931 and believed to number now between 25,000 and 30,000. Both are the special charges of the polictical police.

The I. T. K. barracks, for prisoners serving terms of hard labor, are distinguishable from the ordinary workers' barracks only by a low wood fence and an occasional soldier doing sentry duty. There is athletic equipment to be seen; the camps look clean, hard, cold. From time to time a squad of prisoners marches through the streets on its way to work, guarded by one or two indifferent soldiers, stopping pedestrians occa-

Construction's Point of View.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

CONSTRUCTION is the largest single business enterprise in all industry, under normal conditions. It has, however, been depressed to a fifth-rate position by political maldistribution of taxation and speculative financing interest charges.

Normally, the construction industry could employ 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 workers to supply the natural demand for buildings, the construction of which has been postponed by years of depression.

It is the social duty and responsibility of every person to demand the base of taxation be transferred from construction to the actual social government services that are rendered the taxpayer. An itemized tax bill or invoice must be demanded, which will expose for direct examination and verification the detailed operating expenses of the community. The per capita costs of schools, libraries, police, fire protection and other similar services can be computed accurately from the statistics of past years by public officials.

The added advantage of this system is that each community will, in fairness, have to compete for its population on the merit and efficiency of its government, and thus assure the taxpayer value for the dollar expended.

Unless social government is placed upon a scientific business basis, similar to that employed in private enterprise, the depressions which we are passing through are insignificant to those ahead of us.

Labor and Capital.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

LABOR must consolidate and act as one unit. Labor must be willing to do everything that will help make it a responsible body of men. It must do away with all questionable characters holding office in unions and must eliminate questionable activities which reflect upon unionism.

Strikes should not be called until after arbitration has failed to settle disputes. Government should make all possible concessions, within reason, to capital provided capital will absorb, within a certain time, the majority of the idle and pay them a living wage. H. B.

Delmar and Westgate—Traffic Hazard.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

TO anyone living in University City, especially in the vicinity of Westgate avenue and Delmar boulevard, it is no surprise to pick up a daily paper and note the number of persons injured by automobiles. All one has to do to judge of the little respect for traffic laws and for the value of human lives is to stand at that corner for an hour or so.

In addition to the regular "stop," "go" and "left turn" signals, the light at the corner has a special arrangement for pedestrians to change the lights in order to cross the streets, the signal showing "walk" in white in special boxes. But time and again I have seen motorists deliberately ignore these signals, and have even seen street cars go past a red light signal on the westbound trip; and it is not unusual to see service cars pass up all kinds of signals. The signals are not in an obscure position or difficult to see, and only absolute disregard for the rights of others can be assigned to those who disobey them. It is not unusual for a person going across on the "walk" signal to be almost run down by a motorist going against a red light.

If there is such a thing as a fine for these violations, it would take only about three months to make the signals pay for themselves and to reduce to a minimum the danger from automobile accidents.

It may be thought that University City is just in the "sticks," but with over 25,000 people living there, one would think that the Mayor, the Board of Aldermen and the police force would attempt to enforce this law. R. M.

Restore Older Men to Business.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

COULD there be a campaign among business men to take back on all elderly men who have been laid off for no other reason than their years? Years should never count if one is capable. The mind is there, and years of experience. What is going to become of those around 60 when men of 33 and 40 are refused work because of their age? There is plenty on this earth for all, old and young alike. Why not give everyone the chance that belongs to him?

ONE WHO KNOWS.

On Beating Wall Street.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THERE is a very important lesson to be learned from the disclosures in the Whitney failure. I refer to the fact that a Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, whose brother is a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., was unable to speculate successfully in Wall Street.

One would certainly assume that a man with such contacts would not find it difficult to play the market successfully. Who could be better qualified than a member of J. P. Morgan & Co. to advise his brother? And yet hundreds of thousands of men and women play the market, trying to do what a Whitney could not do. J. S. WALGREEN.

MORE POLITICAL NONSENSE.

Can it be that the people of St. Louis are peculiarly insensitive—that they are unmoved by the currents of thought and action in the rest of the United States? They have been going about their business, these last few days, in the ordinary way. There has been no unusual excitement over any public issue. The coming of spring, and baseball, and Boss Pendergast, and Hitler, and the war in Spain, and relief, and the decline in the stock market; of such familiar topics has the general run of our conversation been made.

If the word of one of the eminent statesmen of these United States is true, what we had thought was a fairly typical American community, politically, economically and in every other way, is not typical at all, but unique.

It seems that the people of the United States—outside the placid area that is St. Louis—are on the brink of revolution. Bloodshed is being talked about, and resort to arms.

No, the Japanese have not invaded the United States; the Supreme Court is not about to be packed; Hitler is still on the other side of the Atlantic. What has enraged the people is the reorganization bill. Hear the direful words of the Hon. John O'Connor, Democrat, of New York, chairman of the Rules Committee of the House.

> The fact is that our people are inflamed almost to the point of revolution—and I use my words guardedly—at the thought of the possibilities of this bill. Some letters mention "bloodshed," others "resort to arms." That is the situation that concerns me.

Begging your pardon, Mr. O'Connor—or not begging your pardon—what you say is simply not true. It is not one-tenth true. It is so preposterously untrue that it would not be worth a reply if it were not for the high and responsible position you occupy. The lack of excitement over the reorganization bill in St. Louis is duplicated throughout the country. The proof? The proof is the absence of any large spontaneous opposition to the bill. The proof is the fact that it provoked very little popular expression of opinion, either pro or con, when it was first brought forward, and that the telegrams against it now pouring in upon Congress have obviously been inspired by an organized drive against the bill.

The leaders of that drive have a perfect right, under the right of petition, to get their case before Congress in the most effective way they can, but surely no Congressman in possession of his senses can believe that the telegraphic barrage represents anything resembling a popular revolt. Anybody with any skill in propaganda and the necessary funds at his disposal can bring about a barrage of messages to Congress on almost any subject you care to name.

The final proof, Mr. O'Connor, that you are talking the veriest sort of bunkum, is the innate good sense of the American people. When they become aroused it is over a genuine issue, not over such a fake issue as that which has been built up around the effort to bring some degree of order into the chaotic governmental set-up at Washington.

There is a proper way to go about discussing this bill and an improper way. It ought, as we have said time and again, to be fully discussed, with a view to amendment along the lines which the House has favored, but it ought not to be made the vehicle of a hysterical attack on Mr. Roosevelt. It would have been discussed and amended in an orderly way, in an atmosphere free from hysteria, if it had not been for such statements as you, Mr. O'Connor, and other extreme opponents of the bill, have made and broadcast to the people.

Now as to the Republican opposition. If this opposition didn't see what it was doing, it ought to know now from the cue to Democratic strategy given it the other day on the floor of the House by the Democratic leader, Mr. Rayburn. Mr. Rayburn—who is a pretty shrewd judge of public opinion—knows that the people are not "inflamed" against the reorganization bill. "We accept that issue as an issue of the congressional campaign of 1938," says Mr. Rayburn. Of course he does. The enemies of Mr. Roosevelt have handed the President an issue on a silver platter. It is the kind of issue that the politicians call a "natural" and it can be, and will be, used to obscure any real issue that threatens to be embarrassing.

So Mr. Roosevelt gets another "break" from his enemies. So the utter bankruptcy of the Republican leadership in Congress is again exposed.

Dictatorship through the reorganization bill? Any politician who thinks he can ride into power on the dictatorship bugaboo, in the face of a plain statement of the facts on the other side, needs to have his head examined.

People "inflamed almost to the point of revolution" over this bill! We enter Mr. O'Connor's speech for the grand championship award in the political bilge production class for 1938.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AND DICTATORS.

The right of an individual to cultivate the mystical side of his nature and to associate himself with others of similar inclination is almost universally conceded. The difference, however, between communities in which religious freedom is a part of a general list of inalienable rights and those in which it exists only because a man's indwelling thoughts cannot be reached either by the king's command or the king's cannon, is a practical difference that ought to be profoundly considered by all men of faith no matter what the nature of their faith.

If religion is simply a matter of a man's forming his own secret conception of God, religious toleration can have no meaning because it can have no effect one way or another. But if religion demands a certain outward expression and a certain communion of individuals, then religious freedom has to be safeguarded in the same way as the secular rights to freedom of speech and assembly.

The only intellectual atmosphere in which the so-called civil rights can have any sort of life is that which the power of the state is enclosed within definite limits. If it ever be conceded that the State or its representatives have a dominion that extends to the last nerve cell in the last citizen's body, then religious freedom will obviously have to take its chances along with all other presumably basic rights.

The general conclusion from the foregoing is that the established religion which seeks an alliance with absolutism—especially the absolutisms of today—is delivering itself to its natural enemy. No matter how attractive the temporary advantages, it can continue its full and free life only at the pleasure of an individual, once this partnership is forged.

What forms this pleasure may take can be judged by a glance at the precarious status of organized religion in Hitler's Germany.

THE ISSUE IN ILLINOIS.

The Illinois primary is in its last week. Both factions in the Democratic party have indorsed the aims and general program of the Roosevelt administration, which means that the issue is not to be found in national policies. Michael L. Igoe, one of the candidates for the senatorial nomination, has joined the other leading candidate, Congressman Scott Lucas, in tribute to the administration of State affairs by Gov. Horner. This means that state executive and legislative policy is not in controversy.

What then is the issue? It can be stated in a sentence: Is the Kelly-Nash machine, which has succeeded the Thompson-Lundin machine in ravaging Chicago and Cook County, to extend its power over Illinois? The group of candidates which includes Mr. Lucas and T. V. Smith, capable State Senator now seeking a post as Congressman-at-large, is out to beat the machine. The Igoe group, while insisting that it is "unbossed," is taking all the support the machine can give and has joined the bosses' fight on State's Attorney Courtney, County Judge Jarecki and other officials who have prosecuted election crooks and grafters in Chicago.

What government under the Kelly-Nash rule is like is well-known from the spoils domination of local government in Chicago; from the way the machine's puppet legislators vote the orders of their bosses at Springfield. The Illinoisan who wants to check the spread of the self-serving spoilsmen before it is too late should vote for the candidates who are fighting the Kelly-Nash machine.

MORE DEATHS FROM CANCER SERUM.

The death toll among patients treated with a new cancer serum at Orlando, Fla., now has risen to 10, and four other persons are ill with tetanus symptoms. Another development in the tragic case is the disclosure that the preparation used was not made in Canada, as at first reported by the Orlando physician, but by a Philadelphia firm. Canadian authorities nevertheless have acted promptly to stop distribution of the serum first suspected, until the matter can be clarified.

Since all the patients affected had received injections from the same bottle; the theory is held that this particular bottle had become contaminated somewhere along the line. If this is true, then the case is not on a par with the elixir sulfanilamide tragedy, in which persons in various parts of the country were stricken. Such control as is proposed in the pending food and drug bill would have prevented the elixir fatalities, and would have gone far to promote the added vigilance that might well have prevented the present cancer serum deaths. Certainly there is no reason for further delay on the part of Congress in passing the bill.

MR. HOOVER ON WORLD AFFAIRS.

There was much of reasoned statesmanship and very little if anything that could be termed carping political criticism in the speech which former President Hoover made before the Council on Foreign Relations in New York City on the state of world affairs as he found them on his tour of Europe.

There can be no disagreement with his counsel that America has "both the obligation and the interest to organize and join in the collective moral forces to prevent war." There is comfort for all believers in the ultimate dignity and freedom of the human spirit in his finding that > . . . even in the Fascist countries, liberal ideas are not dead and will not be drowned. Every despotism lives with the fear of liberty in its heart—or else there would be no concentration camps . . . The spirit of Luther, of Goethe, of Schiller, of Mazzini and Garibaldi is not dead.

He found, furthermore, that even in the totalitarian countries, there is a deep-rooted longing for peace. In spite of the saber-rattling of Mussolini, in spite of Goering's "burning with eagerness" to prove Germany's invincibility, the peoples under the dictators desire to live out their lives in tranquillity. Notwithstanding all the "Viva Duces" and "Heil Hitlers" that have been extracted from Italian and German throats, these peoples are one with those of the "decadent democracies" in deploring the paradox of wholesale carnage in a civilized world.

Whether or not this feeling will have a chance to make itself effective in the dictator-controlled nations is a different matter, but there is a measure of reassurance in the first-hand testimony of Mr. Hoover that the feeling exists.

The ex-President's suggestion that the countries which owe us debts contracted for relief purposes after the last war should pay this money into a fund within their own borders to set up foundations for higher education, scientific research and the exchange of professorships and scholarships with the United States has a great deal to recommend it.

Such an enterprise would do much to build up good will between America and the nations involved—Poland, Belgium, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia. The settlement should redound to the benefit of America in a practical economic way, and, in any event, it is not likely that payment will ever be had in a more direct form.

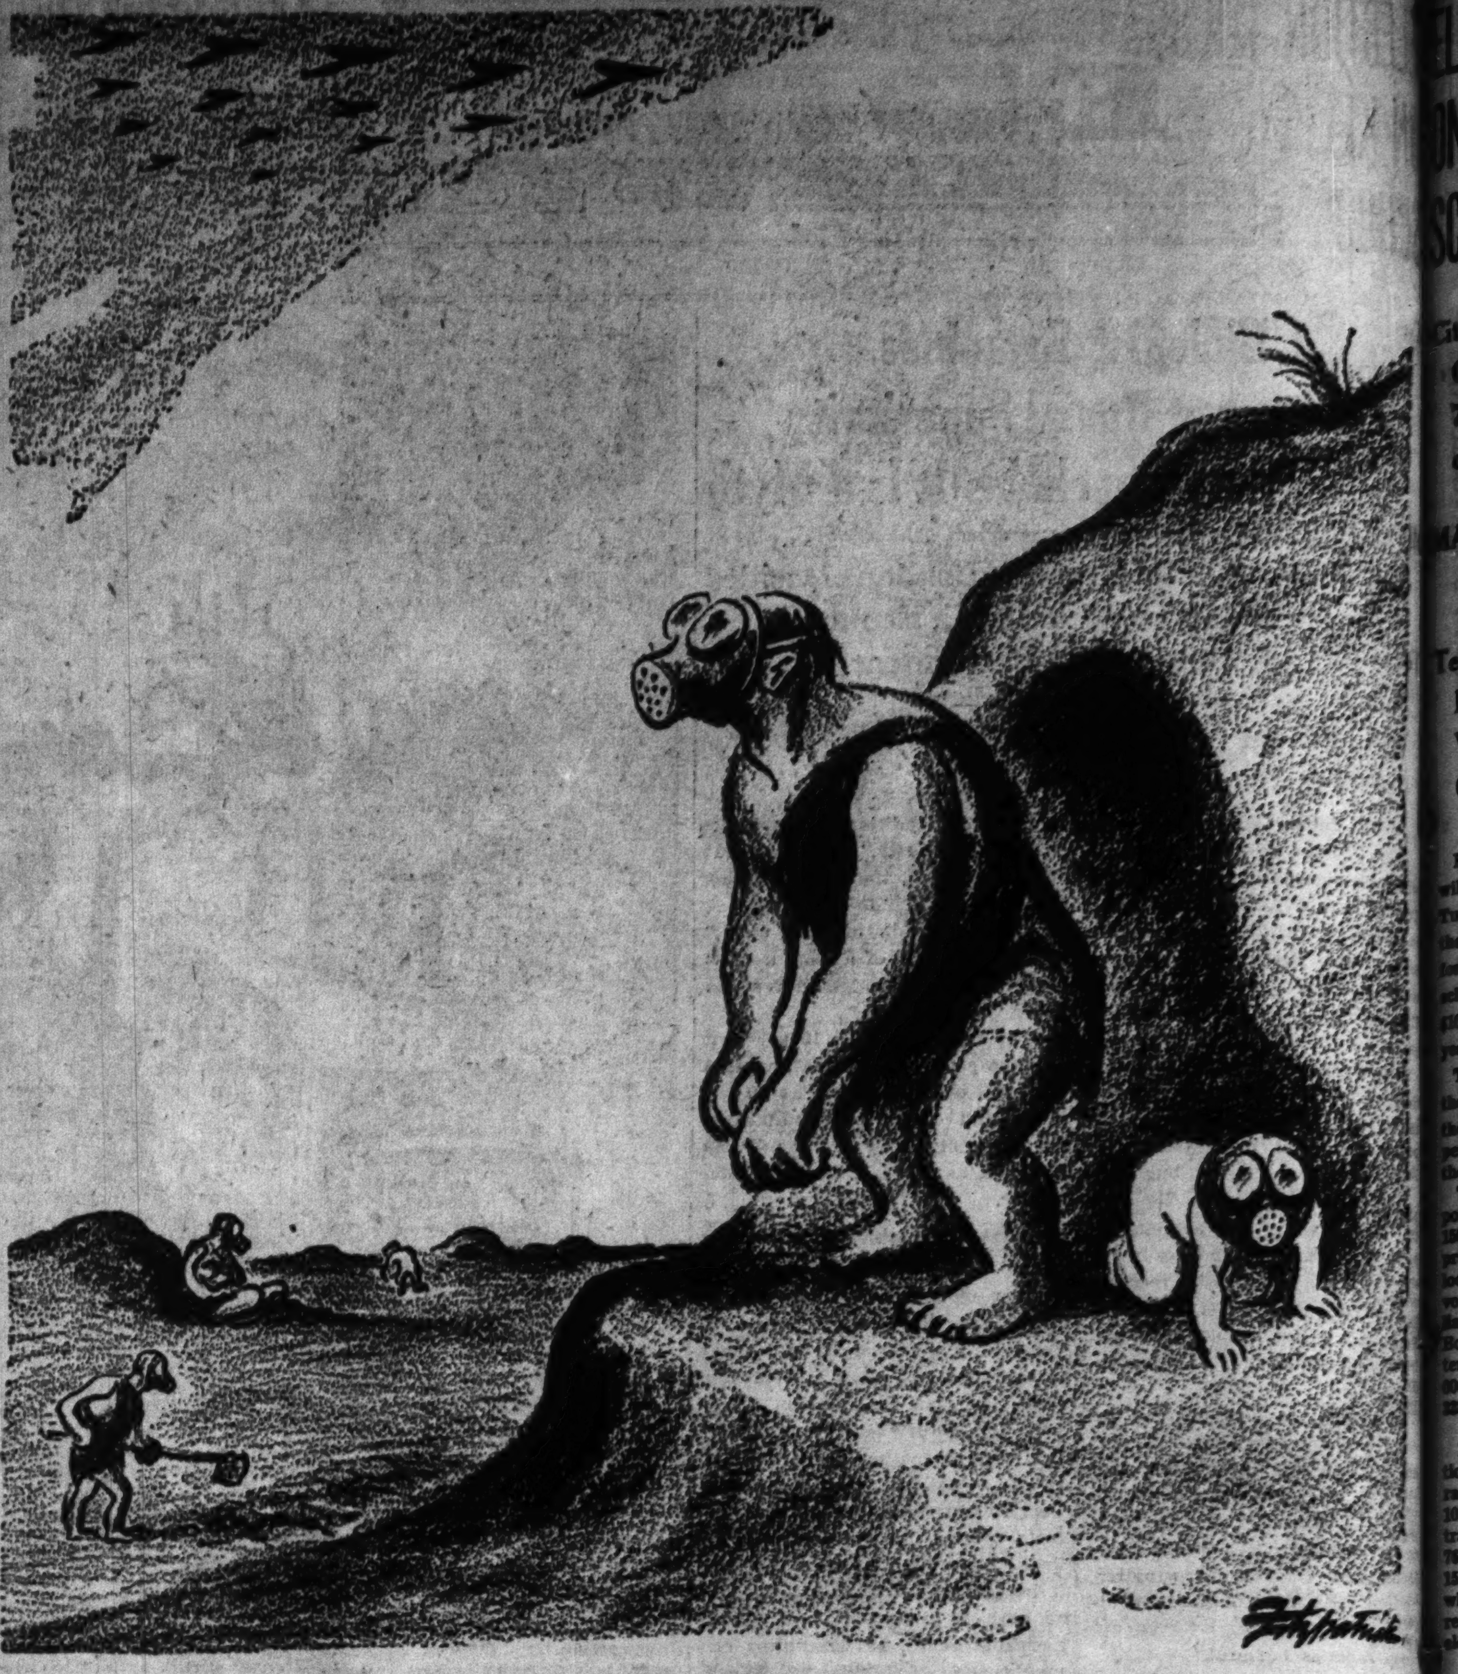
LIVELY HISTORY.

With the current issue, the Journal of the Illinois State Historical Society begins its thirty-first year in "new habiliments," and with other changes designed to eliminate, in the words of its able editor, Paul M. Angle, the Lincoln specialist, "the dullness which too often accompanies accuracy and merit in historical magazines." Although Mr. Angle's journal has never had the fault of dullness, its new format and features are unquestionably improvements; they emphasize the brightness which has been one of the magazine characteristics. A newsy article with the graphic title of "Hell and High Water" recounts the flood of 1937 in Southern Illinois. Another chronicles the outstanding events of last year over the State in diary form—an inventory which is to be taken annually from now on. The sesquicentennial of the Northwest Territory is observed with a sprightly report on how the French and British played in the Old Northwest, while short extracts from old books and articles in a new "scrapbook" department fulfill the editor's intention to "amuse and entertain." The renovated journal should bring new members into the Illinois Historical Society, to say nothing of increasing its own subscription list.



MOVE OUT OF THE CITIES. —Mussolini.

The Mexican Challenge

Propaganda by American oil companies and show of diplomatic antagonism is playing into hands of European interests in Mexico, says writer; good will purchased by halting social reforms would be too dearly bought, Mexicans believe; British gain edge by accepting Cardenas' program while United States capital fights back.

Carleton Beals, Author of "America South," in Current History.

IN "the good old days" of Porfirio Diaz in Mexico—that was before 1910—foreigners were above the law. Americans, whatever they did short of murder, were rarely haled before the courts. The Cientificos (the ruling inner clique of the dictatorship), serving as go-betweens for ambitious foreign concessionaires, handed over the wealth of Mexico in large, juicy gobs at bargain-counter rates. The masses of Mexicans were kept in harsh serfdom.

Today, the foreigner in Mexico walks softly, very softly. Many inroads on foreign ownership have been made. Mexico now claims that most American property in the country was acquired at a song, often in shady ways, that its value was then written up to flossy proportions, that many times over this fictional write-up has been taken out in profits. The Mexican people demand economic and political liberty; the Mexican nation demands political and economic autonomy.

What are the results to date? Since 1915, the year of the first land-distribution decree, nearly 48,000,000 acres of land have been taken away from large estates and given to the peasants. Of this, probably 4,500,000 to 5,000,000 acres represented American holdings, with an estimated value of about $100,000,000. American holdings seized prior to 1920 were awarded nominal amounts by a mixed claims commission.

The period from 1936-38 represents an effort to impose royalties on all oil production, including that of property acquired prior to 1917, a step excluded by the Morrow agreement with the United States in 1928. The British companies have acceded to this; the American companies are still fighting it.

The 1937 national economy law permits the Ministry of National Economy, if social welfare demands it, to oblige all producers in any given industry to join Government-controlled non-profit associations to handle the entire output, set quotas, fix prices and markets. The General Petroleum Administration may control quotas, output, storage and distribution of all private companies, and may itself explore, develop, store and market oil. A recent Supreme Court decision makes all private processing machinery, as that for henequen, minerals, sugar, cotton, etc., available to all independent, private and co-operative producers.

Government production in oil, begun 10 years ago to supply the National Railways and the Government, is now being expanded. The Government has entered the general market as a competitor; on part of its holdings, on a 50-50 basis with British capital. A large fleet of Government tankers is being built.

In this general process, British business has suffered less than American, particularly in the oil industry. Ten years ago, during the bitter struggle over property registration and concessions, the British companies left the united front with the American companies and agreed to abide by all Mexican laws. Thereby, they won valuable concessions.

For 10 years, the American oil companies, not liking even the Morrow compromise, have followed the punitive tactic of keeping production down in order to curtail the Government's tax income and to force more lenient policies. The British, needing an oil supply on this side of the Atlantic for war purposes in case the Rumanian, Near Eastern and Dutch Indies fields should be cut off, have constantly expanded operations.

More recently, the Mexican Government has been endeavoring to force all companies to pay royalties. The American companies have refused. As a warning, the Government utilized a very excellent technicality to nationalize 350,000 acres belonging to the Standard Oil of California. But the British promptly acceded, agreeing to pay from 15 to 35 per cent royalties, and as a result were awarded the Poza Rica field.

Ten years ago, American companies produced 70 per cent of Mexico's oil; today the British companies produce 60 per cent; with the new arrangements, will probably produce 75 per cent. They have made hay while the American companies sulked.

American interests bitterly opposed to the present Mexican regime and Roosevelt's good-will policy demanded that we cease assisting Mexico by our silver purchase program. Metal constitutes 76 per cent of Mexico's exports and provides 13 per cent of her revenues. In the first nine months of 1937, Washington bought $22,000,000 worth of Mexican silver (at about 5 cents an ounce over the market price) and about $28,000,000 worth of Mexican gold. Put an end to this, the complainants said, and Mexican economy would crumple up, and Cardenas would have to behave himself. The matter is not so simple as that.

The silver-purchase policy was adopted not so much to help Mexico as to help our own silver industry and promote our foreign trade. Mexico is today our sixth largest market. Critics claim that benefits were offset by our metal purchases and tourist expenditures.

Mexico is not showing herself properly grateful for good will, her critics claim. The Mexicans retort that if good will is merely an instrument to force the halting of social reform, then it is a very pernicious sort of good will.

Mexico has been angered by the increasing anti-Mexican propaganda put out by American petroleum and mining companies, which she feels is likely to bring about a resumption of our previous traditional policy of coercion and meddling.

She feels that her measures to control corporate wealth and elevate living standards are very similar to those of our own New Deal, and have even more justification in her case because the so-called "economic royalists" are aliens. She argues that if some 10,000,000 of her people, not now consumers of so-called civilized goods, are given decent living standards, thereby becoming a market for outside goods, in a few years we can sell her not merely $100,000,000 but $250,000,000 worth of goods.

The growing propaganda against Mexico by American oil interests, the increasing instances of diplomatic antagonism, are leading Mexican officials to believe that the country's economic life would be less exposed if her trade were tied up more with Europe than the United States.

Two Conceptions of Diplomacy

Harold Nicolson, British M. P., in Das Neue Tagebuch, Paris; Reprinted from Magazine Digest.

WHOEVER has studied the history of Anglo-German relations since 1871 will agree with me that the chief difficulty facing Britain has always consisted in her inability to obtain exhaustive information from the German Government regarding their real demands. Our frequent requests for such information have always been considered either insulting or in some manner deceptive by the Wilhelmstrasse.

The reason for this recurring misunderstanding lies in the fundamentally different conceptions of politics held by the two nations.

The British attitude to politics is that of a merchant desirous of clearing up his business transactions as efficiently as possible. We believe that when strong interests conflict, it should always be possible to arrive at a compromise by having each side sacrifice something; in this way, both sides will be ultimately satisfied, and the basis for future friendly relations established.

But the German attitude is the heroic one of the warrior. The ability to direct negotiations in one's own favor is taken as a measure of strength, is held to be expressive of the victory of one side and the defeat of the other. And not only that. The German is inclined to regard the whole structure of diplomacy as a kind of warfare in which military tactics should be used, i. e., surprise attacks, camouflage, maneuvers, etc., to outwit the enemy.

Thus while we consider a diplomatic negotiation as hardly more than a business agreement, the German considers such an attitude unheroic, "cattle-market politics." Every concession he is called upon to make seems to him a terrible humiliation, while every concession we make is to him a proof of our weakness. In other words, the goal of German politics is something abstract, i. e. prestige; concrete gains are important only as manifestations of this prestige.

This difference renders a lasting agreement between England and Germany difficult of attainment. This mental attitude is of vital importance in the problem of colonial concessions. Many people in England, not understanding the spirit that animates the German Government, believe that she would be grateful for a "magnanimous gesture" on our part. But to the German, "gratitude" means humiliation, and "magnanimity" condescension.

The Germans do not want us to be friendly at all; they want us to be afraid.

CODDLING OLD SHEP.

Jay B. Iden in the Pink Rag (Topeka).

ONLY in recent years have dogs been taken into the house and coddled. The old-time healthy dog that chased the morning passenger train and the afternoon freight off the farm never slept in a house in his life. And he wasn't exactly puny. The healthiest cats this country ever saw were those which had their entire being about farm barns. The closest they ever got to the fireplace in the living room was the back kitchen door, where they were given saucers of milk.

It may be a humane thing to heat a dog pound, but I'll bet an old-time dog would look in at the bunch of canines curled up in that shelter and call 'em all sissies.

LET FREEDOM RING.

From the Paterson (N. J.) News.

Thank goodness, we live in a free country, where a man may say what he thinks—if he isn't afraid of wife, neighbors or boss, and if he's sure it won't hurt his business or his reputation.

ELECTION TUESDAY ON KEEPING 85-CT. SCHOOL TAX RATE

City's 783 Precincts to Be Open From 6 A. M. to 7 P. M. for Special Poll on Maximum Levy.

MAYOR ANNOUNCES HE'LL VOTE FOR IT

Tells City Employes to Cast Ballots "in Accordance With Dictates of Their Consciences."

Polls in the city's 783 precincts will be open from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. Tuesday in the special election on the Board of Education proposition for authority to retain a maximum school tax rate of 85 cents on the $100 valuation for the next four years.

This has been the maximum authorized for the last 17 years and the amount actually levied in that period, except for three years when there were small reductions.

There is no active organized opposition. A heavy vote, possibly 150,000 to 175,000, is expected by proponents of the tax, who have asked for an overwhelmingly favorable majority. Chairman William H. Woodward of the Election Board expressed the opinion yesterday that the vote would be 115,000. The registration will be about [illegible].

Vote at Other Elections.

In the last quadrennial tax election, in 1934, the vote for the 85-cent rate was 86,187 to 23,649, a total of 109,836, or 33 per cent of the registration. In 1930 the result was 46,765 to 6313, a total of 53,078, or 15 per cent of the registration, which in that year was 348,951, a record volume for a school tax election.

The voter will have only to make one mark on his ballot. If he favors the 85-cent rate he will scratch "no"; if he opposes it, he will scratch "yes."

If the proposition fails to receive a majority vote, the school tax will revert to 60 cents on the $100—the maximum allowed under the State Constitution without a vote of the people. Such a reduction would cost the schools about $2,500,000 a year.

Statement by Mayor.

Mayor Dickmann, in a statement addressed yesterday to city employes, announces he will vote for the 85-cent tax. He urges all the employes to cast ballots on the question "in accordance with the dictates of their consciences."

This removes an element of doubt as to the Mayor's attitude toward the proposal, which has existed since the Board of Estimate and Apportionment asked the school board several months ago to reduce its charge this year to 75 cents. The Board of Estimate wanted this done so the city could impose a new 10-cent tax of its own to raise money for relief or reduction of the deficit, without increasing the aggregate tax rate. When the school board refused, maintaining that it needed the revenue of the full 85 cents, the Board of Estimate, comprising the Mayor, Comptroller Nolte and Aldermanic President Mason, announced that it would withhold support from the tax proposition.

School board members learned that for a time some city employes and other Democratic workers were interpreting the stand of the Board of Estimate as a hint to oppose the tax. However, a number of Democratic ward organizations and leaders recently indorsed the proposal, followed last week by unanimous indorsement by the Democratic City Committee, which is dominated by the Mayor. The Republican City Committee voted unanimous indorsement a month ago.

Mayor Dickmann, in his statement, says defeat of the proposal would "very seriously cripple our fine school system," leaving a favorable vote the only choice in his opinion. He points out that the school board could, if it wished, levy a tax of only 75 cents this year, after obtaining authority for the 85-cent maximum.

All Registered Voters Eligible.

All registered voters will be eligible to cast ballots. The law specifies that in such an election only voters who are taxpayers are qualified, but the Election Board has concluded that, in view of the sales tax, every one is a taxpayer. The Missouri sales tax has made its appearance since the last school tax election, but in the past it was held that taxes in various forms qualified all voters.

This will be the first election under the permanent registration law for St. Louis which went into effect last September. The last day for registering to qualify for this election was March 21.

Heretofore, the law has forbidden acceptance of ballots after the 7 o'clock closing hour of the polls, but this has been changed by the permanent registration law, which permits all voters who are waiting in the polling place at closing time to mark and deposit their ballots. This provision is expected to be of little importance this time, but of much benefit in presidential and mayoral elections.

The Citizens' School Tax Campaign Committee has announced that about 200,000 persons signed pledges to vote for the 85-cent tax. More than 400 educational, civic, political, religious, patriotic and labor organizations have indorsed the tax.

Active members of the Real Estate Exchange voted by a large majority to oppose the tax proposition, but the exchange, which campaigned vigorously against the 85-cent charge in 1934, has made no campaign this time. It held that the schools could not afford a cut to 60 cents, but should have asked for only 75 cents.

Workers to Get Out Vote.

Campaign officials announced that workers would be active in every precinct to get out a favorable vote. They will be supplied by the Public School Patrons' Alliance, the parent-teacher associations, the Child Conservation Conference and other groups. Many high school students also have volunteered to join in this work, which they will be permitted to do after school hours, subject to their parents' written consent. Teachers, principals and other school employes also will aid in the canvass after hours.

Leading the Citizens' School Tax Campaign Committee, which was set up at the instance of the School Board, is J. Harry Pohlman, a lawyer, former president of the Public School Patrons' Alliance.

The current issue of School and Home, an official publication of the School Board, declares that reduction of revenue would necessitate drastic retrenchments in every branch of the school system. Among the services which would have to be curtailed or abandoned, if the tax proposal fails, it says, are: Vocational schools, open-air schools, kindergartens, schools for the physically or mentally handicapped, evening schools, teachers' colleges, health service, free textbooks in the high schools, transportation for certain pupils, and use of school buildings by outside organizations. The publication calls attention to the heavy reduction of school revenue due to decreases in property assessments. Of the board's income, it adds, 89.1 per cent comes from local taxes, 8.7 per cent from the State and 2.2 per cent from miscellaneous sources.

Surplus Fund Used.

For the last two fiscal years expenditures of the board have exceeded income, the excess being drawn from a surplus fund built up previously. The board requires a surplus of about $2,000,000 in working capital as each fiscal year starts July 1, to meet expenses until the bulk of taxes are received late in the autumn. It was expected that the surplus would be about $3,000,000 at the end of the current fiscal year. School officials have said that the budget for the coming year, if comparable to the current one, would take another $1,000,000 from the surplus, leaving a minimum balance of about $2,000,000 in that account.

The board has made no provision yet for a general program of school construction. Recently it received official reports that nearly one-third of the schools now in use did not come up to requirements and contained potential fire hazards.

Radio Addresses Tomorrow to End School Tax Campaign.

The school tax campaign will end tomorrow with radio addresses by Edward A. Ferrenbach, president of the Board of Education; Joseph P. Clark, president of Central Trades and Labor Union; Mrs. Otto L. Schmitt, president of the Women's Lutheran League, and Miss Jeanne Blythe, president of the League of Women Voters.

There will be radio addresses this afternoon by Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman of Temple Israel and George L. Hawkins, assistant superintendent of instruction. Open house will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Resident Open-Air School, 199 East Cartwright avenue, with a plea for the tax.

The Third Ward men's Republican organization has announced its indorsement of the tax.

Sabotage in Soviet Plants Stubborn Fact

sionally to cadge a cigarette or to ask them to mail a letter.

It is understood that no persons arrested in Magnitogorsk are ever assigned to a local I. T. K. camp. Most of the prisoners are said to be thieves, prostitutes and other criminals; some are admittedly political prisoners. They all look like peasants, but after a few months of this life even a Moscow intellectual would have straw in his hair and blisters on his hands.

The "special exiles" are all peasants, exiled from European Russia into Siberia when the collective farms were launched. They are tough-looking, strong, ignorant. Some of them have become "shock-troop workers" and have distinguished themselves; these have received back the passports which make them free men. It is an open secret in the town, but officially unpublished, that the others have been refused their passports with the excuse that it is a time of "national emergency," although the original term of their exile—usually five years—has already expired. Meanwhile, they are free except that they cannot leave Magnitogorsk. They work in the plant itself, on roads and other construction jobs. Most of them run small gardens with a little livestock. They are bitter and silent about the Soviet regime.

A Vanished Colony.

A final index of how the official campaign against political heresy has changed Magnitogorsk is its foreign colony. Many of the iron and steel mills were designed by an American concern, the Arthur G. McKee Co. of Cleveland. Kurt May of German Bauhaus fame, designed the "sotsgorod" or "Socialist city." Schutzbunders from Vienna, German Communists, Czechs, Poles and Americans came to help build a new world. In 1932 the foreigners probably numbered close to 500 workers. Now the city's foreign population comprises one German specialist, apparently retained because of long-term guaranties on German-made equipment, seven persons who are bootblacks and two Chinese laundrymen. Some of the foreigners left voluntarily; the others have been arrested, deported or simply told that their Soviet visas had expired.

Use of Terror.

This is a record of police and other official action to defend the revolution. To the NKVD and the Kremlin, neither its scale nor its severity is out of line with the requirements of the class war inside the Soviet Union or of defense against the revolution's foreign enemies. How far direct police action has been supplemented by terror is another question.

The Bolsheviks have never hesitated to use terror. The traditional OGPU-NKVD formula of speed, ruthlessness and secrecy is deliberately calculated to produce terror. The curtain of silence which has fallen over the Urals in the last four years, making it almost impossible for a foreign correspondent to see factories, secure even non-military statistics or interview managers, is evidence of how thoroughly the last year's purge has resulted in terror among officials.

It has affected most directly the upper layers of Soviet life. In Magnitogorsk the political casualties among party, factory and government officials have thoroughly frightened those who survived. In six public offices in Chelyabinsk last week responsible persons refused this correspondent the figures of the city's population.

Effects on the Peasants.

Among the workers and especially among the peasants it is harder to find evidences of terror. The purge has baffled some of them, judging by their conversation, and discouraged others, but it has frightened very few. It has been accepted for the most part as an apparently integral part of the revolution, which with the common people of Russia has become steadily more popular over the last four years.

A young engineer, riding third class from central Asia to a new assignment more than half way to the Arctic, answered this correspondent's question about the meaning of the Soviet Union's purge of spies and traitors: "Chort znayet" ("The devil knows.")

"That's the only answer," he said. He then went on to talk with pride and enthusiasm about Karaganda, on the central Asian desert, and the nickel mines inside the Arctic Circle, and a new way of mining coal by cutting it with water under pressure.

NEW YORK AGAIN TO TRY REVISION OF CONSTITUTION

Seventh Convention of Kind to Open Tuesday in Albany, With Roosevelt's New Deal an Issue.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 2.—The seventh state constitutional convention since 1777, called to rewrite the State's basic law in the light of presentday social, economic and political conditions, will open here Tuesday in the Capitol, where President Roosevelt once served as Governor and where were originated the governmental policies he has since given to the nation.

During the summer, hundreds of proposed amendments to the present document will be debated. Running through the whole discussion will be this chief question: "Will the Constitution as finally adopted and sent to the electorate, which must vote on it next November, be a pro-New Deal or anti-New Deal instrument?"

And, coincidentally, in view of Democratic party developments since 1932, this other: "What part will Alfred E. Smith, once the close friend and mentor of Roosevelt, and now an avowed opponents of the New Deal, play in the session?"

Makeup of Convention.

The answer to the first question lies with 168 delegates, six of them women, who were chosen at the general State election last fall. Republicans will form the dominant group of 92, most of whom oppose the Roosevelt policies. Democrats will have 76 representatives.

Smith, four times Governor of New York and the outstanding figure in the 1915 constitutional convention, will be tenting on an old campground when he takes his seat as a delegate Tuesday. It was in the same chamber that, as a member of the State Assembly and its presiding officer, he made his first reputation for sharp-tongued debate and repartee.

In view of his 1932 break with Roosevelt and his campaign against him in 1936, Smith appears as the logical spearhead, either within the Democratic minority or in any possible Republican-Democratic coalition, for a drive against efforts to put into the Constitution of the President's home state his New Deal policies.

Expected Proposals.

The convention is expected to consider these important proposals:

Realignment of the State's senatorial and assembly districts to make legislative representation conform with population shifts of the last two decades.

Revision of the judicial system, including a proposal for appointment of all Judges either by the Governor or the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals.

Overhauling of the State fiscal system.

Revision of law enforcement sections, with one proposal for establishment of a State unit modeled on the Federal Department of Justice.

Creation of a unicameral legislature instead of the present two-house system.

Plans for furthering low-cost housing and slum clearance projects.

Legalization of pari-mutuel betting.

Extension of the principle of home rule for cities and other local communities.

Declarations of policy on the State's responsibility for public welfare and in regard to powers of the Legislature to appropriate funds for relief, old age pensions and unemployment and health insurance.

Basis of New York Action.

One of few states that periodically subject their Constitutions to this manner of revamping, New York goes back to the original document adopted April 20, 1777, for its inspiration.

In it there was written a section providing that every 20 years the question should be put before the people for a vote: "Shall there be a convention to revise the Constitution and amend the same?" Six such conventions have been held.

The people rejected the entire document drawn in 1915 and the State is now operating under the Constitution adopted in 1894, plus about 65 amendments approved individually since that time.

Machines and Rubber Workers

tions in the industry and they employ—despite a large increase in total production—only 52,000 men and women.

The average man-hour production has increased 600 per cent. This has come about by technological change at the same time that the life of a tire has been increased approximately 500 per cent. Beginning in 1917, rubber was converted from a hand craft to a mass production industry, operating on a scale of efficiency such as few other industries have achieved. Production was increasingly centralized here in Akron with the companies that are known as "the big four," Goodyear, General, Goodrich and Firestone. For a brief time during the peak of the post-war boom 70,000 workers were employed in the rubber industry in Akron.

Year by year, even as production increased, the total number of wage earners was reduced through the introduction of the Bedaux system, the task and bonus system and the measured motion system. Every operation in the great plants was photographed in detail with motion picture cameras. Each motion of each work operation was analyzed in relation to scientific charts of the human body and muscular action. It was discovered, to take a single small example, that a woman working with one hand at putting nuts on bolts could just as well work with two hands and increase her output by some 35 per cent. It was a stiff pace, a killing pace, but the piece work rates were high and if you could stand up to it, you made good money.

Factories Built Abroad.

Of course, there were counter trends. A form of decentralization began to take place shortly after the end of the World War. There had been a large export production of tires and rubber products out of Akron. But as Republican administrations hiked up tariff barriers, other countries followed suit and it became impossible to get American tires across many tariff walls. Therefore plants were established abroad. American rubber companies either own outright, or have contractual arrangements with factories producing tires and other products in Canada, Mexico, the British Isles, France, Germany, Australia, Argentina, Japan, Spain, Uruguay, Dutch East Indies, India and South Africa. And its report that other foreign locations, among them New Zealand, are being considered for plant sites.

In his statement to stockholders, just this week President P. W. Litchfield of Goodyear pointed with pride to the continuing "high level" of business in foreign countries, which, he said, "represents a continuing source of profit to the company."

Then there was the factor of transportation cost. Plainly it was a disadvantage to pay freight charges on raw rubber and then to pay more charges on the finished product. (The water haul through the Panama Canal made it cheaper to ship that way from coast to coast and penalized all inland industries). In 1920, Goodyear established a plant at Los Angeles—it was a logical move since a great deal of the raw rubber used in the industry comes from the Far East. Firestone followed and finally in 1928, Goodrich, too, built a California plant.

Unionization a Blow.

While the industry in general was expanding, the effect of this decentralization was not so marked. At the start of the depression, in 1930, leaders in the industry introduced a six-hour day and that somewhat cushioned the shock of unemployment. It was not until the United Rubber Workers of America succeeded in organizing Akron that decentralization became an issue, with talk in the air that this community might become a ghost town.

Unionization was a bitter blow for the masters of the rubber industry. They had never brooked any interference in the conduct of their business. Litchfield has always taken pride in the scale of wages paid at Goodyear. He had introduced an elaborated employe-representation plan with a House and a Senate, the privilege of veto remaining with the paid executives of the firm. As union activity increased, it was shown before the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee, the big rubber companies were contributing increasingly large amounts to the Employers' Association of Akron and most of this money went for industrial espionage. Thus, in 1933, Goodrich gave $6220, in 1934 $9216, in 1935, $10,868 and in 1936, $11,117.

Strikes, Then Moving.

In 1936 there was a prolonged strike at Goodyear. Feeling was intense on both sides. A large percentage of the workers in the rubber plants came here from West Virginia—native stock with a pride of independence that turns into sullen resentment on suspicion of injustice or abuse. "Quickies" and sit-downs interrupted production at other plants. A vigilante movement, calling itself a Law and Order League, was started by the Mayor with the indorsement of Goodyear. In the "best" residential district, where Firestone, Seiberling and other rubber barons have their mansions, it was feared the revolution was at hand.

But decentralization was easier and less expensive in the long run. This is what has happened during the last eight years—much of it in the last two years. Goodyear established a plant at Gadsden, Ala., with an initial production of 5000 tires a day, the town guaranteeing a long period of tax immunity. In 1936, when an effort was made to organize the Gadsden plant, 250 extra policemen were put on duty and organizers were beaten and driven out of town. Somewhat later Goodyear took over and expanded the Kelly Springfield plant at Cumberland, Md.

No Unions in New Spots.

Last year Firestone established a large plant at Memphis, Tenn., and another one at Noblesville, Ind. At the same time Goodyear opened a plant at Jackson, Mich., and moved its entire rubber sole and heel production to Windsor, Vt. Goodrich owned a small plant at Oaks, Pa., which was expanded for the manufacture of tires and also transferred a "sizeable portion" of the mechanical rubber goods production to Cadillac, Mich.

In none of these towns is there any effective union organization thus far. Oaks, Pa., is the center of a Mennonite colony and the Goodrich plant there employs young farm boys and girls whose religious principles will not permit them to belong to a trade union or any other secular organization. And in each of these communities the wage scale is considerably below that of Akron, according to Herbert Maxhon, spokesman for the Goodrich Co. in the absence of T. G. Graham, operating vice-president.

"We have found," Maxhon said, "that young farm people can take hold and operate the new machines almost as efficiently as old workers in Akron. We had always supposed that a costly period of training would be necessary but we find that that is not true."

Ultimatum by Goodrich.

What brings the whole question to a focus is the ultimatum issued by Goodrich on March 9. Graham in a letter to L. L. Callahan, president of the Goodrich local of United Rubber Workers, declared that new wage negotiations would be conditioned "on approval of a vertical pay cut amounting to 17.5 per cent and adjustment of hours to permit a flexible working day of six to eight hours. The alternative, he said, was the loss of 5000 Goodrich jobs to Akron.

"Today," Graham said, "the major competitors of Goodrich in the tire field are producing less than one-third of their total tire production in Akron. Goodrich is still producing two-thirds of its tires in Akron.

"Hourly wages paid by Goodrich in Akron to the men and women engaged in tire production are 25 per cent higher, on averages, than the weighted hourly wages of men and women in the entire plants of our competitions outside of Akron."

An immediate barrage of propaganda from a variety of sources sought to persuade union members to accede to the Goodrich demand. Milk men on their routes interviewed housewives, impressing on them the dire effects that would follow the loss of 5000 jobs. Auto salesmen and installment collectors made house-to-house canvasses on the same mission. The union first announced it would hold an election on Graham's proposal but subsequently called it off.

"Effort to Break Union's Power."

Shrewd and intelligent young officers of the union such as Thomas Burns, international vice-president, insist that in large part the company's threat is an empty one, intended merely to scare the workers into submission. Several factors, quite apart from labor costs dictate decentralization, Burns says and the process will continue despite any adjustments in wage scales, although a considerable share of production will be retained here.

Basic and perhaps inevitable changes in the industry are being used, in Burns' interpretation, to break the power of the union. In support of this he contends that the actual saving on labor costs—when all elements, efficiency and so forth are taken into consideration—is only 3 per cent of the total cost of production. And he points, too, to Graham's refusal to give any assurance that there will be no further decentralization if the unions agrees to the wage cut.

Basic Changes Involved.

Certainly it is true that basic changes are involved. Many Akron plants are more than 20 years old and are therefore outmoded. Starting anew in the South a narrow single-story plant is constructed with an assembly line down the entire length so that raw rubber comes in one end and finished tires come out the other. That is another source of dissension, company officials asserting that the union has prevented the production of certain labor saving devices. Burns replies for the union that it has never opposed technological change in principle and that differences on this question could readily have been adjusted if the company had really been interested in co-operating.

Burns readily admits that in some plants workers succeeded in slowing down production. But he points to the fact that the union is hardly more than two years old here and that discipline within the ranks has steadily improved. Union officials acted promptly to stop such independent action on the part of small groups. Burns contends that if Goodrich workers agreed to the cut, it would mean an immediate demand for similar wage reduction in plants with lower wage scales outside of Akron.

In Strategic Locations.

In part, of course, decentralization of the rubber industry follows the pattern of decentralization of the automobile industry which has been spurred on by similar forces in recent years. The "big four" in rubber established new plants near the assembly plants of Ford, General Motors and Chrysler. Thus the new Firestone plant at Memphis is in a position to supply assembly plants at St. Louis and Kansas City as well as certain Southern points. There is scarcely a single American industry that is not affected by this same process of migration.

Meanwhile Goodrich discusses seriously the prospect of moving out. Offers have come, according to company officials, from cities and towns in 20 states, some of them not only guaranteeing tax immunity, but holding out large cash bonuses, free water and similar inducements. A saving of 33 1-3 per cent could be effected by moving, it is asserted, this figure including the labor-saving as well as the reduction in cost to be achieved through new style plant and machinery.

Comparison of Wages.

And Goodrich officials point to wage comparisons. The average per hour for all persons working in the tire division in Akron is $1.10 to $1.15. The average rate in the South is between 60 and 75 cents. The average at Oaks, Pa., is about 85 cents and for California from 90 to 95 cents.

Exactly how many jobs Akron has lost as a result of decentralization no one seems able to say. The figure has been put at 15,000 of an average total of 40,000 in the last 10 years, but the union insists that this includes a large number of jobs lost as a result of the depression and recent technological changes. Whatever the seriousness of the Goodrich threat it has struck real fear into this community.

Many of the Goodrich workers have been with the company for 10 or 12 years and it would be impossible for them to find jobs in any other line. The future would hold nothing but relief and very little of that. While the union carried the recent Labor Board election at the Firestone plant by 3696 for the United Rubber Workers to 2564 for the company union, the latter figure was far higher than anyone expected. And union officials frankly admit that fear was a factor.

Workers Left Behind.

Akron workers are never taken to the new plant at the new sites. In fact, according to the union, at the Goodyear plant at Jackson, Mich., a two-year residence in the town is required before one is eligible for a job. The workers are left behind along with the outmoded buildings.

It is a powerful weapon, this thing of decentralization, no matter whether in the present instance it is a threat or an imminent reality. It may prove stronger in the long run than espionage and every other form of resistance to organization.

Union officials who take the long view declare that it can only delay the ultimate unionization of the entire industry and perhaps delay it only a few years. But that is little consolation for those who are left behind. It is small wonder that there are so many evidences of bitterness and hostility in this gray city of rubber.

UNIONS PLAY BIG ROLE IN PENNSYLVANIA RACE

A. F. of L. and C I O Split There Complete With Latter's Ticket Chosen.

By the Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 2.—Pennsylvania's American Federation of Labor and Committee for Industrial Organization unions, held together long after similar splits in other states, have reached the parting of the ways.

Unions loyal to William Green and the American Federation of Labor will gather here April 7, 8 and 9 to reorganize the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor. This became necessary after Green revoked the 40-year-old charter of the old federation—because its officers refused to expel unions affiliated with John L. Lewis' C I O.

The officers, including President John Phillips, pleaded with Green for harmony in Pennsylvania because, they asserted, 80 per cent of the Federation, including the powerful United Mine Workers of America, had gone under the Lewis banner.

The C I O unions promptly formed the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council. This week they perfected their organization by choosing Phillips to head it, adopting a constitution and entering the political fight centering around Pennsylvania's May 17 primary. They indorsed Lieutenant-Governor Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, for Governor on the Democratic ticket—in opposition to the Democratic State Committee's candidate, Charles Alvin Jones, Pittsburgh lawyer.

Organized labor, always a factor in Pennsylvania, thus assumed a major part in the primary. U. S. Senator Joseph F. Guffey, long a Pennsylvania Democratic leader, came out for Kennedy in a bolt from the regular organization gubernatorial choice.

"Labor," said Guffey, "can not win without the Democratic party and the Democratic party can not win without labor."

Guffey went on to make it a clean break from the committee by turning against Gov. George H. Earle, committee candidate for the United States Senate, and indorsing Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia. Wilson had announced for the Senate from Kennedy's Harrisburg headquarters.

Pennsylvania's C I O groups claim 508,000 members. A. F. of L. unions claim 400,000. Lewis had said he can muster 800,000 Pennsylvania votes. In the 1934 election—which gave Pennsylvania its first Democratic Governor in 40 years—2,950,399 votes were cast.

At Hableton, in the heart of the anthracite region, mine union officials announced Lewis would speak there probably May 14, three days before the primary, in behalf of Kennedy.

Campaigns for office in the new A. F. of L. unit have been started by James Wright, business agent of the Teamsters' Union Council of Pittsburgh, for president, and Glenn Feller, president of Harrisburg Typographical Union No. 14, for secretary-treasurer.

"Organized labor is at the crossroads today," Feller asserted. "We stand pledged to maintain the integrity of the State Federation and its membership and at the same time promote harmonious relations among all organized workers without sacrificing any of the fundamental principles of the State and American Federation of Labor."

Man's Ultimate Dilemma

THE LONELY DEBATE. By Houston Peterson. (Reynal & Hitchcock, New York.)

DR. PETERSON prefaces his compilation of "dilemmas from Hamlet to Hans Castrop" with cogent observations which extend to the fields of creative writing, social philosophy, history and politics. Hamlet's soliloquy, in his opinion, is the most celebrated speech in literature because "it expresses in perfect form, in brief and terrifying form, man's ultimate dilemma; because it dramatizes for each one of us the baffled individual in the agony of indecision." Though man is a gregarious being, he is, in moments of great trouble or confusion, his own last resort. Isolated and suspended, as it were, in infinite space, he must needs begin that "lonely debate" which almost every mortal experiences at one time or another, but which only the literary genius can transmute into universally understandable words.

The "interior monologue" of Joyce and Proust's "stream of consciousness" device, presenting inchoate and only partially realized thoughts emerging from the subconscious, are not, accurately speaking, soliloquies, according to Dr. Peterson. The soliloquy is "consciousness at its incandescent heights—desperately mature thought inflamed by passion and pressing interest." The position of a person who stands pondering between two choices is one that calls for intensive thinking and careful weighing of alternative courses. Pursuing his theme, Dr. Peterson considers the nine ways of "handling or manhandling" dilemmas.

Though his book specifically examines only those soliloquies which fall within the range of modern literature (since Shakespeare), Dr. Peterson holds that the soliloquy began in the Garden of Eden, when Adam and Eve were temporarily separated. He mentions several books in which the leading characters are projected into crises logically demanding soliloquies which the authors have neglected to set down, thus robbing the works of potential significance and power. The individual reader, of course, may question Dr. Peterson's inclusion or interpretation of certain examples of "the lonely debate," but there can be no doubt that here is a lively and original study presented in both a scholarly and an exciting manner.

From the Negro Viewpoint

UNCLE TOM'S CHILDREN. By Richard Wright. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

THE four long stories which comprise this book form a moving and powerful plea for the case of the Negro in a "white man's civilization." The work of a young Negro newspaper man, they are of course written entirely from the Negro viewpoint, but the stories ring so true and show such thorough understanding of the barriers between the races that no intelligent white person will question their authenticity. They are not pleasant reading. All of them are violent and emotionally devastating. But their terse prose and their great power make them memorable.

The first story, "Big Boy Leaves Home," is a cruel tale of torture and murder which grow out of a thoroughly innocent escapade of four adolescent Negro boys. The terror of bewildered "Big Boy," as he sees his schoolmate tarred and feathered and burned to death by an insane mob of "white folks," is something the reader will not easily forget. The second and third stories are concerned with the murders of white men by Negroes and the consequent inescapable retribution. The first murder is the result of the effort of a Negro to save his critically ill wife from their flood-surrounded shack in a boat stolen from a white man; the other is the result of miscegenation. Both are thoroughly justified—from the viewpoint of the character involved at least—but the Negro has no chance to justify himself. The last story is a slightly less violent one of a Negro minister whose congregation looks to him for help when their "relief" is cut off and who, in his simplicity, is utterly confused between the threats of the town officials and the promises of the Reds. While the character of the minister, Dan, is excellently done, this last tale carries the only slightly false note of the entire book.

"Uncle Tom's Children" has been awarded the prize offered by "Story Magazine" for the best manuscript submitted by an author connected with the Federal Writers' Projects.

Songs of Revolt

LET THEM EAT CAKE! By Joe Hoffman. (B. C. Hagglund, Holt, Minn.)

IN May, 1936, several hundred unemployed St. Louisans gathered before the City Hall demanding work or food. Among the leaders of the demonstration was a young man named Joe Hoffman, who later recorded his impressions of that day in a poem entitled "Let Them Eat Cake." The poem now appears as the title piece in a collection of Hoffman's verse.

Hoffman writes as a representative of the oppressed, of the millions who have no bread. His themes are those of rebellion against the evils of present-day society. There is nothing passive about his protest; the call to arms is sounded again and again, and the hope of a brighter day lies behind each line.

There are quieter notes, too, but even in the love lyrics and meditations the note of deprivation and pain is present, distorting them into bitter thoughts of what might be. The verses reflect a mind completely bound up with the struggle, unable to shake itself free even for an instant.

Hoffman's verse is a composition of quick and nervous rhythms, showing little respect for conventional forms. His approach is abstract rather than personal, exhortative rather than evocative. One cannot imagine his poems being chanted by marching men on picket lines; but one can imagine them crashing into the minds of readers with the impact of the personality behind them.

They Found No Golden Cities

FAR FROM CIBOLA. By Paul Horgan. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

A WIDOWED farmwoman, an aged couple, a restaurant keeper, a starving hitchhiker, and a farmer, his wife and triplet sons have all migrated to the New Mexican plains in search of riches, just as, centuries before, the Spaniards had done, lured by fables of the seven golden cities of Cibola. Here, these present-day adventurers live in patient expectation, although they too are still far from Cibola, far from their visioned wealth.

Now, after a year of drouth and dust and crop failure, they are gathered about the courthouse, tantalized by the rumor that it contains food and gold, sent to them by the Government. They gossip and quarrel in the hot sun, their anger mounting slowly, until, with unreasoning violence they surge against the doors. Then, as quickly as it arose, their frenzy sinks at the appearance of the Sheriff who fires a few random shots into the trees and admonishes them quietly. Suddenly one of the triplets, who had chosen a large tree as a vantage point, falls to the ground, struck by one of the carelessly aimed bullets. The people continue to disperse quietly, their strength and anger spent. In this scene the author brings the study of his characters to a climax, and then allows them to fade away.

This novel marks a departure from Paul Horgan's usual narrative style. Although there is no formal plot, the carefully developed character sketches, which comprise the book, gain unity from the setting. The sincerity and the acute perception with which the book is written reveal the author's talent. He has drawn men and women with relentless clarity against a background which he understands thoroughly. The result is not pleasant, but it embodies the interest of living personalities and the force of truthfulness.

A Moving Tale Of Nazidom

AFTER MIDNIGHT. By Irmgard Keun. Translated by James Cleugh. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York.)

IT is a slight story that the writer of this novel has to tell, and for plot alone the book would merit slight attention. In the development and atmosphere, however, a high degree of skill is demonstrated. This is particularly true because of the restraint with which the story is told, thus achieving an effective contrast with the bitter realism of the scenes depicted.

The manner is simple, even naive, in keeping with the character of the narrator. She is Sanna Moder, a 19-year-old German girl of impeccable "Aryan" descent, with no interest in politics until it is unavoidably thrust upon her by the Nazi dispensation. She is one of the little people in the great crowds that always line the streets, cheering and saluting, admiring the uniforms, absorbing the spectacle, when the Fuehrer makes a public appearance.

But Sanna for a long time doesn't understand what is going on, and she is terribly afraid someone will notice her bewilderment. For do not Goering and other Ministers often say quite loudly and angrily on the radio that there are still certain people who do not realize what is at stake, and that the Government will know how to deal with them? Sanna fears she has a criminal nature or a psychological defect, and that she will be ruined if her guilty secret is found out.

She learns soon enough. Certain of her friends who happen to be Socialists or Jews must be avoided, or seen in secret. One must be careful what one says, for people with alert ears and quick tongues are all about, eager to curry favor with the mighty or pay off grudges by reporting chance remarks. There are new rules about everything, even for simple frauleins. "It's bad enough to have to know the regulations when you're in business," Sanna reflects, "but now we've got to study rules about love, too; it's pretty hard on people, I think."

The quiet tone of the book, the rambling conversations of its perplexed people, the little details of their everyday life, make the inevitable tragedies all the more poignant when they arrive. The writer uses her art to draw an indelible picture, in terms of a few random individuals, of what Fascist regimentation does to the human spirit.

SPRINGTIME IN SOMERSET

From "Jefferies' England," Edited with an Introduction, Notes, and Check Lists by Samuel J. Looker. (Harper & Bros., New York.) The volume contains 31 essays by Richard Jefferies (1848-87), who is regarded by many as the greatest nature-writer England has produced. His masterpieces are "The Story of My Heart" and "Bevis," the latter being unsurpassed as a story of boy life.

For Imaginative Children

THE HOBBIT. By J. R. R. Tolkien. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.)

IT isn't unlikely that those who are now about 12 years old may say to their children in some future time, "You have to be grown-up before you can truly appreciate 'The Hobbit'." People always say that about the best children's books. Perhaps it's true. Or perhaps it's only remembering the pleasure they once had that makes them say it.

At any rate, here is the hobbit, a funny kind of personage who is neither a man nor a dwarf. He is a smooth-shaven individual, slightly fat, who lives in the comfort of a well appointed hobbit hole under the hill, until the day when he starts forth with a wizard and some dwarfs on a journey of mad adventure.

Then it is that we cross the edge of the wild with this strange company, and become familiar with places like the Misty Mountains, and the Elvenking's Hall, and the long lake of Esgaroth, and River Running. Adventures crowd upon each other in rapid succession, until it seems that the hobbit will never come out of it alive—with the menace of the wolves and the goblins, and the wild escape in barrels from the elves. Finally Smaug, the dragon, is killed, and, after proper disposition of the treasure and the establishment of diplomatic relations among those concerned, the hobbit is free to trail his way back to the hobbit hole.

This book furnishes a rare experience for the imaginative child. The style has a lift and a lightness that carry the story, and a humorous turn that enhances it. At the end the hobbit is an old friend.

A Footnote To History

FAREWELL 'TOINETTE. By Bertita Harding. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

TOLD with more verve and moving at a faster pace than "The Golden Fleece," this gay and lively account of an episode, which Bertita Harding calls "A Footnote to History," again concerns the more or less private affairs of the royal family of Hapsburg.

The 14-year-old Archduchess Maria Antonia Josepha Johanna of Austria ('Toinette in the privacy of Schoenbrunn), was being ceremoniously escorted to France to become Madame la Dauphine, wife of the future Louis XVI—a measure deemed expedient, from a political standpoint, by her mother, the Empress Maria Theresa. En route, the imposing bridal cavalcade stopped overnight at an "inn" in Swabia. Only after the party had dined, wined, flirted and made merry, was it learned that the place was not a hostelry, but the palace of Duke Karl Eberhard, who had perpetrated this amiable hoax. 'Toinette alone never learned that the "postillion" with whom she fell in love that glamorous, exciting evening, was really a Prince in disguise.

The emphasis on history in this delightful novel is slight, although the general outline will be familiar to readers of Stefan Zweig. The romantic treatment of the story might lend it the quality of a fairy tale in modern idiom, except for the prophetic character of the young Prince's unspoken farewell to 'Toinette! "They will not hear of you again in Schwabenland until your head rolls down into a trough."

—Virginia Annan Schroeder.

THE life of Hannah, protagonist of this unusual story, is a continuous struggle to harmonize the conflicting forces in her personality, namely, the desires and loves of an ordinary woman and the hopes and ambitions of an adventurous man. She looks upon life through the eyes of both, and in the end finds the medium that brings peace.

A Momentous Controversy Reviewed

THE 168 DAYS. By Joseph Alsop and Turner Catledge. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York.)

A YEAR ago the country was up to its ears in the most momentous controversy in the nation's century and a half over the place and function of the United States Supreme Court. Now, in less than nine months after the fight's close, appears its history, presented by two crack Washington correspondents, with full appreciation of the drama which runs through it from beginning to end.

The general outline of their fast-moving chronicle is familiar to all who followed the Washington news from the morning of Feb. 5, 1937, when the President made public the bold plan to remake the Supreme Bench, to the afternoon of July 22, when that by then much-battered plan was recommitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee by a vote of 70 to 20. Employing the apt phraseology of the military, they tell the story, after reporting the origin of the bill, in terms of recruiting, trench warfare, rear-guard action, the self-confident commander of a desperate staff, retreat, hand-to-hand combat and finally the "catastrophe."

In preparation for the writing of their book, Messrs. Alsop and Catledge had few documents and papers to read, but they questioned, so they say, every important participant in the fight except Mr. Roosevelt. They report certain important conversations which they did not hear, in the hope that much which would "otherwise have been lost has now been preserved." They recognize the limitations of their work under the circumstances, and frankly expect that the eventual publication of the President's private papers, Cummings' diary and the Robinson-Baruch correspondence will supplement and probably modify their conclusions.

The outstanding quality of the book, in the opinion of this reader, is its effort at fairness. The writers are not content to expose the impracticality of the Cummings plan—and they leave no question as to whose mind conceived the idea of appointing an extra Justice for each member of the court past 70 who failed to retire. They say without hesitation that it was the Supreme Court itself which was responsible for the impasse out of which the plan arose. They let go at executive and judiciary alike as their consciences direct.

Summed up, the chief complaint of these Washington writers against the President is that his political judgment was bad. They feel, as do many others who followed the events of "the 168 days," that Mr. Roosevelt might well have turned defeat into victory if he had been 'better advised. In the end, they find that the President, although he lost the battle, won the war with the new turn to constitutional interpretation in the court itself.

Many readers will be surprised to find how early in 1936 the President had Attorney-General Cummings studying the question of what was to be "done" about the Supreme Court. For it is evident from this recital that, while only a few persons were consulted, the bill was long in the making, drafted and redrafted many times. At the very time Republican campaigners were vainly trying to make an issue of the Constitution, the research program was under way.

The book has it errors. The name of the Federal Trade Commissioner unconstitutionally fired by Mr. Roosevelt in 1933 was Humphrey, not Humphries, as printed repeatedly. If Willis Van Devanter has the middle initial "J", he has not used it in the Congressional Directory or Who's Who in America, either at the outset of his Supreme Court career or in recent years. And certainly there will be those to question the judgment that the "Humphries case" was "comparatively trivial." To many, the court's unanimous stay of a ruthless executive will to remove an independent officer is one of its most important works.

—Irving Dilliard.

Excessively Psychological

FORGIVE US OUR VIRTUES. By Vardis Fisher. (The Caxton Printers, Ltd., Caldwell, Idaho.)

VARDIS FISHER, when a student at the University of Chicago, studied novel-writing under Robert Herrick, who, it is said, told him he would never be a novelist. Presently Fisher wrote and sold a series of four moodily introspective stories of himself, of which the last was "No Villain Need Be." These, though evincing considerable industry and skill and carrying no little interest, did not prove Prof. Herrick wrong. Now comes "Forgive Us Our Virtues." This added evidence may leave the professor's prediction hanging on the ropes but still in the ring, for, though there is no precise definition of a novel, it is not clear yet, to this reviewer at least, that Fisher's books are novels.

They have interest, yes—an interest for those who read for scandal as well as the more thoughtful and discriminating; they have character and character development in significant contemporary settings; they have a story quality of a sort; but everything, on every page, is made to transcend mere human interest and cross into the field of the technical psychologist—the kind of-psychologist to whom a hearty and understandable plunge into a lake for a swim is a symbol of purification of some hidden sense of guilt. Since, within these premises, sex relations are a principal source of guilt sense, "Forgive Us Our Virtues" resolves itself into casebook monographs on an assortment of pairings, right man with wrong woman and vice versa—though in most of the cases, for purposes of the thesis, both parties are wrong.

Proving his own point, at least for himself, Fisher says, in effect, people are fast driving themselves crazy with misemphasized preoccupation with sex; and the way to regain sanity, to follow the precept of the story, is to go to wildest Idaho, find there a girl, beautiful, intelligent, educated, and willing, and run around in the rain and snow with clothes off. With all respect to the great outdoors, this seems an unnecessarily elaborate road to reason.

It's about time somebody psychologized the psychologists. They are —some of them, anyway—even nuttier than the rest of us.

—Harold Tecumseh Meek.

Finds Foreigners Just People

THESE FOREIGNERS. By William Seabrook. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.)

WILLIAM SEABROOK had observed the casual way in which his Hudson River Valley neighbors accepted the Italians, Poles, Russians, and other foreigners as integrant parts of that community, and wondered whether the entire American scene had changed in the years since his childhood, when foreigners had been regarded by the natives as outsiders. "What about these, or those, 'damned foreigners' scattered from Maine to Minnesota? Were they an 'alien,' undesirable element? Or when you got close to them, were they just 'people,' good, bad and indifferent, like the rest of us?"

He set out on a tour of exploration among the foreign groups in the United States, among the Scandinavians in Minnesota, the Germans in Missouri, the Italians in California, the Russians in New York, the Poles in Pennsylvania, and discovered that "the melting pot is a real thing," that the Swedes, Italians, Poles, Germans, Russians are today all Americans, all in the same boat. The Scandinavians, he learned, are "heavy and dumb," and at the same time gay and intelligent. The Italians are, above all, business men, more interested in material gains than in anything else. He observes that Russians are "unbelievable" in any setting. "Good, bad, indifferent, rich or poor, they are always fantastic." Characteristic of the Pole is his love of the soil. Every miner and steelworker of Polish origin may be a frustrated farmer. The German is solid and substantial, his greatest contribution to this country being in practical business, music and cooking.

Regarding political opinions, he learned among the Italians that while many may be enthusiastic for Mussolini—in Italy—they are all "loyal, democratic Americans" in this country. "Most Italian-American employers are Fascist, and most of the workers are anti-Fascist, but it doesn't seem to have much bearing on our democracy." In reference to Hitlerism in America, Seabrook notes that of the Germanic population of over 5,000,000, 70 per cent are totally indifferent towards the Nazis, 20 per cent definitely anti-Nazi, 9 per cent pro-Nazi "in a sense consistent with loyalty to the U. S. A.," and less than 1 per cent are militantly Nazi.

The author, who refers to himself as "an old-fashioned Ogden Mills Tory black Republican," has apparently derived his conclusions from conversations with members of the upper strata of the foreign element groups, his sources of information being the professors, bankers, big business men and politicians with whom he dined and wined. His book reads, to a great extent, like a series of Horatio Alger success stories.

"These Foreigners" will be widely read and enjoyed—by the middle class, whose opinions and prejudices the author reflects.

Thomas and Jane Novelized

SPEAKING DUST. By E. Thornton Cook. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

IT is extremely doubtful that anyone, given even an abundance of diaries and letters, can reconstruct a personality of the past with anything approaching the whole complex truth; but, following Goethe's precept of subjecting "wahrheit" to much imaginative and sympathetic "dichtung," it is possible, as E. Thornton Cook has done in this story of the lives of Thomas and Jane Carlyle, to make a human and readable biographical novel.

Thomas, that "sprawling, lang, ill-put-together thing," was the son of good honest Scots of the village of Ecclefechan. Sent to Annandale to learn Latin, he met Jane Welsh, the brilliant, black-haired daughter of well-to-do parents. From the first, Jane's vivacious mind intrigued him, and he sent her many solemn volumes and a German grammar, imploring her in exalted letters to make use of her "genius." Jane's capitulation to his proposal was due to the fact that, of all her suitors, this uncouth scholar showed the most promise of becoming famous, but from the first day of their married life in Edinburgh she subjected her personality to his. Uncomplainingly she followed the dictates of his dyspeptic stomach, "flitting" from Edinburgh to Scottish farm, to London, whichever he felt might benefit his digestion. Worse still, she had to endure his temperament when he was writing his great works, and his constant disappointment at their unfavorable and unremunerative reception. But she also shared in his ultimate success, gaining constant stimulation from the famous men—among them Emerson, Darwin, John Stuart Mill, and Mazzini—who came to pay homage to Carlyle and remained to converse with her. She knew, besides, that Thomas loved and needed her as she did him.

Although the formal, high-flown speech of Mrs. Cook's characters serves to convey the spirit of the nineteenth-century salon, it is sometimes too distinctly cadenced, too well balanced, and altogether too much like a Miltonic pamphlet to be credible. This artificiality plus typographical errors, obscurities of phrasing, and a great deal of unelucidated Scotch render tedious in places a biographical novel which is otherwise to be commended.

—Sophia Fox Kenamore.

Seems Beneath His Dignity

SOUND OF ROWLOCKS. By Wilbur Daniel Steele. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

EVERY element of a good murder mystery is in this latest novel by Wilbur Daniel Steele. Beal Coward, the victim, deserved his fate; but the law enters, and the murderer must be caught. By one subtle suggestion after another, the evidence swings from the obvious suspect to one less obvious, and finally leads directly to the culprit, who should have been suspected all along, and just wasn't. The incidents are grouped around a lonely island off the Nantucket coast, over which creep fogs that serve to intensify the suggestion of dreadful acts.

In addition to the mystery itself are the familiar Steele characters. More strikingly individual than any of the others is old Caleb Coffin, the Sheriff of Isle Haven, who has his likings for some of the visitors and his grudges against others. He is the kind of slow-moving, shrewd Yankee who recurs in Steele's short stories, puzzled, set in his ways, and yet admirably agreeable. As in several of the short stories, there is an epileptic, from whose illness Steele manages to extract a horrible fascination.

Brilliantly conceived in the involution of its incidents, definite in its characters, and finely written, the story is so good that the reader regrets it isn't something quite different. For Mr. Steele, with his style and his sense of the queernesses of people, ought not to be writing murder mysteries at all. In his short stories he has thrown so clear a light on odd and deranged corners of the mind that he must have it in his power, now, to try to emulate a book that he mentions here ironically, "Crime and Punishment." Or has the short story, with its brittle technique and sketchy action, so warped Mr. Steele to its form that the slow, brooding contemplation of a Dostoevsky is no longer possible for him?

—Alexander M. Buchan.

Sixth-Century Thinkers

THE GATEWAY TO THE MIDDLE AGES. By Eleanor Shipley Duckett. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

IN the Sixth Century the Western World was in the grip of war and famine. Roman Empire and Eastern Goths fought, and fell away in turn before new barbarians from the north. Sons and grandsons of Clovis exulted in Gaul. German tribes made merry in Rhineland towns emptied of their last Roman defenders. In Spain, the successors of Alaric II plundered and ravaged. In Britain, the harried Celts fled like leaves before the wind of foreign invaders. The Lombards occupied Northern Italy, the Merovingians conquered the rich plains of France. Spain knew the tread of the Visigoths, Britain nourished the offspring of her Saxon conquerors. But nothing was so strong as the tide of religious thought and feeling that swept the century, a tide bearing upon it the work of courageous thinkers and writers.

It is these with whom Prof. Duckett is primarily concerned in "The Gateway to the Middle Ages." Most prominent were Caesarius, Columban, and Benedict, who sired medieval monasticism; Cassiodorus, from whose devout mind sprang medieval scholarship; Fortunatus and Gregory, to whom the world is indebted for medieval lyric and tale; and Boethius, who began medieval scholasticism.

Theodoric's remembered might does not make him nearly so important today as the humble monks and pious philosophers whose prayer was not "Make me invincible," but "Do you . . . pray earnestly for me to God . . . that He may make to shine brightly my candlestick set in the midst." Bulwer-Lytton, in "Richelieu," gave to a Cardinal the line, "The pen is mightier than the sword." The Sixth Century corroborates him. It is alive for us today, not because of Frank and Visigoth, Hun and Merovingian, but in spite of them. Boethius, "striving to use his Aristotle in the service of the highest truth," memorialized himself and his century in his own work. He and his speculative and creative contemporaries were giants worth the tribute in W. P. Ker's "Dark Ages": "Almost everything that is common to the Middle Ages, and much that lasts beyond the Renaissance, is to be found in the authors of the Sixth Century."

For the vivid impression she gives us of those authors and their works, by means of detailed summaries and extended quotations, Prof. Duckett merits the praise of intelligent laymen and pedagogic specialists.

Has Realized Her Dreams

ON MY OWN. By Mary Knight. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

MARY KNIGHT'S keen enjoyment of life may well account for her success as a journalist. Enthusiasm and the spirit of adventure carried her from her home in Atlanta to New York, and from there to Paris, where she obtained a position with the United Press. Since then her childhood dreams of romantic travel have come true, for Miss Knight has covered thrilling news in all parts of the world.

The account of these experiences, told in a refreshingly objective and candid manner, might well be entitled "Camera Sketches of the 1930's." Here is an impressionistic picture of the restless and complex life of our times: Ghandi sipping goat's milk while discussing his fasts; Doris Duke Cromwell, in a Hongkong drug store, borrowing a dime which she never remembered to repay; Emma Goldman making a scene in a Paris cafe. There are "snapshots" of the guillotining of Doumer's assassin, of the work being done in the Bellevue hospital, of the precarious existence of a Hollywood "extra." Miss Knight views all happenings with a humorous sympathy, and finds everyone she meets stimulating, whether it be a Chinese war lord discussing the new China, the Infanta of Spain explaining the downfall of her nephew, or Joe Louis telling of his fights. The most interesting thing about these reminiscences is, however, the author herself. This is an unusual human document, for the author has, quite unconsciously, made a revealing psychological study of her own character.

Miss Knight's determination to succeed has been due, in part, to an inner necessity to prove that a woman may possess intrinsic worth, and, in part, to the example of a mother who maintained courage and a sense of humor in spite of the most disheartening adversity. Tragedy, which might have warped a lesser mind, taught this girl the value of fearless living and enabled her to say: "Let me be gloriously aware now that I am an average American girl, alive, free and healthy—that the world is mine to enjoy, not to carry on my shoulders!" Probably Miss Knight would be surprised to realize that she is an amazing person, for she is far too vital to waste time in introspection.

The Tragic Fate Of the Medusa

THEY SAILED FOR SENEGAL. By D. Wilson MacArthur. (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York.)

THERE were 400 men and women on the French frigate Medusa under command of one of the most incompetent captains that ever walked a quarterdeck. She hit the shoals in shark-infested waters some 60 miles off the northwestern coast of Africa on July 2, 1816. The pompous governor of Senegal was lowered over the side in his armchair to the 14-oared barge. It would not do to crowd the governor, so only 34 other persons went in the barge. The rest, men and one woman dropped over the rail to the crude raft that was to be towed by the governor's barge and the other small boats. There were the soldiers, sailors, laborers and others whom the governor considered "inconsequentials." The towboats deserted the raft the first day.

Eleven days later—several days after the governor had made port without stirring from the cushions—a rescue ship came on the raft a few miles from the Medusa's hulk. There were 15 survivors. The occupants had existed by eating whatever there was. Many had starved to death, died of wounds, been washed overboard, been executed to save food, committed suicide, and turned to cannibalism. When the number had dwindled to 30, Savigny had ordered his friends to use his saber on the 15 weakest. One of the doomed, a simple laborer, had killed two of the men sent to execute him. The other assassins hesitated. Let him live, said Savigny, if he'll help with the executions. The laborer shook his head, refusing. They let him live.

It all seems like a nightmare, but it all happened. D. Wilson MacArthur, young English yachtsman, has dramatized and humanized the records in a most skillful manner, but the book is decidedly not for the squeamish.

COTTON RISES IN SYMPATHY WITH FIRMNESS OF STOCKS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Cotton advanced today in sympathy with firmness of stocks and on a moderate demand. July rallied from 8.67 to close at a high of 8.74, with final prices 9 to 11 points net higher.

The market opened 2 to 6 points higher on moderate trade and foreign buying. Contracts were scarce throughout the session and prices easily responded to a small volume of buying orders. Commission houses bought a little cotton, while Southern selling remained light.

Commodity Credit Corporation reported 73,211 bales pledged to the loan during the week, against 39,808 in the preceding week. Thus far, loans have been made on 5,225,493 bales, inclusive of 134,089 bales repossessed thus far. Amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the close of the week was estimated at 110,000 bales, against 84,000 last year and 92,000 two years ago.

BUYING DRIVE IN CURB MARKET AS WEEK ENDS

Prices of Many Active Issues Are Lifted Fractions to 4 Points or So.

NEW YORK, April 2.—A buying drive in the curb market today, particularly brisk in the final few minutes of trading, lifted the prices of many active issues fractions to 4 points or more.

The upturn appeared an extension of the buying urge which gripped the "big board" in a rebound from the sharp break of the early part of the week.

One of the largest gainers of the day was Sherwin-Williams, ahead 6 points at 72. Up around 4 were Montgomery Ward "A" at 126, Newmont 48½ and Aluminum Co. of America 67½. The latter enjoyed the benefit of increased 1937 earnings reported late Friday.

Major fractions to more than a point were added by American Gas and Electric, American Cyanamid "B," Electric Bond and Share, Gulf Oil and Lake Shore Mines.

Turnover was 92,000 shares, compared with 272,000 a week ago.

Fair terms prevailed for good mares and good-sized fillies, and there was a very good call for Eastern chunks and work horses at medium prices. A few good mules were provided outlet, but dealers pointed out that this trade is about over.

Commission arrivals aggregated 250 horses and 75 mules, and there was a good clearance.

Rally Ushers in the New Month After Lowest Prices in 5 Years Are Recorded on Stock Market

Potent in Lifting Sentiment Is Vigorous Rebound in Bond List Where Rail Average Had Gone Back to 1932 Level.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The lowest prices in five years were recorded on the stock market boards the past week as the almost unbroken march downswing carried to the final day of the month, gathering momentum in its later phases.

The market swung upward today, however, extending the rally that ushered in the new month Friday, by 1 to better than 4 points and wiping out the mid-week slump.

The star performer of the brief session was American Telephone which ignored the one-man report of Federal Communications Commissioner Walker recommending rate cuts and stricter Governmental regulation. The stock exhibited a burst of strength that enabled it to finish with a net gain of 4¼ points at 117.

The run-up of this "blue chip," helped by covering of shorts whose numbers had grown extensively in the lengthy market slide, inspired buying elsewhere and virtually all departments forged to the front.

While sentiment was undoubtedly a shade more optimistic in the financial sector, brokers were inclined to attribute the recoveries of yesterday and today largely to speculative operations based on the ancient market theory that markets, after a lengthy setback, usually retrace a portion of the lost ground even if the main trend is still downward.

Rebound in Bond Market.

Perhaps more potent in lifting sentiment was a vigorous rebound in the bond market, where quoted values of rails and other corporate obligations had been melting away even more rapidly than in most stocks.

Having broken support levels maintained throughout the winter, leading industrial stocks suffered additional wide losses as the market groped for a place to make another stand. With steel, copper, chemical, farm implement and other speculative favorites of the last few years plunging to new lows for the 1937-38 downswing, the Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks was carried to about April, 1933, levels. Rail and utility shares—laggards on the 1935-37 upswing—came close to scraping the extreme depths of the depression bear market.

Forced liquidation sped the fall. Every slide into new lows for the bear trend, brokers noted, served to impair margin accounts and to keep the market in a vicious spiral of deflation. Brokers' calls for more cash to strengthen margin accounts the last week or so have been the most numerous since last October.

Evidence of Liquidation.

Indicative of liquidation of marginal holdings was drop of $33,000,000 in brokers' loans. Total outstanding credit to brokers was down to $542,000,000 compared with $1,171,000,000 on Sept. 1, just before stocks took the Autumn dive.

The momentum of the deflation spiral, rather than anything incisive in the week's news, seemed to account chiefly for the fall in stocks. Similarly yesterday's broad rally, while drawing inspiration from an upturn in foreign markets, was attributed largely to technical conditions within the market structure, including dwindling distress liquidation as the cleaning out of margined accounts brought the market closer to a cash basis than it has been since early 1933 or 1932.

A little seasonal business improvement again was apparent in steel, cotton manufacturing and residential construction figures. The Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity advanced to 69.3 per cent of the 1929-30 level compared with 68.8 the preceding week and 105.2 in the corresponding 1937 period. It was the first time since last summer the index has advanced for two consecutive weeks.

Change in Silver Price.

Rumors an Anglo-Italian agreement had been signed sent international shares on a rise in Paris and apparently had a hand in improving sentiment in Wall Street toward the weekend, although there was no official confirmation for the rumors. The recent war scare seemed to have lost its hold on speculative imagination, at least for a while. Among the chief sufferers in the selling the early part of the week were steel, copper and other shares catalogued as potential winners from world arms spending.

Helping divert Wall Street's gaze from Europe were the suspension of U. S. Treasury silver purchases from Mexico, the economic troubles of the nation's Latin neighbor and the course of the reorganization bill through Congress. The weight of these events, if they could be judged outstanding market influences, seemed to lean toward the bearish side in financial eyes. The silver news, especially, was rated a selling argument on shares of some mining companies with properties below the Rio Grande.

Of dominating interest in Wall Street was the plight of the railroad industry, spotlighted by the drastic shrinkage in security prices. February operations of the class 1 carriers resulted in a deficit, the first for the month since 1921.

Prospects of decisive steps in Washington to find a solution for basic troubles of the industry, however, were held out by announcement President Roosevelt would have a message on the rail situation to send to Congress at this session.

Total stock sales during the week were 7,372,510 shares, compared with 6,654,180 a week ago and 7,248,250 corresponding week a year ago. Sales from Jan. 1 to date amounted to 63,143,240 shares, compared with 162,757,946 a year ago and 185,556,835 two years ago.

Saturday's Price Rebound.

Prices edged forward at the opening, picked up a little volume on the upside later and established top marks around the beginning of the final hour. Light profit selling near the close reduced extreme advances moderately.

The day's improvement lifted the Associated Press average of 60 issues 1.2 points to 36.4. This was on top of an advance of 1.5 the day before, which was the best upturn since Jan. 6. On the week the composite showed a net gain of .4 of a point, the first after four consecutive weekly declines. The pace was slow compared with the preceding Saturday, transfers totalling 603,850 against 1,383,370 when prices were under pressure.

Secondary bonds, particularly those of the rails, displayed renewed strength. Commodities were mixed. Wheat at Chicago dipped 1 to 1⅛ cents a bushel, apparently reflecting favorable crop estimates. Corn was down ⅛ to ½. Cotton was up 45 to 55 cents a bale. Both the French franc and sterling were unchanged in terms of the dollar.

Conspicuous shares on the day's upswing were U. S. Steel at 42⅞, Bethlehem 45½, Chrysler 41⅛, General Motors 28⅝, Westinghouse 69, Western Union 20⅝, Chesapeake & Ohio 26⅛, Southern Pacific 11¼, General Electric 31⅝, Anaconda 25, American Smelting 32⅞, Cerro de Pasco 31½, Sears Roebuck 51½, Consolidated Edison 19½, U. By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The industrial tempo picked up moderately this week, operations rising for the second consecutive period.

For the first time since business began to slump last August, the Associated Press seasonally adjusted index chalked up an increase for two weeks running.

The index rose to 69.3 per cent of the 1929-30 average on the basis of latest available statistics from 68.8 a week ago and compared with 105.2 last year.

Power Production Down.

The only major industry to register a further decline was electric power output, which dropped to a two-year low.

Steel mill operations advance for the fourth week, the latest rate first of the year. New orders were first of he year. New orders were reported to have been received from automobile, railroad and miscellaneous lines.

Freight carloadings rose sharply from last week's low point as a result of hurried shipments in industrial classifications to "beat" the rate increase.

Residential building extended its recent gains and cotton manufacturing operations were stepped up to the highest point since late last year. Automobile assemblies increased seasonally, the index remaining unchanged.

COMMODITY INDEX OFF THIRD IN YEAR

New Low for 1938 of 68.54 Last Week Compares With 97.44 Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2. — Giving ground before the same wave of liquidation that swept stock prices to the lowest levels in five years, commodities tumbled to a new low for the year this week.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale staples slumped to 68.54 per cent of the 1926 average, lowest since October, 1934. This compared with 69.19 last week and 97.44 a year ago.

The comparable week in 1937 was the highest reached during the recovery swing. The intervening year, therefore, wiped out approximately one-third of the value of these commodities.

Every important group pushed to new lows for the year or longer this week except livestock, which, although slipping, held above its February bottom.

Industrial Staples Hardest Hit.

Industrial staples were hardest hit. Rubber plunged more than two cents a pound to less than 11 cents, the lowest level since the current restriction program was put into effect in June, 1934. The crash was touched off by the failure of the International Control Committee to cut allowances of producing areas.

Steel scrap quotations also eased slightly as mills refrained from buying in an effort to work off heavy stocks of both ore and scrap. Bituminous coal, tin, linseed oil and burlap concurred in the weakness.

Meager demand and continued unwieldy inventories caused a further contraction in textile prices; declines in cotton cloth and silk more than offsetting modest improvement in wool.

Farm products were mixed. Grains were approximately in balance with wheat and rye advancing, corn and oats slipping. Cotton gave ground stubbornly with mill operations again somewhat higher. Lamb was buoyant as part of last week's break was recovered, while hogs and cattle tumbled.

Items for the family market were lower for the most part. Setbacks in eggs, coffee, cocoa and lard more than balanced upturns in sugar, flour and butter.

Substantial Improvement in All Leading Foreign Currencies as Situation Becomes Quieter.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Lessening of political tension in Europe, plus weakness in domestic securities markets, induced a considerable transfer of funds from dollars into foreign currencies this week, bringing substantial improvement in all leading units. Especially stimulating were unconfirmed reports originating abroad that England and Italy had reached some sort of agreement over their differences.

Sterling reached a high of $4.97⅝, nearly 2 cents better than the rate prevailing at the start of the week. The currency subsequently slid back a trifle, but held a firm undertone.

French francs got up to 3.06½ cents and likewise remained firm up to the close of the last full business day. It began the week around 3.01½. Holland guilders went from 55.30 cents to 55.48 before setting back.

The Italian lire did little either way.

A resumption of gold shipments to the United States from Europe resulted in the largest amount of metal being received in any week since the end of last October. The total was $19,839,000, compared with $14,557,000 the week before.

England and Japan were the largest shippers.

The market slowed up today and few changes in terms of the dollar were noted. Sterling and the French franc, with a brief breathing spell from political and financial uncertainties probable over the week-end, remained unchanged. The belga dropped .02 of a cent and the Swiss franc gained .00½ of a cent. Also unchanged was the Holland guilder.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Foreign exchange closing rates were as follows: Great Britain in dollars, others in cents. Great Britain, demand, 4.96½; cables, 4.96½; 60-day bills, 4.95⅝. France, demand, 3.07; cables, 3.07. Italy, demand, 5.26¼; cables, 5.26¼. Demands: Belgium, 16.85; Germany, free, 40.15; registered, 19.65; travel, 24.25. Holland, 55.37; Norway, 24.95; Sweden, 25.59; Denmark, 22.17; Finland, 2.20; Switzerland, 22.93½; Spain unquoted; Portugal, 4.51½; Greece, .91½; Poland, 18.92; Czechoslovakia, 3.49¾; Yugoslavia, 2.35; Austria unquoted; Hungary, 19.90; Rumania, .75; Argentina, 33.10n; Brazil, free, 5.90n; Tokio, 28.95; Shanghai, 25.85; Hongkong, 30.59; Mexico City, 22.50n; Montreal in New York, 99.46⅞; New York in Montreal, 100.53⅛.

n—Nominal.

LONDON, April 2.—The United States dollar improved 1-16 of a cent in terms of sterling today, closing 4.96 7-16 to the pound compared with New York's overnight sterling rate of $4.96½.

The French franc finished 161.69 to the pound against 161.87 yesterday.

TIN MARKET DROPS TO LOWEST IN 5 YEARS

Other Nonferrous Metals Show Unsettled Trading but Prices Unchanged.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2. — Weakness in Wall street upset the non-ferrous metal markets last week. Tin dropped to the lowest level in five years although other markets, while unsettled, showed no actual price change.

There were rumors of resale copper available at concessions in the domestic market, but custom smelters and producers held to the 10-cent level. Export copper reacted about 35 points, then partially recoveerd the loss. Russian buying of copper at London, plus an equally good demand here for Japanese account, the latter paying premiums in some instances to obtain nearby metal, were steadying influences. The Oriental demand here prevented any important accumulation of supplies at smelters.

Tin reacted over 2¼ cents a pound, with spot dropping to 39 cents a pound. Weakness of the London market was accentuated by the failure of a large Japanese house at Singapore. The establishment of record low prices since 1933, however, was followed by better consumer demand late in the week.

Lead remained in the doldrums, holding at 4.50@4.55c a pound, New York. Trade reports indicated the rate of shipments had been well maintained. Zinc was unchanged at 4.25 cents a pound, East St. Louis.

A further advance of 5½ points in steel ingot output, the third consecutive increase, lifted the national rate to 35½ per cent of capacity. A mild seasonal demand from miscellaneous consumers accounted for the improvement.

Antimony was in slight demand with the price unchanged at 15.75 a pound.

CROP FORECAST IS BEARISH FACTOR IN WHEAT TRADE

Private Prediction of 754,000,000 Bushels—Weather Situation Tends to Excite Fear of Damage.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 2.—Tumbling almost 2 cents a bushel after release of a private forecast predicting a 754,000,000 bushels winter wheat harvest this year, wheat prices today fell to new season's lows, with some contracts at the lowest quotations in three years.

An early advance of as much as ¾-cent in wheat, stimulated by strength in stocks, a ¼@⅝ higher close at Liverpool, and domestic weather reports was soon lost, and wheat plunged as much as 2⅝ from the early highs before rallying slightly from lows of 84c for May and 80⅛c for July.

This forecast, compiled by James E. Bennett & Co., compared with a harvest of 685,000,000 bushels last year. It more than offset conflicting statements as to possible frost and resultant damage in the Southwest resulting from low temperatures the past 24 hours.

Reports of frosts and freezing temperatures in the winter wheat belt touched off conflicting comments as to the probable damage, but had only passing effect as a buying influence. One leading crop expert said the injury was likely to be severe in some sections.

Other observers tended to minimize the danger, however, and an advice from Enid, Ok., said that no damage was believed to have occurred because, growers said, freezing was harmless to wheat when there was plenty of moisture. There were other traders who suggested that the crop might be benefited by frost through the checking of rank growth. The weather forecast predicted more light frost tonight.

At the close wheat was 1@1½c below yesterday's finish, May 84⅝⅝½c, July 80¼⅝@c, September 81¼c. Corn was ⅛⅝½c down; May 61¼c, July 62c, September 62¼c. Oats ¼⅝⅞c off; May 28¾c. Rye 1½@2c lower; May 62¼c. Lard 8 to 15c higher.

The probable freezing and frost damage to wheat will not be known until warm growing weather returns. Crop experts here commented freezes might be fatal to many plants in fields, but added there is a possibility of recovery. Dispatches from the crop territory were less alarming. Amarillo, Tex., messaged no damage expected; Enid, Ok., said moisture was plentiful enough to prevent damage.

Little export wheat or corn business was reported overnight, but heavy shipments of the latter were expected after opening of lake navigation.

Corn displayed more strength than wheat, with May at one stage advancing to 61⅞c, highest since January, but the market was depressed by the action of wheat.

Oats were quiet.

Rye sank 2 cents to new lows for a year or longer.

Lard advanced on short covering.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, April 2.—May wheat was offered at 84½c and July at 81c at the close. May corn was offered at 61c.

Liverpool wheat opened ⅜d higher and closed ⅜@½d up.

Winnipeg wheat began ¼@¼c higher and early was ¼@⅜c lower. The close was ⅝@1c down.

Argentina wheat and corn began unchanged and closed unchanged to ½c higher.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

In the cash grain market Saturday soft wheat was 1@1½c lower. Supply was not large, but the demand was quiet and some grain was carried over. Corn was unchanged to ½c lower. Demand was only fair and a carryover was reported. Elevators showed the only interest. Oats were ½c lower. Supply was somewhat smaller. Demand was only fair and a few cars remained unsold. Elevators were the purchasers.

Biologist Finds Superior Race Idea Is a Myth

classes. However, there is reason to think that mild mental defect is much less frequently reported among the rich than the poor. A well-to-do family can afford to keep a 'backward boy' or 'a girl who was no good at school.' A poor family cannot. Sterilization of all certified defectives would thus in our society be a class measure."

The Basic Problem.

A wholly separate problem is the fact that the classes which produce fewest children are those which score highest in tests of intelligence and educational achievement. Haldane cites intelligence quotients of school children from various "classes" in rural New York. The median scores are, roughly, professional 115, business and clerical 106, skilled 98, semi-skilled 95, farmer 91, unskilled 89.

"It is, however, noticeable that the differences in the intellect of school children are mainly due to relatively small classes at the top and bottom, namely the professional classes and unskilled and casual laborers," he adds, citing further studies.

"Apart from the professional classes—doctors, clergymen, teachers, and so on—the well-to-do do not have children appreciably more intelligent, as judged by these tests, than the remainder of the population."

But, allowing the scheme of classification, there is a class difference in measured intelligence which persists even where children have been removed from their homes in infancy; that is, beyond the difference attributable to environment.

Eutelegenesis.

A remedy which has been suggested is eutelegenesis, "procreation of particularly gifted men by artificial insemination," better known through the tabloids as "test tube babies." It would be at any rate an extension, not a curtailment, of human liberty, Haldane comments.

"But, at least in Britain, I think that at the present moment we still possess a considerable store of mute Miltons and guiltless Cromwells. And as a means of producing more great men, equality of opportunity is more likely to be of immediate value than eutelegenesis . . .

"Ever since the time of Plato the different innate endowments of different classes have been a matter of political speculation. I do not believe that any of these eugenical schemes are likely to be of much importance because I take the view that the economic changes which we may expect in the near future will be determined by causes much more powerful than the arguments that any biologist may bring forward . . .

"Just because my own views differ from those of many of my colleagues, I feel myself fully justified in giving them publicity, if only to make it clear that a consideration of human biology does not, in my opinion, justify the perpetuation of class distinctions."

As to race discrimination—in a sentence, "there is no question in my mind of the existence of racial differences in psychology, but I do not know to what they are due." And to cite a timely example of discrimination, the resemblance of Jewish populations to their respective neighbors raises a question of emphasis between "Jewish race" and Jewish religion and culture — while "even less convincing, in fact much less convincing, is the case for a German race."

Blacks and Whites.

The question of nature and nurture figures even where racial contrast seems most obvious—between white and black. In the United States Army intelligence tests of 1917, "in five Northern states the whites average 60 and the Negroes 40, while in eight Southern states the whites averaged 40 and the Negroes 20. That is to say, in the Northern states the Negroes did as well in the intelligence tests as the whites in the Southern states, and the Ohio Negroes beat the Arkansas whites by 10 points.

"From that result one of two things seems to follow necessarily. Either cultural differences play a greater part in determining the response to these intelligence tests than has been generally believed, or alternatively, selective influences within a race can alter its character to a very great extent."

But though the beginnings of knowledge of human heredity may have served prejudice so far, Haldane believes they may yet have a sane and useful application—that investigations "originally undertaken with a view to the improvement of the race may lead to other desirable ends."

"It may be," he suggests, "that it will be much more important for us to know something about the innate abilities of a given child in order to be able to choose for it the type of education and career that is most suitable, than in order to encourage or discourage the production of children of some particular type. It is perfectly possible that we have sufficient potentially great men and women to fill our entire needs without the application of any eugenic measures to increase their numbers, and that a study of human innate endowment and a careful distinction between the effects of nature and nurture will enable us to discover them."

TOY SALVAGE PART OF CLEAN-UP DRIVE

School Children to Collect Discarded Playthings to Be Repaired for Needy.

School children making a house-to-house canvass in behalf of the Clean-up, Paint-up, Plant-up, Fix-up Campaign April 18 to 30, will also collect discarded toys to be repaired and distributed among underprivileged children at Christmas.

Playthings collected will be taken to schools, where they will be called for by the Toy Shop Guild of the Board of Religious Organizations, which will clean and repair them in its quarters at the Old Court House.

As in previous clean-up campaigns, the school children will request residents and business men in their neighborhoods to beautify their properties during the campaign, and will make reports on the number of jobs that have followed their requests.

Students in high school art classes are working on their entries in the contest for an official poster for next year's campaign. The 1938 poster, selected last year, shows a crowing rooster over the city's skyline, with the slogan, "Wakeup —Clean up."

Co-operating with the Chamber of Commerce in the campaign are the Missouri State Employment Service, the City Fire Department, the Midtown Business Men's Club, the Board of Education and the Associated Retailers.

SEA SCOUTS TO OPEN BASE AT CREVE COEUR

325 Boys to Participate in Ceremonies at Lake Next Sunday.

More than 325 boys, representing the crews of 21 St. Louis Sea Scout ships, will participate in the formal opening of the Sea Scout base at Creve Coeur Lake next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Following formal inspection of each unit by Commodore H. A. Brereton and district commodores, regional rating certificates will be awarded to 11 ships at a bridge of honor. Ratings, made in February, were based on crew inspection and an examination of each ship's log for 1937.

trophy will also be presented to the Sea Lion, under Skipper Noel Chadwick, in token of its victory in the inter-ship swim meet held March 21 at the Downtown Y. M. C. A., 1528 Locust street.

Thirteen new scout units have been organized and 1937 additional boys have been enrolled in the St. Louis Boy Scout Council since the first of the year, Joseph E. Vollmar, chairman of the Organization Committee, has announced. Plans have been formulated for the establishment this year of 67 more scout units, the majority of which will be underprivileged districts of the metropolitan area.

A course in swimming and water safety, one of 13 spring training courses sponsored by the St. Louis Council, opened last Wednesday night at Howard Gymnasium, The Principia. A five-week course in the elements of scout leadership, under the direction of Dr. L. H. Renfro, will begin April 13 at Elias Michael School.

Robert Meinholtz will be in charge of a course in elements of cub leadership which will also begin April 13 at Stix School. Other courses which will be offered this spring include classes in seamanship, nature study, games and camp leadership.

Virgil Honors, the highest award of Shawnee Lodge, Order of the Arrow, were conferred yesterday upon Charles A. Kelso and James Stevenson, scoutmasters of Troops 54 and 307, respectively, and Guy L. Short, assistant campmaster at Camp Irondale, at a spring reunion of members of the honorary scouting society at Lion's Den, near Seckman, Mo. In addition, more than 60 members were advanced to Brotherhood Honors, in recognition of meritorious service, at the concluding session of the reunion today.

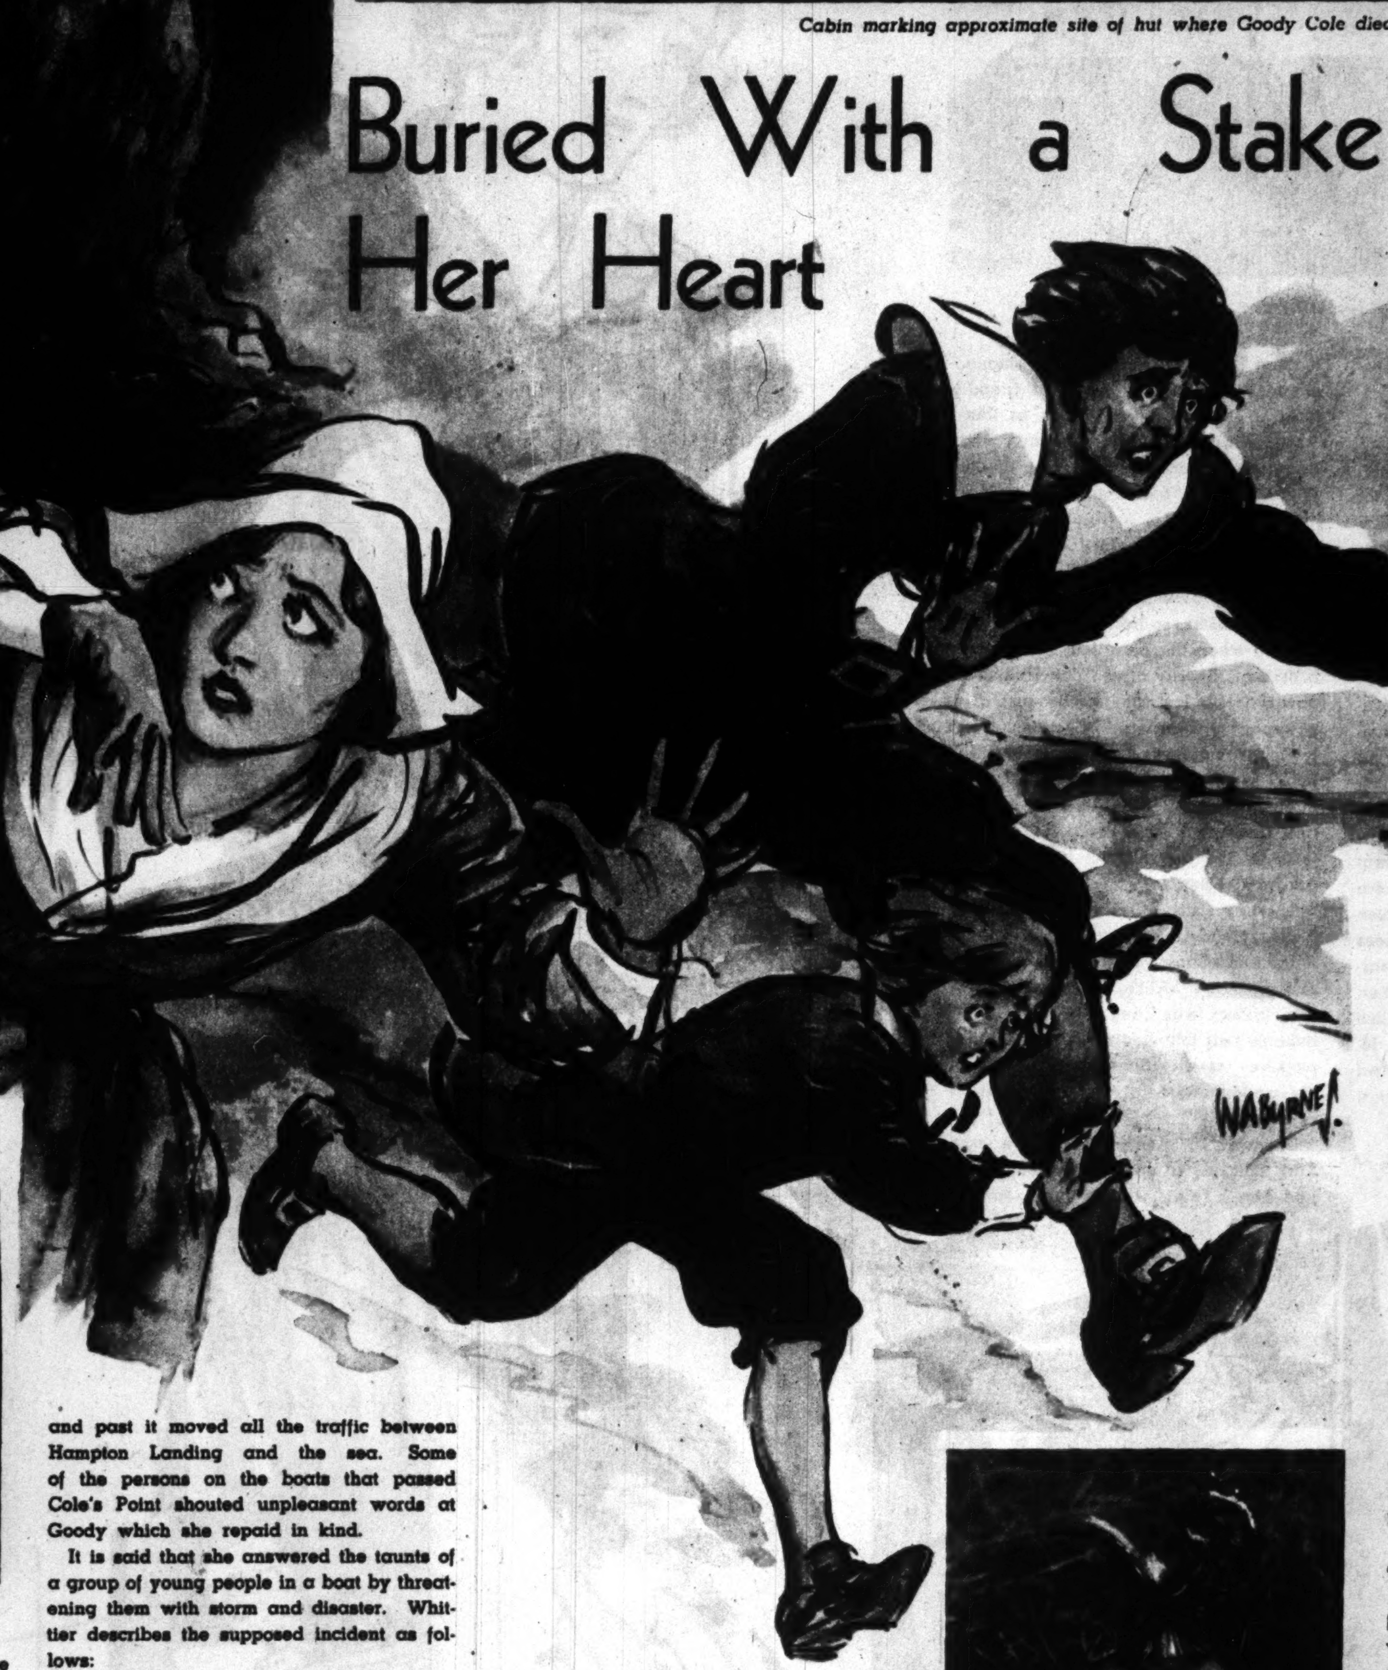
Buried With a Stake Through Her Heart



Goody Cole, Flogged and Imprisoned as a Witch in 1656, Has Just Been Exonerated by the Town Meeting of Hampton, New Hampshire.

Scene near Hampton where Goody Cole was charged with putting a curse on cattle.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

HAMPTON, New Hampshire.

EUNICE "GOODY" COLE, by all accounts, was a buxom housewife of the middle seventeenth century who was famous for the sharpness of her tongue and the sweetness of the water in her well. Seafaring men of Hampton Beach said the water from Goody Cole's well never turned brackish in the ship, no matter how long the voyage. Today the well has fallen to ruin, and there is none to say what properties preserved it from the stench of wooden ships, but from it sprang the legend which, aided by Goody's tongue, caused her to be tried as a witch.

The story of how the good housewife, broken by hunger and imprisonment, was transformed gradually into a shriveled, decrepit hag, despised and shunned by her neighbors, and how she was finally vindicated of the charges of witchcraft by 300 descendants of her neighbors at the annual town meeting in Hampton on March 8, 1938, is a chapter in the history of New England.

Goody was tried and convicted in 1656—36 years before the witchcraft cases in Salem, Massachusetts—on a charge of putting a fatal curse on her neighbors' cattle. A stake was driven through her heart after her death, many years later, to prevent her body being carried away by the devil.

Goody owes the belated pardon of her townsmen partly to the current revolt against blue laws and the Puritan tradition in New England, and partly to the research into the town's history which is being conducted in preparation for the Hampton tercentenary this summer. Two years ago James Michael Curley, then Governor of Massachusetts, started the trend of apologising for the acts of founding fathers by signing a bill passed by the Great and General Court of Massachusetts revoking a 301-year-old sentence of expulsion against Roger Williams.

In Hampton, first town in New England to the movement to restore Goody's good name and give her decent burial was started by a quasi-historical social club called the Society in Hampton Beach for the Apprehension of Those Falsely Accusing Eunice (Goody) Cole of Having Familiarity With the Devil. The Cole name is quite common in New England, and several branches of the family have considerable wealth and prominence. Scions of the family include many selectmen, county commissioners, State representatives and judges—even the Adjutant-General of the Massachusetts National Guard. The society with the long name includes descendants of both Goody's accusers and her family.

Several years after its organisation, the society finally persuaded the selectmen of Hampton to insert the following resolution as Article 16 in the warrant for the 1938 annual town meeting:

"RESOLVED: That we, the citizens of the town of Hampton in town meeting assembled do hereby declare that we believe Eunice (Goody) Cole was unjustly accused of witchcraft and of familiarity with the devil in the seventeenth century, and we do hereby restore to the said Eunice Cole her rightful place as a citizen of the town of Hampton, and

"Be it further resolved: That at such time as the selectmen shall elect during the tercentenary of the town of Hampton, appropriate and fitting ceremonies shall be held to carry out the purposes of this resolution by publicly burning certified copies of all official documents relating to the false accusations against Eunice (Goody) Cole, and that the ashes of the burned documents, together with soil from the reputed last resting place and from the site of the home of Eunice (Goody) Cole be gathered in an urn and reverently placed in the ground at such place in the town of Hampton as the selectmen shall designate."

At the town meeting in the ancient town meeting house, not a single descendant of the accusers of Goody Cole arose to defend the persecution. After unanimous vote to reinstate her, the old Paul Revere bell was tolled to signify the great error had been rectified.

Goody Cole's house was in "The Island" and past it moved all the traffic between Hampton Landing and the sea. Some of the persons on the boats that passed Cole's Point shouted unpleasant words at Goody which she repaid in kind.

It is said that she answered the taunts of a group of young people in a boat by threatening them with storm and disaster. Whittier describes the supposed incident as follows:

Once in the old Colonial days,
Two hundred years ago and more,
A boat sailed down through the winding ways
Of Hampton River to that low shore . . . .

"Fie on the witch!" cried a merry girl,
As they rounded the point where Goody
Cole
Sat by her door with her wheel atwirl,
A bent and blear eyed poor old soul.
"Oh!" she muttered, "ye're brave today!
But I hear the little waves laugh and say,
'The broth will be cold that waits at home;
For it's one to go, but another to come!' "
"She's cursed," said the skipper; "speak her fair:
I'm scary always to see her shake
Her wicked head with its wild gray hair,
And nose like a hawk, and eyes like a snake."
But merrily still with laugh and shout,
From Hampton River the boat sailed out.

Suddenly seaward swept the squall;
The low sun smote through cloudy rack;
The Shoals stood clear in the light, and all
The trend of the coast lay hard and black.
But far and wide as eye could reach,
No life was seen upon wave or beach;

The boat that went out at Morning never Sailed back again into Hampton River.

But the records show Goody was safely lodged in Boston jail on the date of the "Wreck at Rivermouth."

The record of her trial in Norfolk County Court in 1656 betrays the terror and superstition of the times. Both Goody Marston and Susanna Palmer deposed "that goodwife Cole said that she was sure there was a witche in the towne, and she knew where hee dwelt & who they are;" also that 13 years before, she had known one "bewitched as goodwife Marston's child was" and that this person "was changed from a man to an ape, as Goody Marston's child was."

THOMAS PHILBRICK testified Goody Cole said that if his calves ate any of her grass "she wished it might pysen them or choke them; and he further testified that he never saw one of his calves afterward, and the other calf came home and died aboute a weeke after."

Sobriety, the wife of Henry Moulton, and goodwife Sleeper, wife of Thomas Sleeper, deposed that while "talking about goodwife Cole & goodwife Marston's child," they heard "something scrape against the boards of the windows." They went out "and looked aboute and could see nothing." They went back into the house and began "to talke the same talke again." But the "scrapeing" was repeated and "was so loude that if a dogg or a catt had done it they should have scene the markes." But no marks were to be seen.

Abraham Drake deposed in court on September 4, 1656 that "aboute this time twelvemonth my neighbor Coles lost a cowe, and wen we had found it, I and others brought the cowe home to his house & hee & she desired me to flea this cowe, and presently after she had charged me with killing her cowe, and said they should know hee had killed hir cowe, for the just hand of God was uppon my cattell, and forthwith I lost two cattell, and the latter end of somer I lost one cowe more."

Joseph Dow, in his history of Hampton, says Goody Cole was adjudged to be guilty and was sentenced to receive, as she afterwards expressed it, "a double punishment"—to be whipped and then imprisoned during her natural life, or until released by the court.

She was duly flogged, imprisoned, and for a time forgotten. Her aged husband became to ill to work. The town took over his property to pay for his care. He died when he was 89 years old.

Goody Cole might have spent the rest of Goody Cole's funeral urn, authorized at recent town meeting.

Left to right: Commissioner Frederick R. Batchelder, a descendant of the founder of Hampton; Judge John W. Perkins, a member of the "Society in Hampton Beach for the Apprehension of Those Falsely Accusing Eunice (Goody) Cole of Having Familiarity With the Devil," and John W. R. Brooks, moderator of the Marston, one of the Hampton selectmen, for failing to pay Goody's board of eight pounds a year. Marston's arrest was on July 14, 1664. Although the sum was small, Marston had difficulty raising it, and was released after paying half. The town promised to send the rest.

Some of the money was paid out of the Cole estate, but the townspeople, faced with the necessity of continuing to support her in jail, made no objection when she filed a petition for release. The court agreed to free her as soon as she paid what was due the keeper, but stipulated she must leave the court's jurisdiction within a month. Goody was entirely without resources, but managed somehow to satisfy the authorities.

Old and bent after more than a decade in prison, she returned to Hampton some time before 1671. A shelter was built or obtained for her near the Meeting House Green. According to the town tax lists, various householders supplied her in turn with food and fuel.

Children hooted at her and she was still greatly feared.

In October, 1672, she was again arrested for witchcraft. This time she was charged with appearing in various forms, as a dog, an eagle, and a cat, in order that she might entice a young girl named Ann Smith to live with her. The grand jury found a true bill against her and in April, 1673, she was tried in Salisbury lower court. She was found guilty and ordered to Boston jail to await appearance before the high court. The court ruled several months later as follows:

"IN YE case of Unis Cole now prisoner at ye Bar not Legally guilty according to inditement butt just ground of vehement suspiscyon of her haueing had famillyarryty with the deuill. (Signed) Jonas Clark in the name of the rest."

She returned to Hampton, a sick, old woman, but such was the temper of the times few persons dared to do anything for her. Anyone who took her broth or a few sticks for her fire was liable to be accused as witch or wizard.

Goody began to grow feeble. At last, one afternoon, a neighbor carrying food to Goody's hut, found her lying on her deathbed, but still strong in spirit.

"Aye," she said, "ye think ye will have peace when ye bury my bones, but I leave my spirit to trouble ye. It shall be good to those who have had kindly thoughts for me, but it shall trouble and ever curse those who have used me ill."

Her voice failed, but her eyes still shone malevolently toward the world. Her visitor fled in alarm.

A group of neighbors, shrinking from their task, but fearing to leave a dying witch alone, dragged her body, as soon as it was cold, to a spot near the schoolhouse, where a shallow grave was dug.

The more fearful of her neighbors drove a stake through her heart and placed a horseshoe on top of it to cheat the devil out of the body. Then the crowd fled.

After the moon rose, two men who had befriended her and their sons removed Goody Cole's body to a new grave "between two noble trees" on higher land. In order not to attract suspicion, they smoothed over the earlier grave and left the stake as it was before. "The stake is of willow and will grow into a memorial for her," one of the VIENNA.

THERE was a time, not many years ago, when beautiful, adventurous Alice Jacob-Lampl rejoiced in the love of a husband, social position and the reputation of being the best dressed woman in Berlin. Unfortunately, those tranquil days were only an interlude, a period between the feverish recklessness which drove her and many others of her generation immediately after the war, and the tarnished smartness of her existence in recent years. Standing in a prisoner's dock here the other day, charged with using stolen American securities as collateral—a mess in which she had also involved her 73-year-old mother and her talented half brother, Heinrich Eduard Jacob, the writer—Alice must have looked back wistfully at that domestic interlude as a halcyon time. And she may have wondered bitterly to what extent her current trouble was due to her own restless nature and how much to the unstable swirl of the life about her. There undoubtedly are people who will regard the case of the dark German beauty as a symptom of Europe's post-war neurosis.

This woman, now on the verge of 40, was born into a family of comfortable position. Her mother had been Martha Behrend, daughter of a large land owner in West Prussia; her father was Edmund Lampl, a Viennese banker. The marriage to Lampl was the second one for Martha. She had first married Richard Jacob, publisher of German economic magazines, and had borne two sons in this union, which was ended by divorce. After her second husband, Lampl, had lost $35,000 on the Vienna Stock Exchange, Martha separated from him, gained permission from the authorities to resume her previous married name, Martha Jacob, and returned to Berlin, where she engaged in various business enterprises.

One of Frau Jacob's sons by her first marriage is Heinrich Eduard Jacob, now 48 years old. By the time he was 5 years old, Heinrich could read and write and liked to compose little verses and stories. He is now the author of 21 books and numerous short stories. The first of the books was "Travels Through the Belgian War," based on his wartime experiences in Belgium; he had volunteered for duty there after having been pronounced unfit for service at the front because of physical disability. Among his other works are "The Good-for-Nothing From Grinzig" (which became a best seller), "The Story of Coffee" and "Johann Strauss.". A dozen years after the war he had become well known in Germany as a writer.

Journalism claimed some of Jacob's most productive years. He was Vienna correspondent for the Berliner Tageblatt, then the leading liberal newspaper of Germany. He obtained this post through the friendly offices of Dr. Maxmilian Pfeifer, at that time Austrian Ambassador to Germany, whom he met at a reception at the home of the late Friedrich Ebert, then President of Germany, himself a patron of literature.

His newspaper salary and book royalties gave Jacob an excellent income, but he was improvident and he had an expensive half sister, so he had saved practically nothing when the blow fell. The blow was Hitlerism. Shortly after Adolf Hitler's rise to power Jacob lost his job because German newspapers were required to discharge their Jewish employes. Furthermore, Jacob's books were among the works of Jewish authors burned by the Nazis in April, 1933, and there was no chance for him thenceforth to find a public for his writing under the Nazi regime.

The half sister to whom had gone some of his earnings in his prosperous years was Alice Jacob-Lampl, child of his mother's second marriage. Alice, willful, daring, excitement-loving, was caught in the fevered turbulence that followed the war. She had expensive tastes. She wanted a mundane life and managed to get on the stage for two years.

Then in 1923 she fell in love with Dr. Kurt Spicker, a young German, and married him. There were a few years of domestic happiness. The young Spickers were active in Berlin society. It was during this time that Alice achieved the reputation of being the best dressed woman in the German capital. For a year or so she had a job, too—on the staff of 12 Uhr Mittags Blatt (12 o'clock Noon News). She had obtained it through the influence of Heinrich Jacob, who thought his half sister had the makings of a successful journalist.

AFTER the newspaper job ended, Alice began to travel about Europe, dipping into a variety of business deals—some of them, it appeared, not too savory. She became estranged from her husband, and finally they were divorced, much to the displeasure of Brother Heinrich, who liked Dr. Spicker.

On several occasions Alice's business affairs came under the scrutiny of the law due to complaints by people who had entrusted investments to her. On two occasions there were embezzlement accusations against her. In one case Brother Heinrich went to her rescue and the matter was settled out of court. In the other, which took place in Berlin, in 1932, Alice's mother assumed responsibility for her daughter's obligations, amounting to about 40,000 marks.

Stock deals and promotions were not the only kinds of transactions that interested the comely business adventurer. In 1934 she was trying to sell arms to China—a quantity of tanks, machine guns, rifles, etc., which an Austrian armament maker wanted to dispose of. She failed to make this sale.

In 1932 Alice had the misfortune to fall in with Ferdinand Kende, a Viennese of about her own age. They met in London, and before long a business association between them developed into a closer relationship. Alice's family disapproved of the liaison; Konde was married and he had failed in business to the accompaniment of loud denunciations from investors who found themselves out of pocket.

Back in Vienna, in 1935, Kende had ambitious schemes for making a lot of money on the stock exchange; he had some inside tips, he said. But he and Alice were short of money. If they just could get a little capital together. . . .

In Central Europe at that time, operating principally in France, Germany and Austria, there was a little band of men adept at getting a living without engaging in lawful labor. One of their principal sources of income was the marketing of stolen securities. Alice heard of them and presently got into communication with them. As a result of this communication she received one day certain securities of the Northern Central Railway Company of the United States. The securities were "hot." They had been stolen in 1934 in a $500,000 robbery of a trust company in Baltimore, Maryland.

For the next step, Alice enlisted the help of her accommodating half brother. A man named Paul Benjamin held a responsible job with the banking firm of Kux, Bloch and Company. Benjamin had been a schoolmate of Heinrich Jacob. So Alice asked Heinrich to introduce Benjamin, as she wanted to talk over some business matters with the banker. Heinrich consented.

On December 6, 1935, Alice, Heinrich and their mother called at the offices of Kux, Bloch and Company and Benjamin was introduced to the ladies. Alice went to work on him, and presently he presented her case to officers of the firm, emphasizing his long acquaintance with Heinrich Jacob and the latter's reputation as a writer. The outcome was that the bank lent Alice about $4000, accepting as collateral the stolen railroad bonds. A couple of days later she persuaded the bankers to lend her $1600 more.

Of the money thus raised, Alice gave her half brother $400. He was accustomed to receiving money from her occasionally, usually in repayment of loans she had obtained from him when she was hard up. And he was practically always in need of funds, for Jacob had not learned thrift from misfortune; soon after the triumph of the Nazi regime in Germany had virtually deprived him of a livelihood, he had made a rather expensive visit to the Riviera, accompanied by two sympathetic young women.

Four days after the call at the bank the three members of the Jacob family found themselves in hot water. The bankers had learned that the pledged securities were stolen goods.

A director of the bank lost no time in calling on Heinrich. The writer seemed to be surprised and shocked at what the director told him. He insisted that he had known nothing about the history of the securities, and that, in fact, he had only the haziest idea of the business deal arranged by Alice at the bank, as his mind was on something else while she and Benjamin were discussing it. As evidence of his good faith, he promptly handed over the $400 which Alice had given him.

Alice Jacob-Lampl in court with her mother, Mrs. Martha Jacob.

Despite all this, Heinrich Jacob was arrested about a week later, and so was Martha Jacob. Alice fled to Czechoslovakia, but was arrested there and brought back to Vienna. Kende was arrested here in February of 1936. Martha and Heinrich Jacob and Kende were all accused of having known the securities were stolen and of having been, accordingly, accessories to the fraud; Kende, in addition, was said to have advised Alice as to how to handle the transaction. From the Jacobs and Kende the bank recovered $1600.

ALICE and her mother remained in jail until the case came to trial last January. Heinrich got out on bond in July of 1936, and Kende in December of that year.

The trial lasted more than a month, and was complicated by many details of banking practice. Its drama was heightened by fainting spells on the part of Alice.

The prosecution was not very gentle with Alice. It tried to show that she employed tricks of seasoned criminals, mentioning, for example, that once when her flat was searched by the police she hung incriminating papers out a window, and that in jail she read books instructing criminals how to behave in court. In her defense, she contended that she had not intended to defraud the bank. She said she intended to redeem the securities, indicating she expected to repay the loans out of profits Kende made by playing his tips on the stock exchange.

Heinrich Jacob clung to his original contention that he had not known the securities were stolen and had not known the exact nature of his half sister's transaction with the bank. He set forth that he was really a very impractical sort of fellow, unacquainted with business ways.

The court accepted Heinrich's story, and acquitted him. The three others were found guilty. Alice Jacob-Lampl, once "the best dressed woman in Berlin," was sentenced to prison for two years for fraud. The 73-year-old Martha Jacob was sentenced to 15 months, and Kende to one year, as accomplices. Since the judgments contained the provision that the time the convicted persons had spent in jail during the police investigation should be deducted from their sentences, only Kende was faced with time still to be served when the trial ended.

The Barbary Coast Tries to Make a Comeback

But San Francisco Is Divided on the Merits of Restoring the Famous Pre-War 'Tenderloin District' Even Though It's Only an Exhibit for the 1939 World's Fair.

SAN FRANCISCO.

A FIRST-CLASS row has been stirred up here over the proposal to build a replica of Barbary Coast, San Francisco's old tenderloin district, for the Golden Gate International Exposition in 1939. In some aspects it resembles the controversy in St. Louis last summer over the Carl Milles statuary, although, of course, the question of artistic taste is not involved.

It is rather a question of letting sleeping dogs lie. Old Barbary Coast died hard. It took innumerable bursts of reform spread over 60 or 70 years to close the district. Even now every few years the section shows disturbing signs of wanting to come to life and howl again.

Opponents of the replica proposal fear that it is but another manifestation of this recurrent tendency. They further state that Barbary Coast is a thing of which the city should be ashamed. It is a skeleton which should be kept in the closet and not flaunted before visitors from all over the world who are expected at the World's Fair.

The Reverend Julian C. McPheeters, a leader of the Legion of Decency, and Mrs. Frank Porter, past president of the San Francisco city and county Federation of Women's Clubs, are among the most vehement of the opponents.

The Reverend McPheeters asserts the proposal is only an "entering wedge" for the "return of the Old Barbary Coast" and that it "recalls something which San Francisco has forgotten and wants to keep on forgetting."

Literary and social leaders take the opposite view. They assert that Barbary Coast was a unique and authentic part of San Francisco's past and say that the city should not be ashamed of this past. Among them is Gertrude Atherton, San Francisco-born novelist.

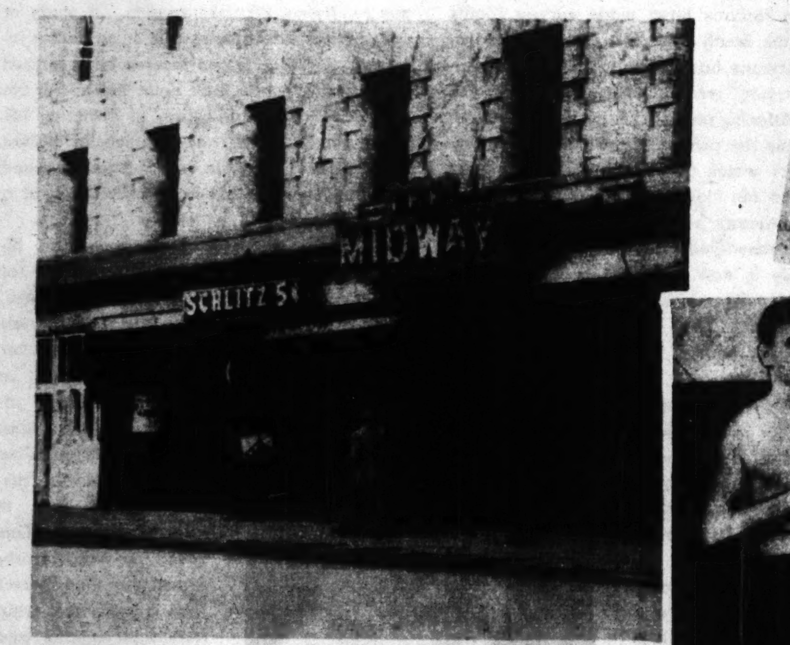
In the old days, Miss Atherton sometimes went on slumming trips to the coast.

"It was sordid," she recalls. "But I hope it will be rebuilt for the fair with color and glamour. It has great publicity possibilities."

Harris Connick, the exposition director, is on the spot in this row. The warring factions are trying to pull him both ways. But he is going ahead with negotiations for the replica, assuring the purity group that only a highly sterilized version of the old coast is planned.

The venture will be undertaken as a private enterprise if the plans go through. Dr. Charles H. Strub, retired San Francisco dentist and racing man, proposed to rebuild the district as an amusement concession occupying seven acres of Treasure Island. This is the man-made island which has been dredged up in San Francisco Bay as the site for the fair and which afterward will be made into a municipal airport. The promoters are likewise profuse in their assurances as to the moral impeccability of what they plan.

Old Barbary Coast was on the mainland. Its chief thoroughfare was Pacific street from the border of Chinatown to the waterfront. There were several intersecting streets which became so notorious that their names were finally changed—old Dupont street was rechristened Grant avenue and is now the main stem of Chinatown. The latter was never a part of Barbary Coast, although it adjoined the district.



The midway, popular concert hall and saloon of pre-war days.

All that remains now of the old Coast are decrepit ruins of flamboyant honky-tonks and saloons. Signs that once flashed lurid invitations to roistering soldiers and sailors are sagging and weatherbeaten and windows that once glittered with a meretricious brightness look out, vacuous and dirty, upon the abandoned haunt of evil. The Thalia Dance Hall, once the largest on the West Coast, suffered the ignominy of conversion into a garage; the Moulin Rouge, another famous joint, became an employment agency for the Alaskan fish canneries.

TO SUCH desuetude has come a district which once seemed impregnable behind its political fortifications. It contributed more than anything else to San Francisco's reputation as the "wickedest city in the world" and the "Paris of America."

Its major industries were vice, the shanghaiing or crimping of sailors and the robbery of visitors, either by guile or violence, often the latter. It did not yield up the ghost until prohibition came, although for several years before that a sterner official attitude, caused by the breaking down of its political defenses, put a damper on its criminal excesses.

With the passing of the years the evil of the district became gilded with legend and softened with glamour. So much so that a romantic version of it formed the background of the movie, "San Francisco." The Clark Gable of that picture did not typify in any realistic sense the Barbary Coast jointkeeper. The type was rather Tom Magee, who slugged a newspaper publisher for opposing his plans to open a dive.

And the ladies of Barbary Coast were not Jeannette MacDonalds. They ran to the beefy type that Mae West depicts.

Barbary Coast began to develop as the Sodom of the Western World with the gold rush of '49. It was first called Sydney-town from the fact that the gold rush brought an influx of ex-convicts from the British penal colonies in Australia.

These felonious adventurers settled amid a colony of outcast Latin-Americans called Chilenos, who dwelt in tents and shanties on the southern slope of Telegraph Hill, overlooking San Francisco Bay. The inhabitants of the area came to be called Sydney ducks. Their depredations were the direct inspiration of the first vigilante movement.

This occurred in 1851 when the vigilantes hanged John Jenkins, a Sydney duck, caught stealing a safe, and English Jim, another British felon, who had robbed a ship in the bay. Fear spread throughout Sydney-town and there was an exodus from its squalid habitations.

By 1855, however, the emigres were back doing business as usual. In November of that year the murder of United States Marshal W. H. Richardson by Charles Cora, a gambler, led to the second vigilante uprising. The murder was caused by a fancied snub to Cora's mistress, Arabella Ryan, reputedly the runaway daughter of a Baltimore parson.

James King of William, the city's first crusading editor, began a campaign to see that Cora was properly punished and the opposing side found a journalistic champion in James P. Casey. Unable to match King in editorial invective, Casey shot and killed his rival.

The inflamed populace sounded the call for the vigilantes again. They reorganized and were in command for several months, purging the town by the summary process of hanging or banishing the undesirables. Sydney-town took to cover for the second time.

The vigilantes took both Cora and Casey from the authorities and hanged them. A priest refused to administer the last rites to Cora until Casey married the woman who had been the cause of it all. So at the foot of the gallows the ceremony was performed. The touching legend is that the bereaved Arabella retired thereafter from the bright lights and died mourning for her husband,

When the vigilantes disbanded and the heat was off, Sydney-town returned again to its criminal ways. It roared with mining-camp blatancy until after the turn of the century. It acquired the name Barbary Coast in the sixties and this soon came to supplant the earlier designation. Herbert Asbury in his history of the district suggests that the name arose from a fancied similarity to the Barbary Coast of Africa.

WITH its new name, the coast acquired more or less permanent structures for its felonious enterprises. These consisted mainly of low class beer and wine cellars, aptly called "deadfalls"; melodeons, where cheap theatrical entertainment was offered with the actresses often serving drinks to patrons between acts; dance halls and saloons and crimp joints or sailors' boarding houses.

The latter occupied a key position in the shanghaiing of sailors. This arose from the practice of hiring ships' crews through these boarding houses. The nefarious trade was well systematized and ship's captains often were in league with the boarding house keepers or "crimps."

The custom of paying sailors made it profitable for them to be so. This custom, which prevailed in most ports, was to pay the sailor two months' wages in advance when he signed for a voyage. The balance was due at the end of the voyage, which might be a few months or several years. If the sailor deserted he forfeited what pay was due him.

Captains welcomed the desertion of their crews when they were to be laid up in a port a considerable time. They saved in forfeiture of wages more than what it cost to hire a new crew when they were ready to sail again.

They welcomed the runners for the crimp joints who came aboard their ships from harbor boats and plied the sailors with liquor and descriptions of the erotic pleasures of Barbary Coast in an effort to get them to desert.

These runners were paid from three to five dollars for each sailor they induced to come to their employer's boarding house. Most of them were thugs and they did not shrink at violence in their solicitation.

At the boarding houses, the luckless sailors were kept drugged with liquor until the master of an outgoing vessel came along to recruit a crew. Then they were shipped out again, their two months' advance pay usually going to the crimp for drink. In addition the hiring captain paid the crimp a bonus of from $25 to $75 a man as maritime labor was hard to get. The sailors were usually delivered on shipboard sodden from drink. They were dumped on deck and lay there until sober enough to get up.

AS A rule, non-seafaring men were shanghaied only when the crimp could not get sailors to fill a crew order. Then any hapless person who could be cajoled into his joint was "crimped." The technique was pretty well standardized. The victim was edged unsuspectingly along the crimp's bar until he stood over a trapdoor. With feigned hospitality he was given a Miss Piggott Special, a concoction of brandy, gin, whisky and laudanum. As he struggled to assimilate this fearful potion, the crimp rapped him on the head with a bungstarter. The trapdoor was then sprung and the victim dropped into the basement. When he awakened he was usually out at sea.

The drink was named after Miss Piggott, a celebrated female crimp, who always refused to disclose her first name. The most notorious crimp of all was Shanghai Kelly, who in addition to the maritime trade would shanghai anyone whose enemies wanted him out of the way. For years an unverified story has floated along the San Francisco waterfront that Kelly once shanghaied six policemen who were sent into his place, one after another, to arrest him.

Barbary Coast's theatrical taste in the seventies, eighties and nineties is indicated by the names of some of the performers and impresarios who gained fame in that period. There was the Galloping Cow and the Dancing Heifer, a sister dance act. There was Pigeon-toed Sal, who ran a joint called the Billy Goat because of its unique blend of odors, chiefly stale lager. And there was a sensitive soul called Bull Run Allen, who carried a shaker of flour in his pocket to sprinkle on his large red nose and soften its iridescent glow.

The most ornate establishment and one which savored slightly of legitimacy was the Bella Union. It offered the usual low class variety entertainment and enjoyed a run of popularity from the early fifties to 1905, and even had a renaissance after the earthquake and fire. In later times, such legitimate entertainers as Eddie Foy graced STRATOSPHERE flying is the flying of the future. It means winging through space at incredible speeds, the cabins "atmosphere-conditioned," and London, Bagdad, Shanghai in a relatively few hours. But these very advantages of tomorrow are responsible for the problems of today, problems the aeronautical engineers wring their hands over and consider in desperation. For if the lack of friction in the stratosphere makes for high speed that lack of friction is due to air rarity that will not support life. The lightness of the stratosphere doesn't stop there. It offers another challenge, a challenge to wing construction, to the ability to stay aloft.

Today it is not unusual for transport ships, flying across country, to make some 200 miles an hour. At that speed, all other things being equal, Europe would be but a 15 to 18 hour journey from New York. And it becomes increasingly apparent that if Europe is to be nothing more than an afternoon and overnight jump from Manhattan, the journey for the immediate future will have to be made at today's "normal" trans-continental altitudes and not in the 90,000 feet levels of the flying days likely sometime to come.

But sticking to the present methods may mean Asia or Australia on the second day and four-day cruises from New York to the North Pole and return, all within the next 10 years. Such aviation developments are foreseen by Igor Sikorsky, famous designer and builder of multi-engine airplanes.

Analyzing the probable trend in air transports of the future, Sikorsky limits the discussion to three major factors—size of aircraft, speed and altitude.

The famous Russian, who built the first four-engined airplane 25 years ago, believes that the limit in the size of aircraft will be dictated not by engineering possibilities, but by economic factors and traffic requirements. As an engineering problem a flying boat of 1000 tons, carrying hundreds of passengers, can be designed and operated, he says. The number of planes of that size in operation at any one time would be limited, just as the number of ocean liners of the Queen Mary type are limited.

Sikorsky points out that travel by air is essentially fast transportation, requiring frequent departures in order to be useful. If passengers or mail were required to wait three days before crossing the Atlantic in 18 hours in a plane, the waiting period would defeat, or at least reduce, the value of air service. To make air service efficient daily departures across the ocean and still more frequent schedules across land are necessary.

Another factor that will influence the size of aircraft is the extreme operating efficiency of the airplane for carrying passengers, the designer points out. When compared with a transoceanic steamer carrying 2500 passengers one might at first gain the impression that 25 planes carrying 100 passengers each would be needed to perform the service of one steamer. Actually, Sikorsky explains, the steamer will make one trip a week, while the planes would make about five trips each; therefore five airplanes carrying 100 passengers each could do the work of a large steamer.

These and other factors will tend to limit flying boats to the 250-ton class during the next 25 years, Sikorsky predicts, with the size probably closer to 100 tons, the latter a prospect of the near future. Within a few years passengers will be crossing the Atlantic in such ships of the air, he declared. As described by the designer, the future air liner will have 50 comfortable staterooms, a large dining salon, promenade decks, smoking lounges, library and, in general, all the luxury of a first-class steamer with the possible exception of a swimming pool.

Francesco Agello, holder of the air speed record.

The design of such ships presents some novel engineering "nuts" to be cracked. The manual power of the pilot would be inadequate to operate the control surfaces of a 10,000-horsepower flying boat. The controls would have to be mechanically operated. The powerful engines and auxiliary mechanisms would be housed inside the wings in special engine rooms. There would be a super charging plant, an electric power plant and a heating plant to maintain comfortable temperatures while the ship was flying in the substratosphere. Such problems, Sikorsky says, are routine engineering work, to be undertaken shortly in the building of the new super clipper ships.

Land planes probably will remain substantially below the tonnage of seaplanes, Sikorsky estimates, because of the size of airports, difficulties connected with the use of large landing gears and the general advantages of frequent schedules. The designer believes land transports will range between 50 and 100 tons during the next quarter century.

At this point it may be interesting to digress from airplane construction for a moment and briefly review scheduled air transport operations. Pan-American Airways, the American company for which Sikorsky has built several clippers, has a far-flung system of operation from United States bases. Havana, Nassau, Cristobal, Belize, Port of Spain, San Juan, Mexico City, San Salvador, Montevideo, Honolulu and Manila are points on the "Pan Am" operations maps. Miami, Florida, and Oakland, California, are Atlantic and Pacific home ports. The company carries mail under contract over 14 routes, and claims 100 per cent efficiency on some of the runs.

THE United States, recent figures show, is first in scheduled flying operations with 31,084 miles of domestic and 51,288 miles of international airways. The total, 82,373 miles of airways in regular operation in 1938, compares with other nations as follows: Great Britain, 68,240; France, 33,798; Germany, 23,494; Netherlands, 19,397; Italy, 14,670.

Pan-American and the British have surveyed the North Atlantic route preparatory to inaugurating regular service. The French and the Italians have made survey flights across the South Atlantic to South America. The Germans have operated scheduled airship service over both the North and the South Atlantic routes and may be expected to resume the program with their latest Zeppelin, for which they have obtained helium gas from the United States. In the Pacific Pan-American's record to date is 90.64 per cent of scheduled mileage completed. The company is now planning a route to New Zealand. Sikorsky's predictions of routine transoceanic flying seems very near of accomplishment.

How much airplane can be successfully flown has long been a matter of consideration and discussion in scientific circles. There have been those who declared that nature could only produce birds of a limited weight, which could fly. This group pointed to the ostrich to prove their point. The general situation, as Sikorsky explains it, is that the law of squares and cubes would really condemn a heavy machine built to represent a true enlarged copy of a small machine. That, however, would be the wrong way to design a large airplane. If the plane is studied correctly and the advantages of its large size are properly utilized, it is possible to obtain greater transport efficiency in the larger plane. This means that if 10 tons of pay load are to be transported 3000 miles, a single plane will do it faster with the same amount of fuel, or would require less fuel for the same speed, compared to 10 smaller planes carrying a ton each. The economy in personnel, in the comparison, is evident.

Igor Sikorsky.

Travel at great speed is the major reason for flying, Sikorsky asserts. A study of speed and its development is of particular interest. Airplane speed records have leaped from the 47 mile per hour mark by the American pioneer, Curtiss, in 1909, to 441 miles per hour, the rate at which the Italian pilot, Agello, flew this year. Agello's speed is equal to about one-half the velocity of a revolver bullet.

As in the question of maximum size, Sikorsky is conservative in his estimate of transport speed. He states that the operating speed of the latest types of modern air transports, which is about 200 miles an hour for a land plane and about 160 miles an hour for a long distance flying boat, is very satisfactory. This speed is respectively about four times faster than a passenger train from point to point, and six to seven times faster than the latest steamship.

Admitting that an increase in air speeds may be expected, it is Sikorsky's opinion that a very high speed would be both inconvenient and uneconomical. Recent investigations have shown that a great change in the character of streamline flow around the wing occurs when the speed approaches the velocity of sound, which is about 760 miles an hour at sea level. Adverse effects become pronounced at about 500 miles an hour. The disturbance of the streamline flow results in a considerable increase in the resistance of the moving body, while propeller efficiency tends to fall off when the velocify exceeds 500 miles an hour. Taking these facts into consideration, Sikorsky believes that 500 miles an hour may prove a practical speed limit for a long time to come.

The practical altitude of transport flying is limited chiefly by the ability of the occupants of an airplane to withstand the effects of rarified air. Normal sea level pressure is 2116 pounds per square foot. It may be safe to consider, Sikorsky reasons, that a person of any age in reasonable health may without discomfort stand an altitude at which the pressure and density would be about two-thirds of normal. This would be the case at 10,500 feet. Difficulties would begin for persons in the less normal condition of health somewhere between two-thirds and one-half sea level pressure. Below one-half the normal pressure and density living conditions would become difficult and detrimental to nearly every human being. A pressure of one-half the normal occurs at 18,000 feet, Sikorsky points out.

Therefore, for flights above that altitude air conditioning becomes definitely necessary. While physically strong people may overcome the effects of altitude by breathing oxygen, the better way would be to supercharge the cabin and maintain conditions of satisfactory temperature, pressure, humidity and chemical content by artificial means. Thus, Sikorsky states, to carry passengers at high altitudes all these conditions must be created artificially in a reliable way.

POWER plant requirements for high altitude flying involves a series of independent problems, to which Sikorsky and other airplane builders have given considerable thought. The major problem is the super-charging of the engine, which means that an adequate air compressor must be combined with the engine to supply air under pressure in intake manifold, so as to maintain sea level condition. Another problem is cooling. While the air at high altitudes is very cold, the loss of efficiency of the cooling system due to the low density is much greater than the gain from the low temperature.

Another difficulty involves the gasoline supply. The low pressure outside is liable to reduce the boiling point to such an extent that rapid evaporation may result in a heavy loss of fuel. To prevent this it is necessary to maintain pressure in the gasoline containers, which necessitates heavier construction and is in general undesirable, Sikorsky says. Still another problem is the propeller. A propeller that will be satisfactory in size and diameter for operation at sea level is not going to be efficient in rarefied air. It will be necessary to sacrifice part of the efficiency at low and or high altitude to effect a compromise.

Having discussed the difficulties, Sikorsky points out that the chief advantages of operation at high altitudes are an increase in speed and the possibility of getting above weather disturbances. Avoiding thunderstorms, fogs and ice formations adds to the comfort of flying, in a properly equipped transport, and increases schedule efficiency, two important considerations.

Besides its application for air transport, high altitude flying presents interest from a military and scientific standpoint.

The evidence indicates, Sikorsky states, that the limit for an airplane driven by an internal combustion engine and propeller is between 75,000 and 100,000 feet. An airplane with all necessary equipment can hardly be produced, Sikorsky says, so as to have speed of less than 50 miles an hour at sea level when carrying a load of passengers. This would mean light wing loading and large wings. At 100,000 feet density is about one-hundreth that at sea level, which means it would be necessary to fly 10 times faster, or about 500 miles an hour, to stay there. This is too high for wing efficiency. It is probable, Sikorsky concludes, that an altitude of 90,000 feet and a speed of 500 miles an hour will not be exceeded until a new source of greater power, combined with a new method of propulsion, becomes available.

The practical altitude of transport flying is limited chiefly by the ability of the occupants of an airplane to withstand the effects of rarified air. Normal sea level pressure is 2116 pounds per square foot. It may be safe to consider, Sikorsky reasons, that a person of any age in reasonable health may without discomfort stand an altitude at which the pressure and density would be about two-thirds of normal. This would be the case at 10,500 feet. Difficulties would begin for persons in the less normal condition of health somewhere between two-thirds and one-half sea level pressure. Below one-half the normal pressure and density living conditions would become difficult and detrimental to nearly every human being. A pressure of one-half the normal occurs at 18,000 feet, Sikorsky points out.

Therefore, for flights above that altitude air conditioning becomes definitely necessary. While physically strong people may overcome the effects of altitude by breathing oxygen, the better way would be to supercharge the cabin and maintain conditions of satisfactory temperature, pressure, humidity and chemical content by artificial means. Thus, Sikorsky states, to carry passengers at high altitudes all these conditions must be created artificially in a reliable way.

POWER plant requirements for high altitude flying involves a series of independent problems, to which Sikorsky and other airplane builders have given considerable thought. The major problem is the super-charging of the engine, which means that an adequate air compressor must be combined with the engine to supply air under pressure in intake manifold, so as to maintain sea level condition. Another problem is cooling. While the air at high altitudes is very cold, the loss of efficiency of the cooling system due to the low density is much greater than the gain from the low temperature.

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

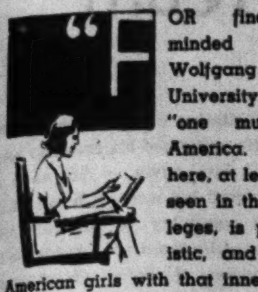
MICHAEL QUILL

Viennese Art Historian and Painter at Maryville College



"FOR fine European-minded girls," says Wolfgang Born, Ph. D., University of Vienna, "one must come to America. Education here, at least that I have seen in the Catholic colleges, is purely humanistic, and so we have American girls with that inner warmth and richness we used to find in the girls of Europe.

"Our European girls are being Americanized by your films from Hollywood. And this Americanization," he smiled, "perhaps it is a little false."

It is not the only such paradox he has noted since he sprinted from London to Maryville College of St. Louis University last fall in response to a cabled offer of the art professorship. He spent the Christmas holidays in Chicago at his studies. "Chicago," his friends told him—and he soon found for himself—"is, just now, the most peaceful of all European cities."

Paradox met him almost at the dock. He had left his home, Vienna, last June, to write for the art periodicals in London and pursue his investigations of the history of art in the great museums there. On August 31 he received the cable from New York: Position open . . . St. Louis . . . letter follows. . . . Can you accept?

It had gone to Vienna and caught up with him days late, for he was expected to assume his duties here September 21, and there was much to do in London.

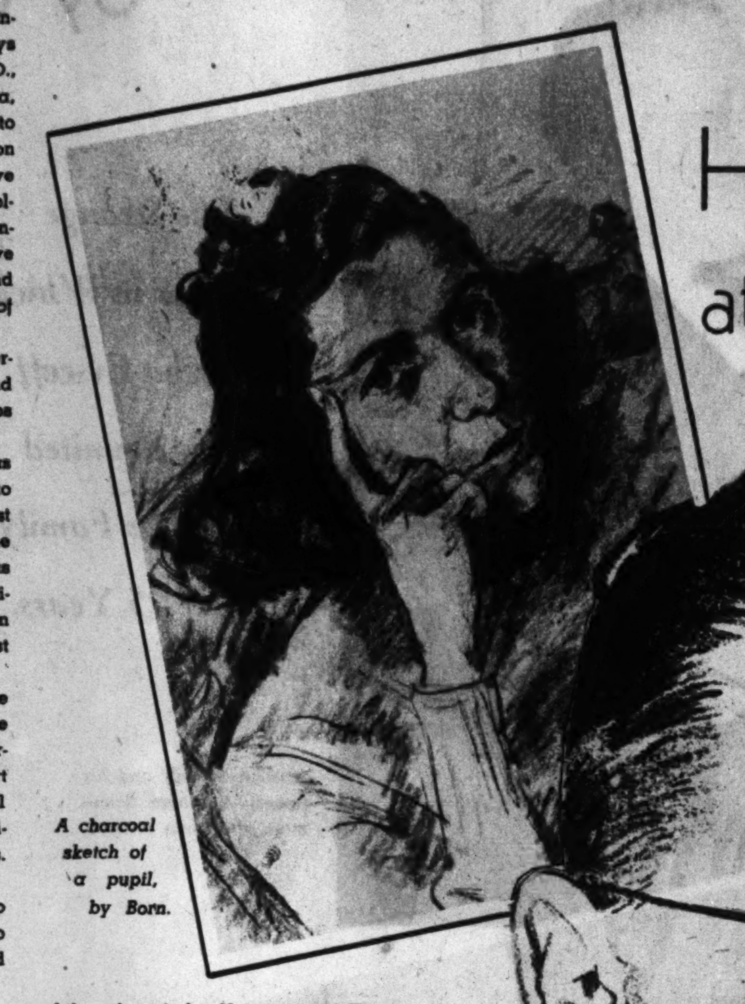
He got his affairs and the necessary documents in order September 17, queried English and French travel agencies for the first and fastest sailing, arrived in New York on the Paris on Saturday, the twenty-fifth, with two hours to spare before train time, reached St. Louis on Monday afternoon, borrowed some lantern slides from the Public Library and gave his first lecture Tuesday morning.

He saw nothing of the famous sky line and shore line of New York. He was confined "deep in the ship," he says, preparing for the formalities of entry. "The examinations themselves were nothing; the officials were like friends. But the preparations—they were terrific."

In that two-hour exploration of New York—mid flight from London to St. Louis in what he understood was truly the American manner—he walked down Fifth avenue. As a Viennese, he supposed that he might be exempt, for a moment, from the native compulsion to hurry.

To his astonishment, nobody else was hurrying, either. It took him minutes to realize that this was Saturday afternoon, in a section where the native compulsions were, perhaps, suspended for the week-end.

The keenness of the reaction was due, not to naivete, but to the fact that, personally and professionally as an art historian, Dr. Born is a student of civilization. His father was Dr. Gustav Born, Breslau biologist, whose untimely death in his forties ended pioneer studies in tissue culture. His brother is the distinguished physicist, Max Born, author, most recently, of "The Restless Universe" and Tait professor of natural philosophy of the University of Edinburgh.

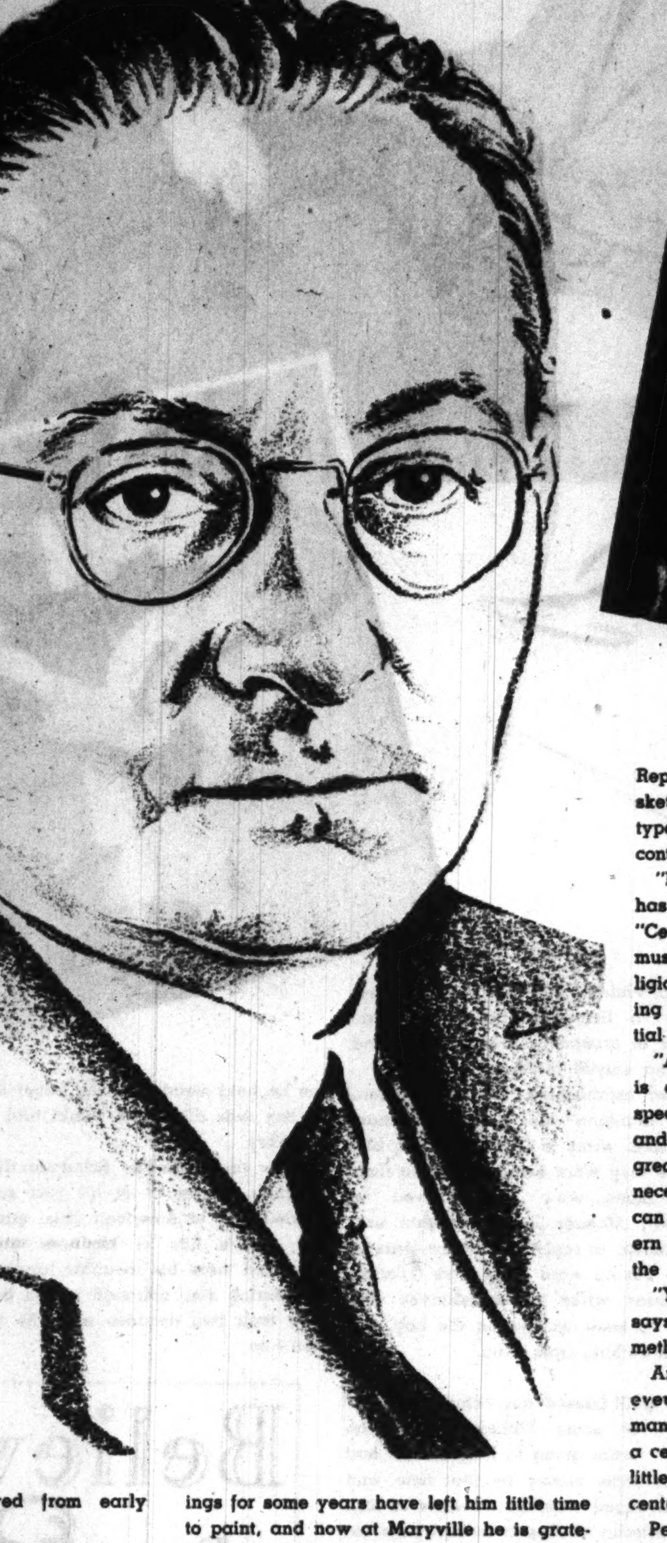


A charcoal sketch of a pupil, by Born.

Wolfgang Born studied painting in Paris as well as Munich and Vienna; art history, particularly European and Italian, under the Swiss professor Heinrich Wölfflin; Eastern European and Asiatic trends under the Austrian Byzantologist, Josef Strzygowski. He has done portraits of Thomas and Heinrich Mann, Georg Kaiser, Franz Werfel, Pirandello, Sigmund Freud, Mascagni, Richard Strauss and other notables.

HIS acquaintance with Thomas Mann began in a curious episode. Dr. Born, who had illustrated many books, published a series of colored lithographs illustrating "The Death in Venice." For his central characterization Mann had drawn on the personality of a noted Austrian composer—to whose actual appearance Dr. Born's conception of the character in the story showed a startling resemblance. Mann wrote to the artist, and ultimately did an introduction for the lithographs.

Dr. Born's paintings have been shown at various institutions in Europe, and many of them are held in Austrian collections. He has organized a number of Viennese exhibitions on historical themes, and has contributed papers to art publications in Austria, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia and England. As a painter, he was for a time absorbed by the viewpoint and methods of the French impressionists; as a historian, he has devoted a great deal of study to the dissemination pathways of arts and cultural trends from the East. One of his papers, for example, traced a fusion in North Russia of Byzantine major pattern with detail of interlaced animal forms derived from early Scandinavia.



Wolfgang Born.

Critical and historical studies and writings for some years have left him little time to paint, and now at Maryville he is gratefully beginning to get his hand in again.

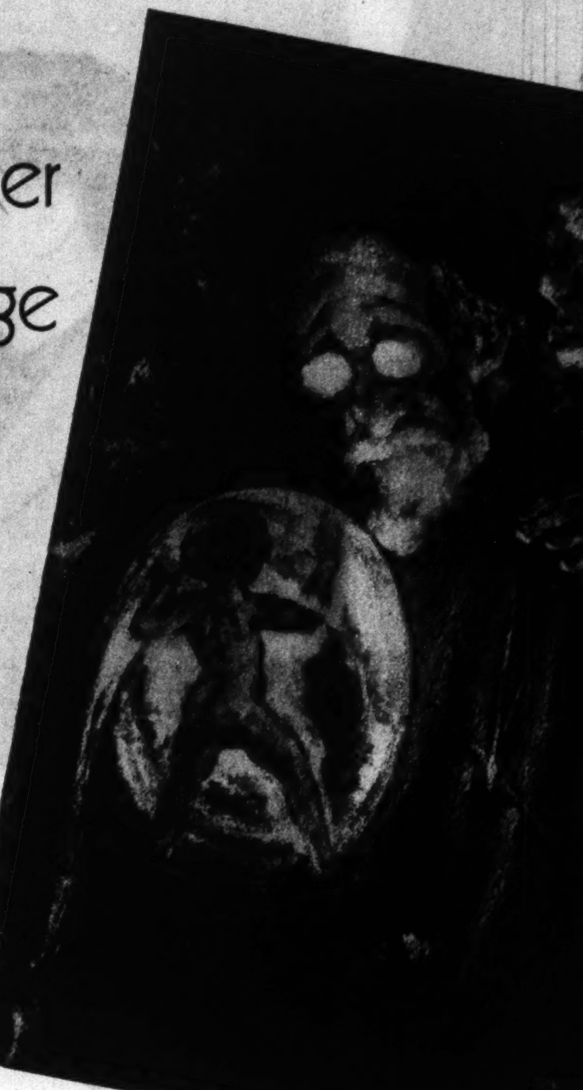


Illustration by Born for Goethe's "Faust."

Reproduced on this page is a classroom sketch of the "European-minded American type" he speaks of. He finds stimulating contrasts to university types abroad.

"It seems to me that religious education has a decidedly timely function," he says. "Certainly education to be effective now must foster the highest sort of ethics. Religion offers the likeliest means of implanting these—immediately and crucially essential—ideas of truth and goodness.

"And to that end, the appreciation of art is a ready and beautiful instrument. I speak at once of the human things in art, and art in the transcendental sense—the great inspired works. And this does not necessarily mean anything old-fashioned. It can be combined with 'smartness' and modern feeling. It does not mean turning back the hands of the clock."

"You have no lack of talent here," he says. "If there is a lack, it is perhaps of methodic education."

And similarly, he believes America "has everything"—except a store of cherished man-made beauty. "But you have had only a century or so to build it in, and look how little more we have in Europe, after many centuries."

Perhaps since beauty is from time to time destroyed in Europe? "But you destroy it here, too. Your progress can be a little like a war. You build nothing new without pulling down the old."

"You have treasures here," he says; "more than St. Louisans know. Your Art Museum is excellent and intelligently run. The Jesuits brought some valuable works to St. Louis University, and the best of them are used in the most sensible fashion possible—to decorate the university parlor.

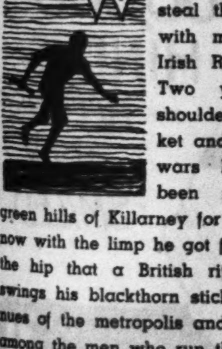
"THE art division of the Public Library is extraordinarily helpful. And there is material at Jefferson Memorial to make a comprehensive and stimulating exposition of the history of civilization in St. Louis. It could be done without drawing from any of the Historical Society exhibitions; simply from material for which the society now has no space for display. That is an idea to tempt any artist."

"I am for your American modern artists," he says with emphasis. "They—Thomas Benton and the rest of them—are making perhaps your first wholly independent contribution. I would mention only one danger; that of crossing the line between painting and mere illustration. Painting is not a narrative art; a painting is not a story—nor even what you would call a 'news picture.' "

ELLWOOD DOUGLASS.

The Irish Immigrant Who Organized New York's Transport Workers

NEW YORK.



WHEN Michael Quill was 11 years old he used to steal through the night with messages for the Irish Republican Army. Two years later he shouldered his own musket and went off to the wars his family had been fighting in the green hills of Killarney for 750 years. And now with the limp he got from the bullet in the hip that a British rifle sent him he swings his blackthorn stick along the avenues of the metropolis and takes his place among the men who run the richest city in the world.

Quill has won his place by seizing both the opportunities that came his way in the new world with both hands. Only six years away from his family farm in Quitloughera Townland near Kilgarvan he thought he saw a chink in the anti-labor armor of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, for 20 years held up by economists as the model of company unionism, and formed the Transport Workers Lodge 1457 of the International Association of Machinists, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

He started it in a cafeteria meeting with four friends on the night of April 12, 1934, and was elected president. There were only five of them at the beginning, now there are 60,000 and more. They looked only for subway line workers then, but now they include bus workers and taxicab drivers as well as the subway, trolley and elevated line employes. Only 10 years an immigrant yet Quill with a word could paralyze the transportation systems on which millions of persons depend every day.

That was his first opportunity and Tammany Hall provided his second. Wallowing in the civic mire of its decades of free-handed graft Tammany finally choked itself five years ago when Mayor F. H. LaGuardia swept through to victory on the fusion ticket. Inevitably his triumph meant the end of the Board of Aldermen, the antiquated legislative body through which Tammany had perpetuated its control of the city treasury. Quill was one of the first to perceive this and when a city council one-third the size was proposed he was one of the first candidates.

He obtained the indorsement of the locally powerful American Labor Party and his candidacy then was approved by the City Fusion Party, the City Progressive Committee and the Citizen's Non-Partisan Committee. As a result of his own diligence and that of his friends he was the first candidate to be certified as elected from the Borough of the Bronx. His platform was based on "economic and political justice for the working man and woman."

Membership in the 250-year-old Board of Aldermen was a virtual nomination for obscurity, but the City Council, because of its smaller size and higher caliber provides an effective sounding board for its members.

In the A. F. of L. Quill found his group in conflict with other unions which claimed some of the ground he had marked out for his own so he switched to the Committee for Industrial Organization where he now has full scope in his own sphere.

A man to accomplish so much in so little time must be a fighter; Quill was born into an atmosphere of strife.

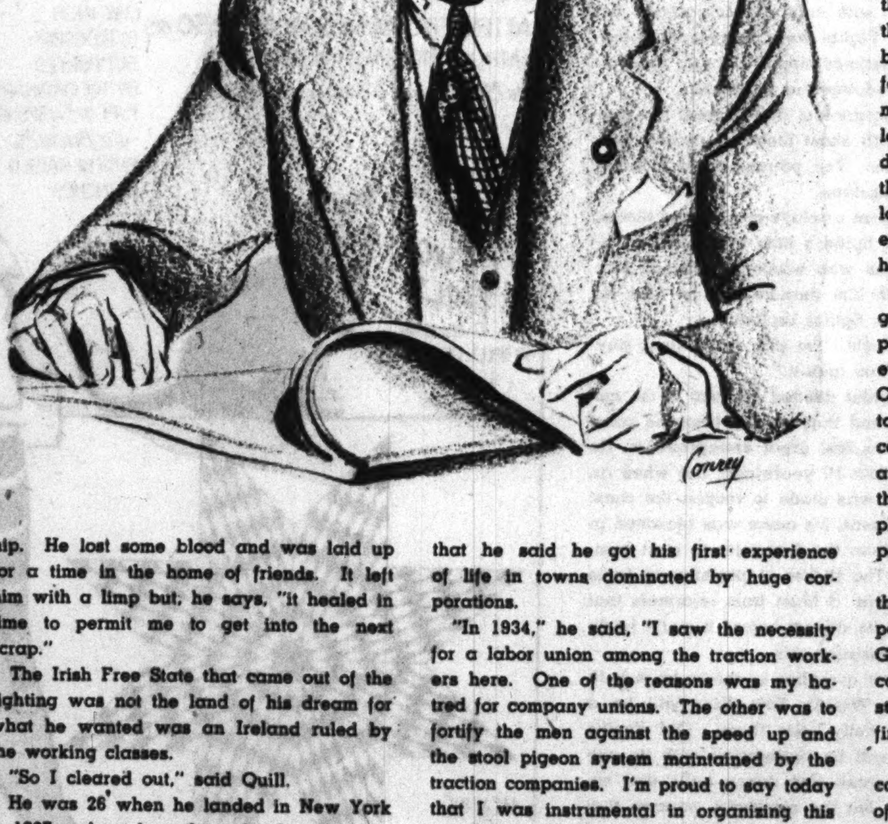
"I was born under the Irish Republican movement," he said. "The father was in it before me. Our farm house, because it is the farthest up the mountain, was always a headquarters.

"All the cabinet members of the present government stayed there one time or another as fugitives. It was the same way during the Parnell movement in 1882 and during the Fenian movement in 1867. It was that way for hundreds of years back.

"At 11, I joined. I drilled with the other boys and ran messages for the men. At 12 real fighting broke out and at 13 I was carrying arms. My father was still fighting at 80 and two of my three brothers were on the brigade staff."

Came a sharp skirmish in the Killarney Mountains between a ragged bunch of Republicans and the troops of the United Kingdom and Quill fell with a bullet in the left hip. He lost some blood and was laid up for a time in the home of friends. It left him with a limp but, he says, "it healed in time to permit me to get into the next scrap."

Michael Quill.



The Irish Free State that came out of the fighting was not the land of his dream for what he wanted was an Ireland ruled by the working classes.

"So I cleared out," said Quill.

He was 26 when he landed in New York in 1927 and not long thereafter he got a job in the change booth of a subway station working, he said, 12 hours a day and seven days a week for 33 cents an hour. For a brief period he also sold religious objects in Pennsylvania towns and it was there that he said he got his first experience of life in towns dominated by huge corporations.

"In 1934," he said, "I saw the necessity for a labor union among the traction workers here. One of the reasons was my hatred for company unions. The other was to fortify the men against the speed up and the stool pigeon system maintained by the traction companies. I'm proud to say today that I was instrumental in organizing this union.

"It was decided that Austin Hogan, now secretary-treasurer and John Santo, general manager, would work in the open. But for them there would be no union. The rest of us worked under cover in the company union for we knew the company's 'Beakie' (spy) system."

The union knew the system so well that in 1935 Quill unmasked a spy in the midst of a union meeting, after notifying the press to be present, and his members almost lynched the culprit. As an interesting footnote to this story Quill said that the "beakie" now wanted to rejoin the union on the theory that he had double-crossed an A. F. of L. group, not the present C I O unit.

The old A. F. of L. unions sat by complacently while Quill's young, energetic group started out to get members, serene in the belief that no one could succeed where they had failed. But Quill's vigorous agents brought in members in great batches and before long union rolls contained thousands of names. The stories are that old A. F. of L. leaders refused almost to believe the evidence of their eyes when Quill presented them with proof he had founded a powerful local. Finally he was taken into the federation, but the restrictions placed about his activities soon palled.

Once in the C I O Quill began to organize the bus workers and received a 95 per cent mandate from trolley workers. His efforts in the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Company situation provided the most spectacular evidence of his power. Before the company acceded to a contract containing a 10 per cent wage increase Quill had to threaten to shut down the power plants supplying juice to lines over which 4,000,000 persons travel daily.

Between 250 and 300 of his men locked themselves in the master power plant prepared to carry out his orders. Mayor LaGuardia, viewing the danger to the orderly conduct of city business in the event of a strike, called on both sides to permit a fact-finding group to function.

Quill also obtained agreements in the taxicab field, but these are in a constant state of flux and some combines of independents have sought to free themselves from the binders.

One of Quill's proudest boasts is that his union has been instrumental in obtaining more than $12,000,000 a year in wage increases, paid vacations, shorter hours and other improved working conditions for its members.

Quill is 37, partly bald, with twinkling blue eyes and a considerable fund of good humor. He is five feet, eight inches tall, weighs 172 pounds. He dresses conservatively but well and usually wears a horseshoe tie pin decorated with an emerald shamrock. The pin came from Ireland.

He is a powerful speaker who uses directness rather than oratory. He has the confidence of his men, however, and needs, he says, no flowery phrases to keep it. He was married only several months ago in the Daniel O'Connell Memorial Church in the little town of Cahirciveen in County Kerry, Ireland, to Miss Mollie O'Neill.

They discussed it four years ago in Ireland when Quill told her:

"I shan't be marrying you until we've signed up all the roads in the city."

Their first meeting was in this country, however.

"IT WAS in this building which is now our headquarters," he said. "It was at an Irish dance downstairs in what is now our meeting hall, but which was then called Killarney Hall.

"She is 27 and she has blue eyes like most of us from Killarney and I think she's pretty. She worked with me in the union then and she works with me now. There's still lots to be done."

He married pretty Mollie before he had signed up all the roads, but he figures that this is a matter so near in the future that it doesn't matter at all that he anticipated it by a little.

Lately Quill has been having the sort of trouble he describes as "an annoyance rather." His qualifications to represent the Bronx in the council were challenged by Democrats on the ground he actually lived in Manhattan. Nothing came of it. Likewise he was ordered to submit to income tax examination.

"There's been lots of pressure from many places," he said. Then he smiled:

"But I don't expect to be behind bars very soon."

Brought Together—from Opposite Ends of the Earth—by a Dream

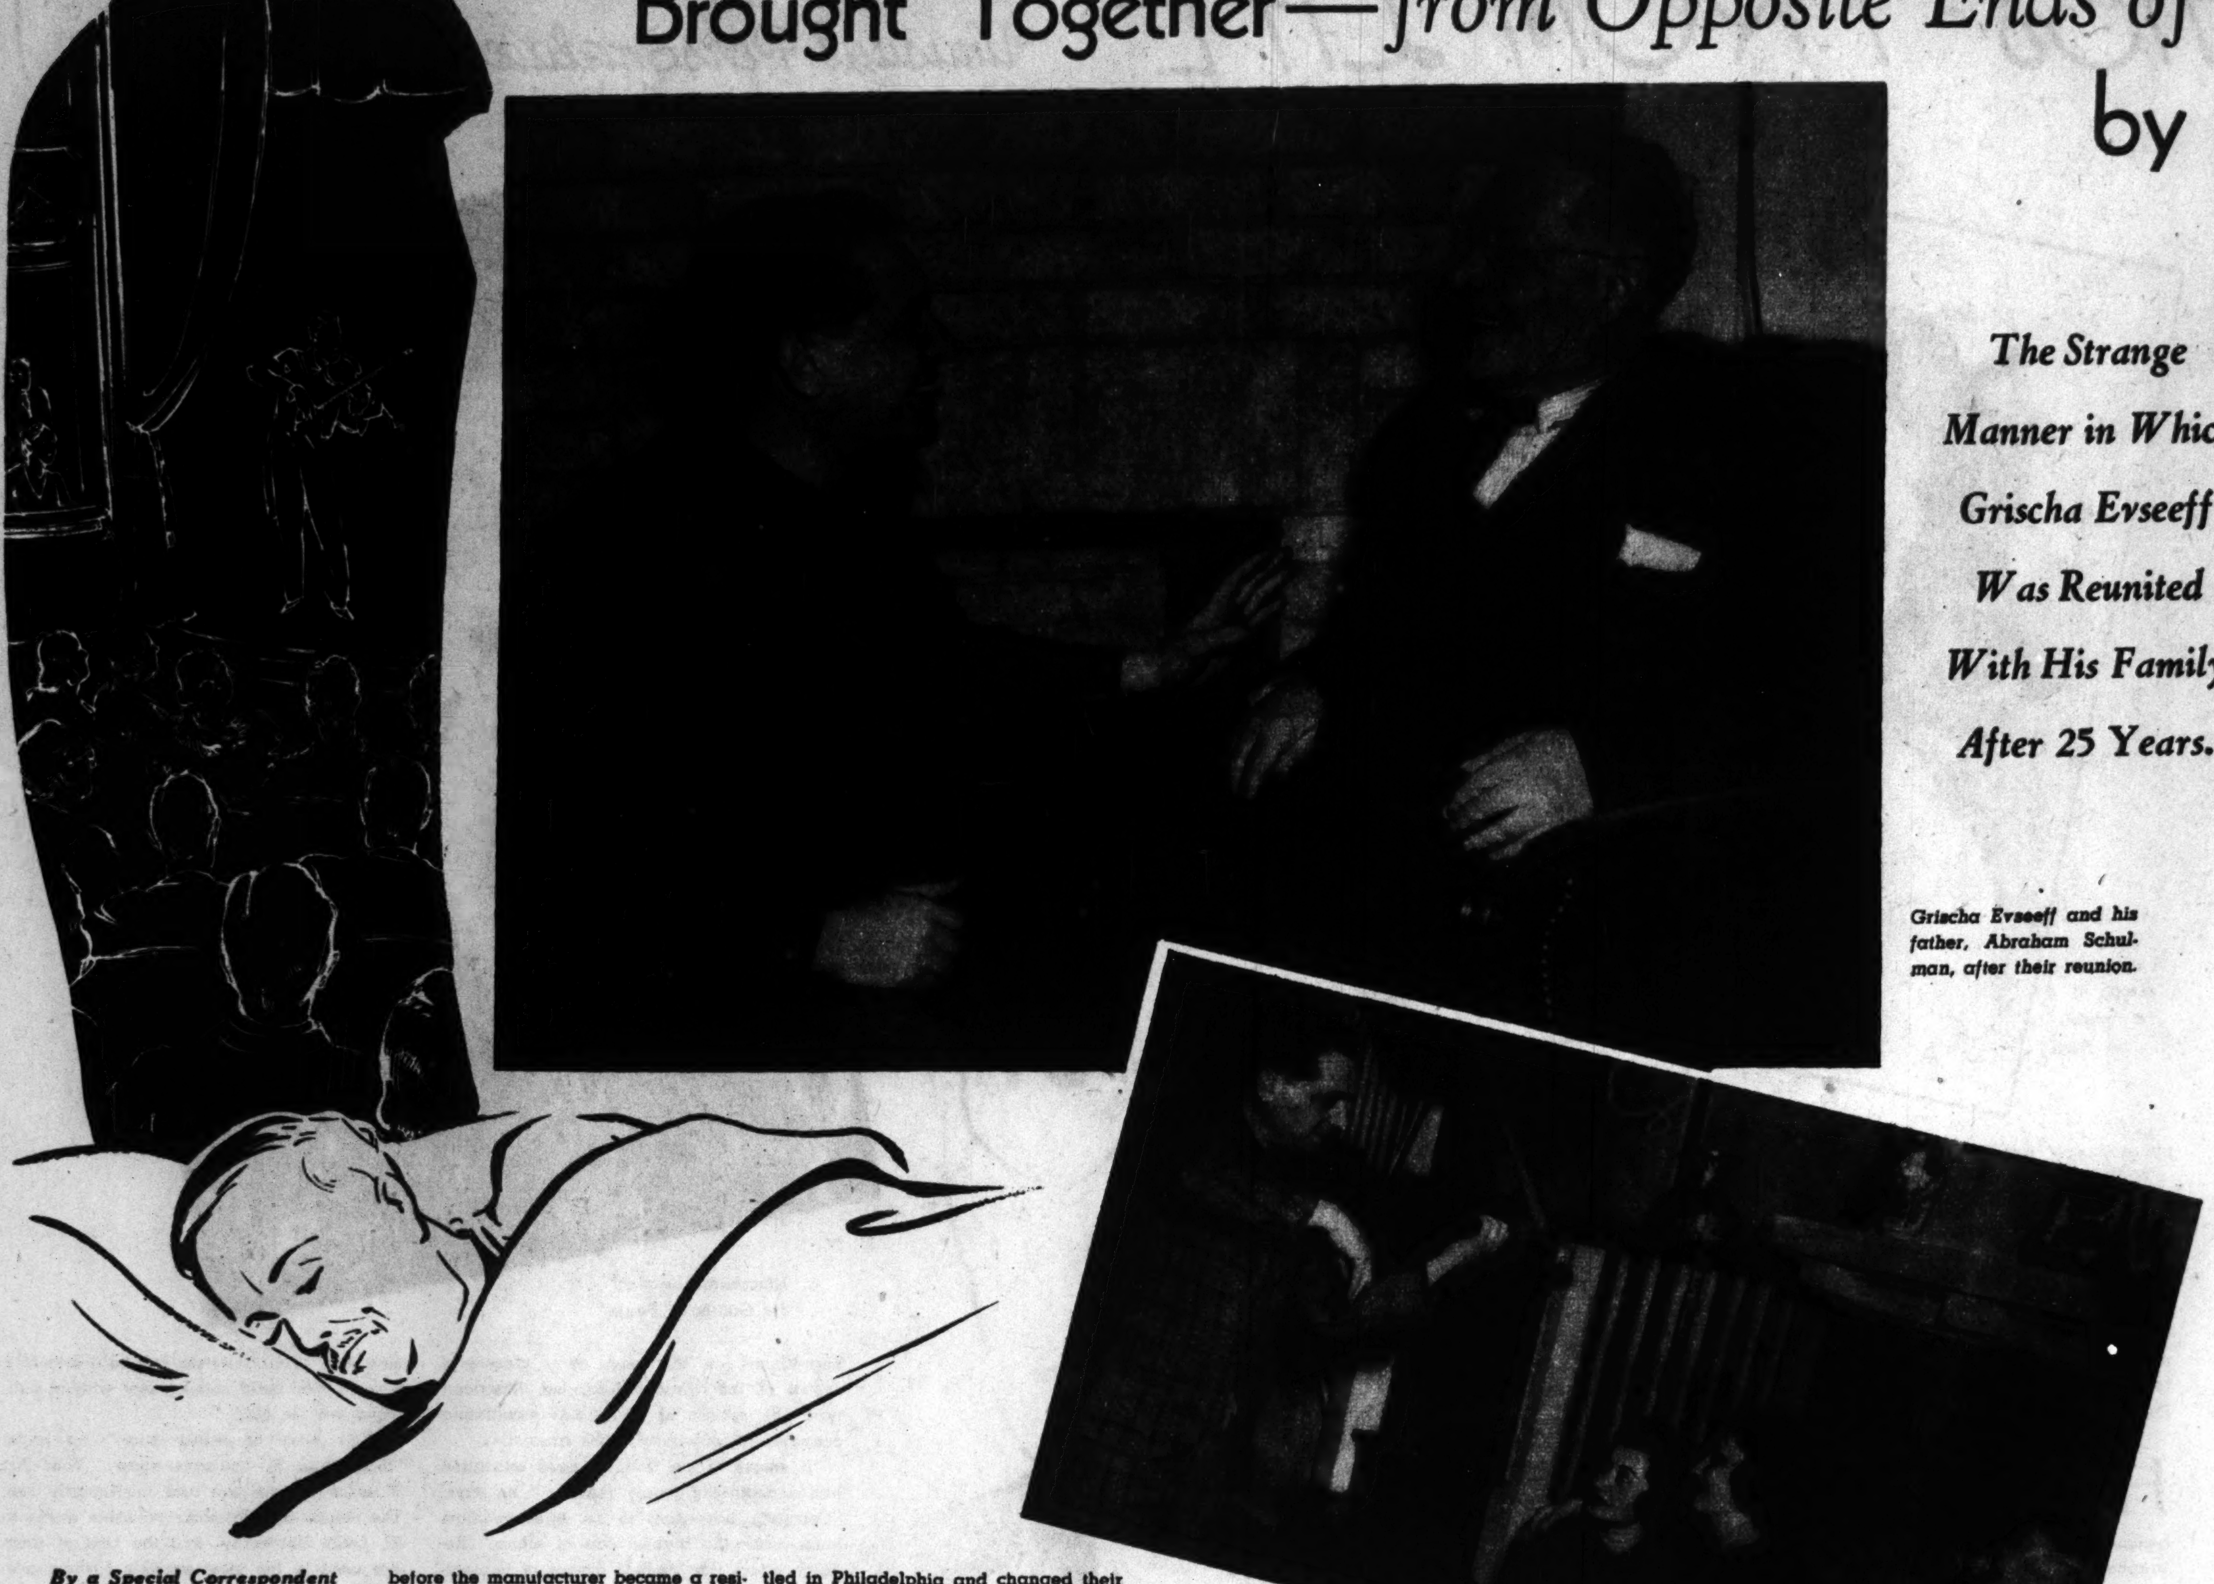
The Strange Manner in Which Grischa Evseeff Was Reunited With His Family After 25 Years.



Grischa Evseeff and his father, Abraham Schulman, after their reunion.

Grischa with his family, in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA.

DREAMS have no substance, but a dream which came to Abraham Schulman has conquered time and space. It has reached across a quarter of a century and half-way around the earth to restore a missing man to his family.

Abraham Schulman is hardly the man one would expect to have a dream of such potency. He is not a poet, not an artist, not a visionary, but a business man, sufficiently hard-headed to have achieved reasonable prosperity as a manufacturer of artificial flowers and women's belts. He has lived in Philadelphia for 25 years, developing his business, watching four sons grow up, marry and come into the business, and following the general pattern of existence of the substantial American householder.

But despite the surface tranquillity and commonplaceness of his life, Schulman was for many years tormented by a gnawing uncertainty. He didn't know what had become of his eldest son, 13 years old when he last saw him. The explanation of that goes back to a time before the manufacturer became a resident of Philadelphia.

The Schulmans come from Russia. Abraham was born in the town of Rizan, moved to Moscow in his youth and set up as a small dealer in jewelry. He married and became the father of five sons, Grischa, Harry, Samuel, William and Michael. The family name was Evseeff and they were Jews. As such, their privileges and opportunities were rather severely limited in Czarist Russia. Father Abraham Evseeff, thinking of this and wanting his children to have every possible chance for happy, useful lives, turned his eyes longingly toward free America. In 1912, shortly after the birth of the youngest boy, Michael, he was able to accomplish what he long had hoped for—bring his family to the United States.

He did not bring all the family, however. Thirteen-year-old Grischa was left in Moscow in the care of relatives. The reason for this was that Grischa, who had early shown musical talent, had managed to gain admission to the Moscow Conservatory, and a family council had decided that it was best for him to remain there and finish his musical course; he was studying the violin. Abraham loved music—played a bit on the clarinet himself—and was eager for his son to make the most of his talent.

So the Evseeffs came to America, settled in Philadelphia and changed their name to Schulman because it was easier to pronounce than Evseeff; and Grischa stayed in Moscow.

After establishing the family here and changing his name, Abraham Schulman wrote to Grischa, telling him where they were living and what their new name was. He received no answer. Uneasy, he wrote again, urging his son to reply and set his fears at rest. But no word came from Grischa. Schulman wrote to the relatives who were to keep an eye on the boy, but heard nothing from them.

TIME passed, and Schulman heard of some Philadelphians who were going to Russia. He had saved some money by that time, and he arranged with the travelers to look for Grischa in Russia in exchange for his paying part of their transportation. But this effort, too, was fruitless; they had to report that they could find no trace of his son.

The World War broke out and dragged through its dreadful years. The Czarist Government of Russia was overthrown, Kerensky rose and fell, the Soviet Union emerged supreme from Russia's turmoil and slaughter. Abraham Schulman wondered fearfully how his son Grischa was faring in those times. Except in rare moments of depression he held steadily to the belief that the boy was alive and would turn up some day.

A few years ago Mrs. Schulman died. Schulman began to let his four sons, married now to American girls, gradually relieve him of business cares. More and more his thoughts turned to his missing son, although it had been more than two decades since he had seen him.

Then one night recently Abraham Schulman had a dream—a very vivid dream. He dreamed that Grischa had become a great violinist. In the dream he seemed to be in some large city, playing before large audiences. It was the kind of thing, of course, which Abraham had wanted for his son.

The dream kept coming back. And it spurred Schulman to a fresh effort to find Grischa. Years before, he had given up such attempts as futile.

This time Schulman went to the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society. He explained his case and asked if there was anything that could be done to find his son which offered the faintest possibility of success. After some consultation it was decided to try the expedient of placing advertisements and notices in some foreign newspapers.

For a long time there was no result. Then, one day not long ago, a letter came to Schulman from Peiping, China—from Grischa. He had seen his father's advertisement; he was overjoyed to learn where he was.

Father Schulman hastened to answer the letter. And the other day Grischa arrived in Philadelphia and was reunited with his father and brothers—only the older two of whom could remember him.

THERE was much to be told, much to be explained. Grischa had never received those letters his father wrote him long ago. And since he did not know of the family's change of name and did not know they had settled in Philadelphia, he had been unable to communicate with them. He had finished his course at the Conservatory, had become a violinist in the Moscow Symphony Orchestra, and had been exempted from army service during the war. Later he had played with various orchestras. While filling an engagement in Siberia he accepted an offer to go to China. Seven years ago he joined the orchestra of the Grand Hotel in Peiping, and had played with this organization ever since.

Before leaving Russia, Grischa married a pianist, from whom he is now divorced. Their daughter Vera, now 16 years old, is also a pianist.

The violinist read the notice of his father's search for him in a newspaper, the Peiping Star, which is printed in Russian.

Grischa Evseeff has been devoting most of his time since his arrival here to becoming reacquainted with his father and brothers, but expects soon to resume work with an orchestra—an American orchestra. He says he is going to remain in this country and become a citizen. He hopes that his daughter, who is now with her mother in Peiping, will join him here eventually.

Only one thing mars Father Schulman's joy in the recovery of his long-lost son; that is that Grischa's mother did not live long enough to share that joy.

The Barbary Coast

its boards at the outset of their careers.

Drama reached its flower at the Bella Union in the late eighties and nineties, however, when it starred a fantastic couple billed as Big Bertha and Oofty-Goofty in a burlesque of the balcony scene from Romeo and Juliet. Big Bertha, weighing 280 pounds, boasted that she came to San Francisco as a confidence woman. Oofty-Goofty gained undying fame from a curious insensibility to pain. For years he went about saloons with a baseball bat offering to let anyone "hit me for four bits, mister."

Barbary Coast, Chinatown and all the surrounding area were swept away in the catastrophic earthquake and fire in 1906. Some reformers are said to have looked upon the smoldering ruins and piously exclaimed that, even as of old He had dealt with Sodom and Gomorrah, the Lord had visited his wrath upon Barbary Coast.

But before these unctuous ejaculations had faded on the air workmen were clearing the debris for the reconstruction of the old bordellos and dance palaces, the saloons and concert halls. In six months life and larceny had returned to the coast. By 1910 it is estimated there were 300 saloons and dance halls in six blocks of the district.

The Barbary Coast that arose from the ashes differed from the old coast only in that it had learned the cash value of its sinful reputation. Balconies were built in the dance halls and saloons for slumming parties from reputable parts of San Francisco.

And whereas before any luckless person who ventured into the district was fair game for anyone who could take him for a sucker, slummers were now under special protection. It was all right to rob them by extortionate overcharging, but the use of Mickey Finns or bungstarters was taboo.

A number of distinguished literary and theatrical people visited the coast as slummers, among them Rudyard Kipling and John Masefield. Jack London, a hometown boy, was familiar with the district.

ART also discovered the coast. Arthur Putnam, the sculptor, did a set of bas-relief wall panels for the Hippodrome, one of the joints there. It showed satyrs chasing nymphs with such realism that protests caused a plastering over the objectionable scenes. Sarah Bernhardt and Pavlowa visited the coast and the latter said she got the idea for some of her dance creations there.

Whether this is true or not, historians of the coast say that it did exercise a profound influence on the dance. Asbury states the turkey trot, Texas Tommy, the bunny hug, chicken glide and other dances which scandalized the scandalizable as they swept from one end of the country to the other originated there.

Some came out of Purcell's Dew Drop Inn, and the So Different, both Negro dance halls. Purcell's was next door to a joint run by Spider Kelly, an ex-pugilist. Kelly's was a place for whites, but its bar and that of Purceil's stood back to back with only a thin partition between. Fights were frequent and bullets sometimes zipped through the partition, endangering bartenders.

The proprietors finally lined this partition with sheet metal to protect their employes. The patrons could look out for themselves.

When an employe complained that so much of Spider's time was taken up by fight fans who wanted to discuss boxing with him that he had no time for business, Spider replied:

"All right. I'm sick of the dump anyway. You take it."

So Spider deeded his joint to the employes and thus passed from the coast one of its last great entrepreneurs. He died about 10 years ago, but when an attempt was made to reopen the coast after repeal, his name was blazoned in lights from the first joint to start business. The flicker of posthumous fame died under a blast from reformers that closed the district before it could fairly get humming again.

Now if a replica of the coast is built for the World's Fair there will be a Spider Kelly joint there. Old Pacific street will be reproduced with its glittering cafes and dance halls and saloons. But the promoters promise that it will be a Barbary Coast cleansed of its sin. The atmosphere without the sordidness and vice. A nice place for a family outing. Old Barbary Coast was buried corrupt. It will be raised—if at all—chaste.

Later he had played with various orchestras. While filling an engagement in Siberia he accepted an offer to go to China. Seven years ago he joined the orchestra of the Grand Hotel in Peiping, and had played with this organization ever since.

Before leaving Russia, Grischa married a pianist, from whom he is now divorced. Their daughter Vera, now 16 years old, is also a pianist.

The violinist read the notice of his father's search for him in a newspaper, the Peiping Star, which is printed in Russian.

Grischa Evseeff has been devoting most of his time since his arrival here to becoming reacquainted with his father and brothers, but expects soon to resume work with an orchestra—an American orchestra. He says he is going to remain in this country and become a citizen. He hopes that his daughter, who is now with her mother in Peiping, will join him here eventually.

Only one thing mars Father Schulman's joy in the recovery of his long-lost son; that is that Grischa's mother did not live long enough to share that joy.

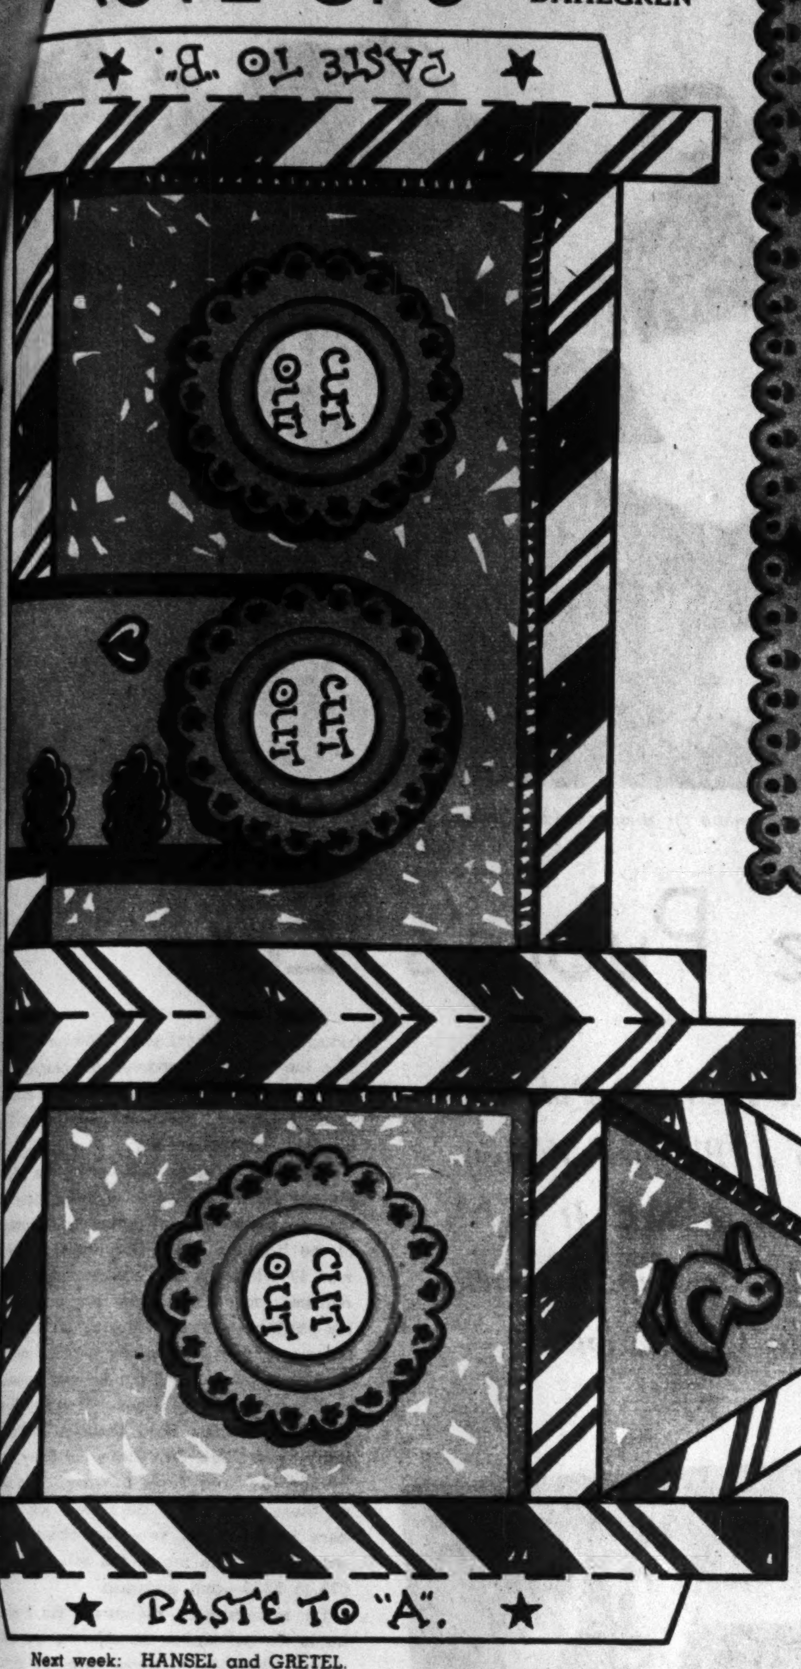
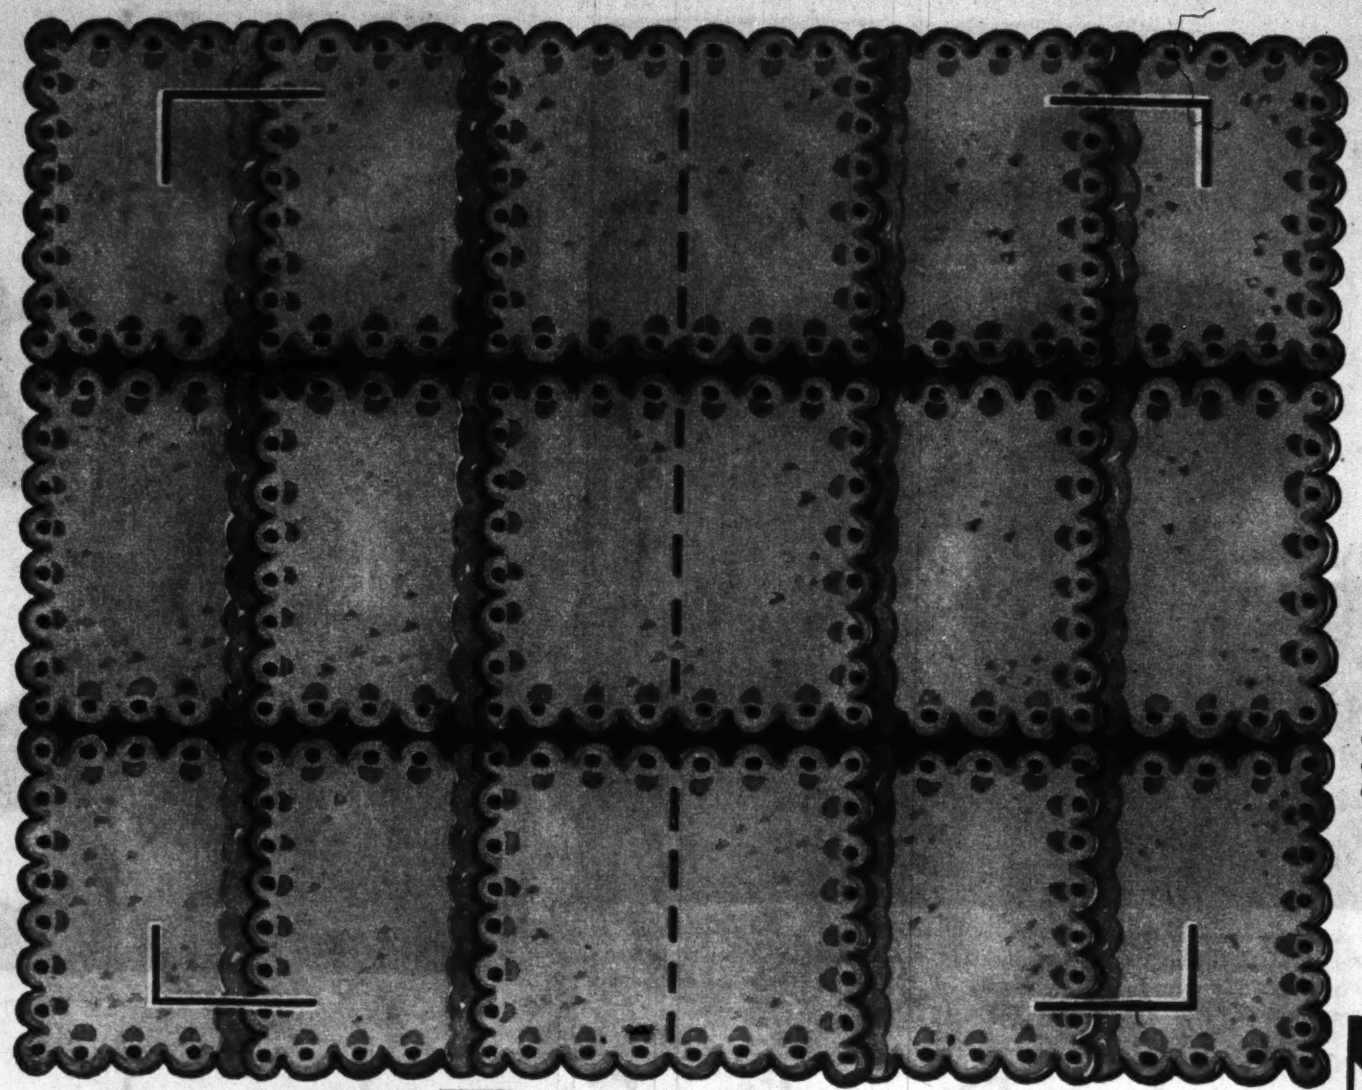
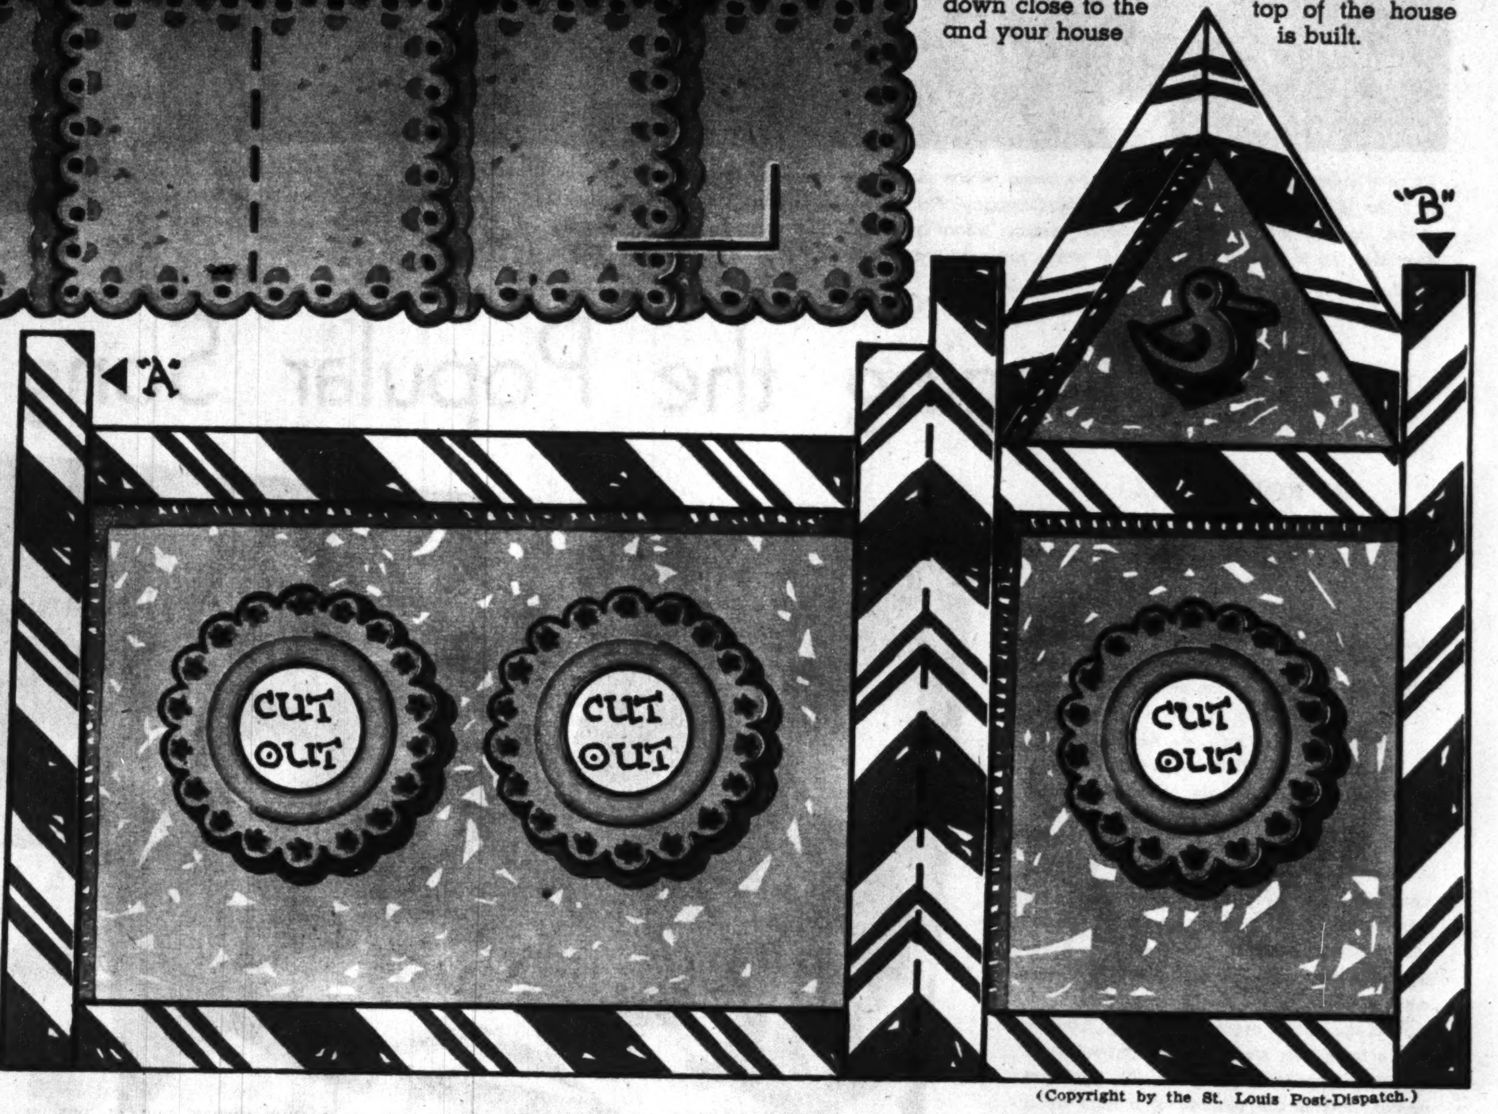
HANSEL and GRETEL— the MAGIC HOUSE

Today we paste up the witch's magic house from the story of Hansel and Gretel. Next week brings the characters.

DIRECTIONS ● Mount upon thin cardboard and then cut out the pieces. Be sure to cut out the four "L" shaped slots on the roof also. Folding upon dotted lines will bring parts into proper positions to be pasted (stars indicate where to put paste). First paste up the sides—then finish the house by placing the "L" slots over the extending ends of the candy sticks. Push the roof down close to the top of the house and your house is built.







Next week: HANSEL and GRETEL.

THE WITCH—An angry old hag.

One winter morning many years ago, King Joy was taking a walk in the woods when he met a mean, hateful old witch. The King didn't like her and he told her to leave his kingdom. Now this witch was wearing a pair of magic mittens and any wish she made when she wore them came true. She flew into a rage when the King asked her to leave, and wished he would change into snow. And the poor King changed into a snowman. His subjects were very unhappy when they saw what had happened, and they thought that they would never see their King again when he melted in the spring and ran away. But the King saw them often. He would return to his subjects as raindrops in the Spring and summer, and in the winter he would visit them in the form of snowflakes. This winter he drifted near Hickory Hollow and Bill Bunny, quite by accident, made him once more into a snowman. Then Bill, who had found the witch's magic mittens and was wearing them, took the King to the Land of Magic where Presto sent the smoke from his magic pipe to fetch the witch and a sculptor to restore the King to his original self. And we see the smoke dragging the witch and the sculptor away, after the snowman has been changed back into King Joy, as KING JOY—(Shaking hands with Bill Bunny.) Thank you, my good friend, thank you. Won't my people be surprised to see me? Will you come to my kingdom and live with us?

BILL BUNNY—I'd like to visit your kingdom some day, but now I'm anxious to get back to Hickory Hollow.

THE MIGHTY PRESTO—Mr. Bunny, as a reward for your kindness any one wish you make within the next four weeks will come true. (Then Presto puffs on his magic pipe and large rings of smoke float around the room. Bill and King Joy say good-bye and climb on the smoke rings which swiftly take them home.)

Plugging the Popular Song Into the Public's Ear

By ROBERT SELL

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

When a Piece Leaves a Publisher, It Goes to a 'Plugger' Whose Big Job Is to 'Sell' It to Orchestra Leaders and So Get It Into Circulation.

NEW YORK.

THE fantastic gentry who peddle the songs that the nation sings and dances to worship a strange God—the Almighty Plug. That is why they figuratively uncover when anyone mentions the strange story of "Old Pal, Why Don't You Answer Me?" a song that flowed from the adroit and prolific pen of Joe Young a double handful or so of years ago. It remains today, with Tin Pan Alley in a ferment of competition, as the epic of its kind.

A plug, in the argot of Tin Pan Alley—which is neither an alley nor a boulevard nor any specified place at all, for that matter—means the playing of a tune by a band leader on the radio or in a night club or any other place of entertainment. The theory is that the more the song is played the more popularity the tune will achieve and, naturally, the heavier will be the financial returns from sheet music and record sales.

That's why song pluggers were born. That's how some of the most colorful characters in show business came into being. That's why, to those in the know, Tin Pan Alley is even more wonderful than Hollywood at its most bizarre, and Alice who went Through the Looking Glass would find here a weird new world for her to gasp over.

There is the story of Joe Young and the plug de resistance. After Joe wrote "Old Pal, Why Don't You Answer Me?" there was the problem of getting it played and popularized. Band leaders displayed a unanimous apathy. Even paid renditions by the Troubadors at Coney Island had no effect, and Joe was resigned to defeat when an unusual thing happened.

A murderer, mounting the gallows in Chicago, asked for permission to sing "Old Pal." The story was carried page one nationwide and obviously created a tremendous demand for the ditty. As the money rolled in, Joe wondered how the dead man could have heard of "Old Pal" since it had scarcely been started in Chicago. Then he got a telegram from his Chicago representative reading:

"How did you like that gallows plug? Wasn't it terrific?"

And it developed that the representative had gotten to the condemned man and had succeeded in having him make the request merely to ballyhoo the melody.

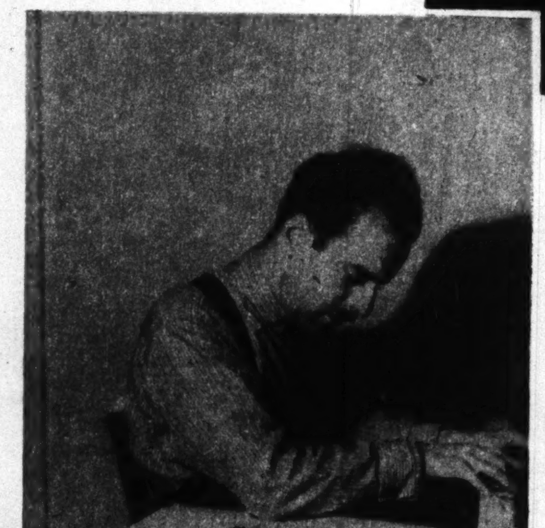
Monumental plugs such as the above are ultra scarce nowadays, for the competition is getting keener all the time and, after all, there are only 24 radio hours a day and a band leader can play one song only once on a program. But the gamut of emotions takes an awful beating daily as the song pluggers use every artifice and wile to get the tunes entrusted to them played and played and played. Until, of course, they are played out.

Nothing is sacred to a plugger — not even dinner. Himber is trying to have his soup, but Eddie Wolpin of Crawford Music would rather he had his song. Wolpin joined the group between pictures with his boss, Al Porgie, who stands behind him lending moral support.

Tin Pan Alley is the nebulous term applied to any place where a song is written or published, although at one time it had a specific application; that was when a cluster of offices centered around Forty-ninth street and Broadway. Tin Pan was intended as an expression of the kind of music turned out by the rough and ready composers of popular music and in all too many instances the designation was apt if brutal. For years, however, the publishers have had their offices apart, but the appellation lingers.

IN SOME respects the alley is almost as important as Hollywood, for propaganda songs can have as great an effect as propaganda pictures and the Alley selects the songs the nation will hear. Remember "Over There" and "Johnny, Get Your Gun" in the last war, and "We're On Our Way to Mexico" during the Villa troubles. But at the moment this is no problem, for the mood of the times is . . . LOVE.

Now, assume that a song is written and turned over to a publisher—as are several score a day. The publisher thinks it has possibilities and decides to place it on the market. Once the printed copies are in his hands, he calls in the song pluggers. These are men who know every possible way of getting around any prejudice an orchestra leader might have against the song as well as how to convince him it is "terrific."



Bernie Green works out the "lead sheet" which is used by the conductor.

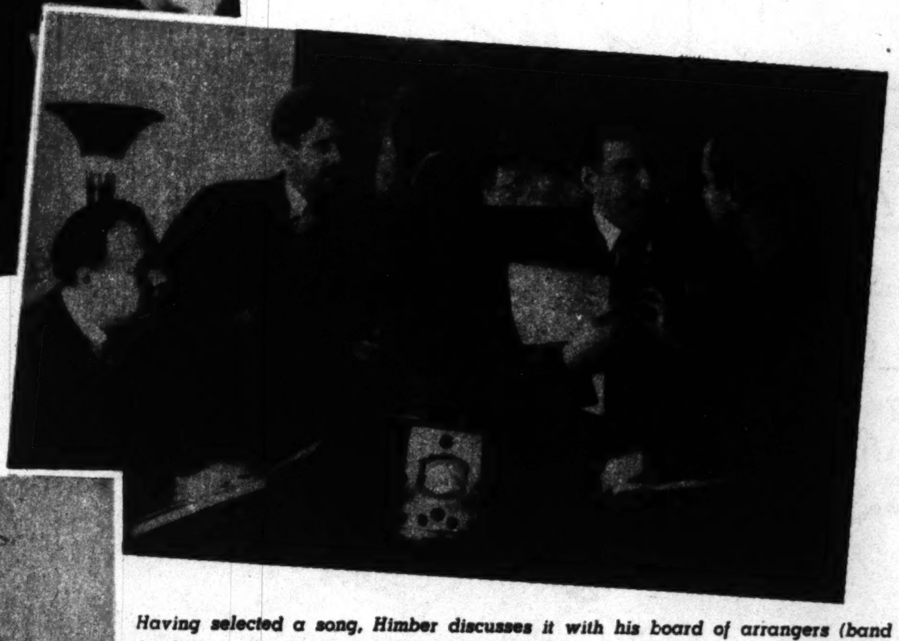
There used to be a simple, direct way of getting a plug and that was to pay the band leader. But the music code forbids this form of proselyting, so song pluggers have drawing accounts to cover "entertainment expenses." In addition, they must rely on personal contact and a knowledge of what the orchestra leader wants.

Russ Morgan will usually talk about songs only at prize fights, so a plugger must arrange to take him or meet him at one. Ray Noble is a baseball fanatic, so the grandstand is the place to nail him. Another method of winning over Morgan and Noble is to talk fights or baseball all the time. Rudy Vallee is always ready to lend an attentive ear to a plugger who can discourse intelligently on saxophones and who can listen to the crooner's enthusiastic description of his Maine lodge.

All that Benny Goodman and Tommy Dorsey ask from a plugger is a good song. And a knowledge of music helps in Goodman's case. (Strange as it may seem, many pluggers don't know one note from another.) Guy Lombardo is one of the easiest to tag provided the plugger has a good tune. He listens patiently and chooses well, and there is no black magic necessary.



Having selected a song, Himber discusses it with his board of arrangers (band leading is big business). Left to right: Milton Weinstein, Joe Glover, Himber and Bernie Green. They discuss the best possible treatment to give the tune and still retain Himber's style of soft tone.

Fred Waring presents a different problem. On Thursdays the leader of the Pennsylvanians gathers the pluggers around him and sets the conditions for the plugging fiesta that is about to begin.

"To the Automat," he will yell. And the entire crew will plunge pell mell into the restaurant with the last one in paying the check.

On another occasion he will decree that the plugger who first mentions a song during dinner has to pick up the check for the crowd. The boys get blue in the face trying to hold in the merits of their wares.

And Richard Himber has a quaint trick all of his own. Nowadays a great many pluggers bring along a record of the song they are trying to sell. Himber plays the record and sometimes says:

"Very lovely. I'll keep this."

ONLY on Tin Pan Alley could that mean that Himber doesn't like the song. When he takes the record from the phonograph and breaks it—THAT means Himber likes it.

Dealing with such characters, living the uncertain, picturesque life they do has given song pluggers almost a language of their own. One of them said to this writer:

"So I met this guy and we went to a fancy joint where I popped for a $40 grunt. Then I give him the weep about needing one more plug to make the sheet and he promises me a once over lightly. So what happens? So the guy throws me a roundhouse curve like you've never seen."

What he meant was:

"I took the band leader to an expensive restaurant where I paid a $40 check. Then I gave him a sob story about needing one more playing on the air to have the song listed in 'Variety' (trade paper) and the promised me a chorus. But he double-crossed me."

"Pop and grunt" and "grab a hot potato" are synonymous. The first term originated when a plugger said he picked up a band leader's night club check that was so heavy it made him grunt. To "throw a curve" means to double-cross. Band leaders who do this are sometimes called "Dizzy Deans" or "Carl Hubbells," and one Latin-American band leader has committed so many breaches he is known as "El Curvo."

A name band is called a "biggee" while a lesser known outfit is a "smallee." Few of the biggees are "cash register guys" or "payolas"—meaning they demand money for plugs—but some of the smallees are not above demanding that the publisher pay for the orchestral arrangement they require. This is no insignificant figure. Himber, for instance, pays about $100 for each of his arrangements, and his band has a repertoire of 300—$30,000 worth. It is necessary to have expert arrangers to keep the individuality of the orchestra—Himber accentuates the melody, Goodman the clarinet and swing; Horace Heidt, the trumpet section; Tommy Dorsey, the trombone; Jimmy Dorsey, the saxophone, etc.

A typical plugger and one of the best is Murray Baker, a brother of Belle Baker, the singer. He is general professional manager of the Robbins Music Corporation. Murray was 17 when his late brother-in-law, Maury Abrams, asked him if he wanted a job in his publishing house. Murray accepted and spent two years wrapping bundles and delivering packages. Then he was entrusted with three mediocre songs—"You Said Something When You Said Dixie," "That's My Baby" (not "Yes, Sir, That's My Baby") and "When the Gold Turns to Gray." His work on these won him a permanent job. Pluggers in his class received about $150 a week or a little more—the salary range is $75 to $250—and expenses.

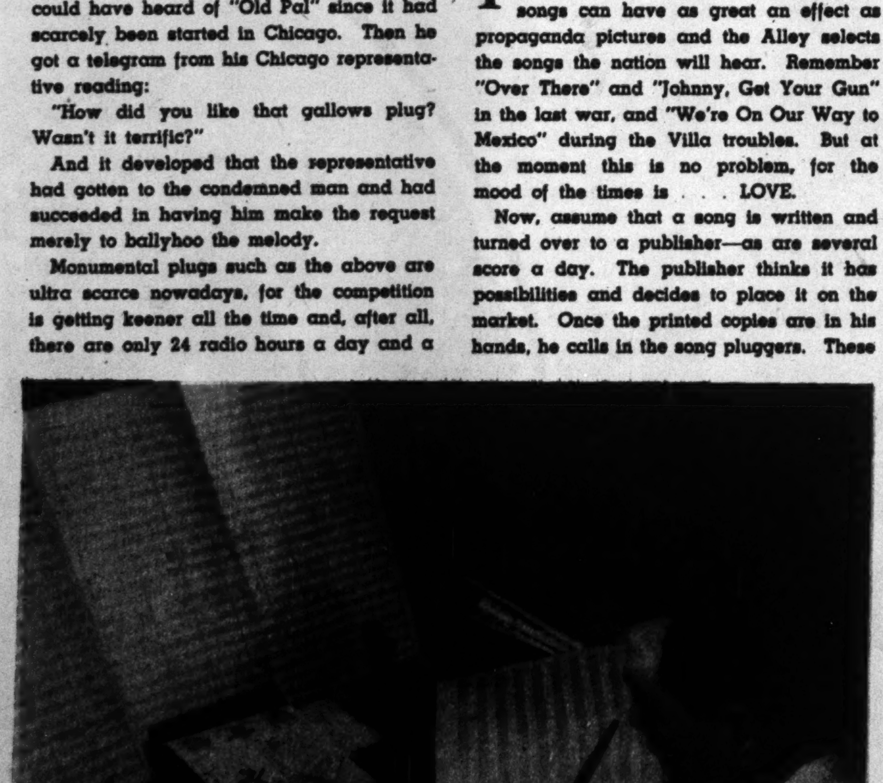
He is married. He curses the business he is in, but makes no effort to get out of it, and there is a strong suspicion that he likes it in spite of himself. He admits that lots of young men are trying to crack the industry because of its "fascination" at the same time that he is denouncing it as a way of making a living.

POSSIBLY his ambition is to be a publisher, an even more precarious pinnacle than that of a Broadway producer. Picking a show is a great gamble, but picking a song is greater if less expensive. No one really knows when he has a hit on his hands, because the public's taste in its singing matter is more variable than the March winds.

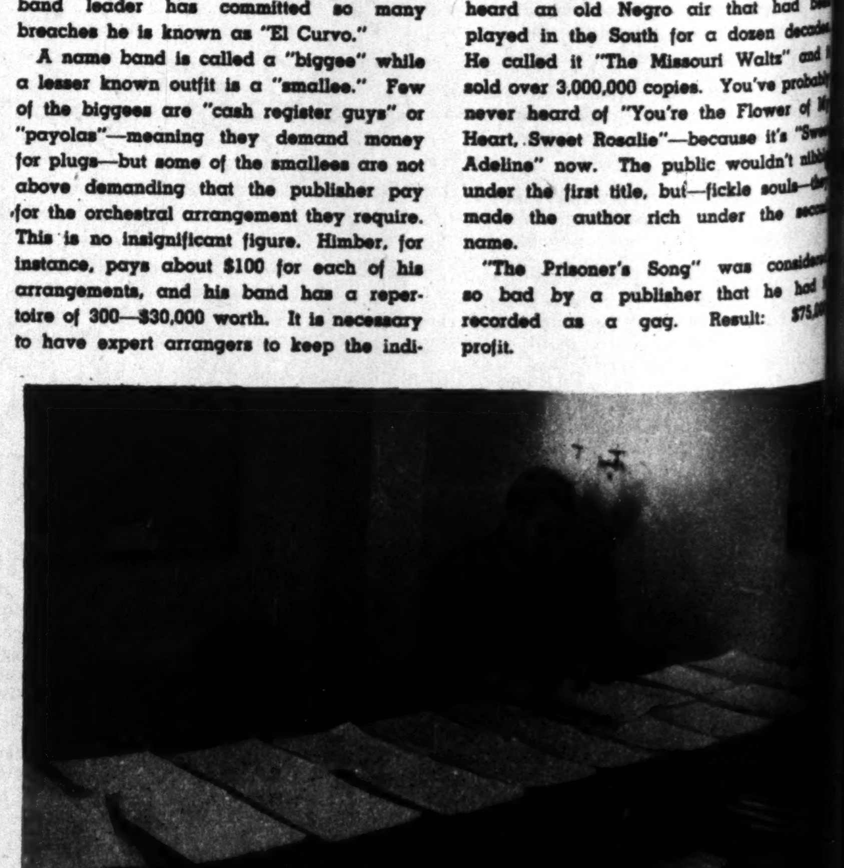
"Bei Mir Bist du Schoen" was sung around the East Side for years, then a couple of smallee publishers put it out and, bang, a fortune! Jerry Vogel found "Marcheta" gathering dust on a shelf of his music company; it had been turned down as too lugubrious. "Lazybones" was another song that lay around for a long time. Con Conrad wrote a melody called "The Teaser" that got nowhere till Benny Davis asked for permission to write a lyric. Benny had written a song called "Jean," so another songwriter, thinking to twit him, said, "Why don't you name this after a girl, too?"

Benny did. It was "Margie" and it sold in the hundreds of thousands. Fred Logan heard an old Negro air that had been played in the South for a dozen decades. He called it "The Missouri Waltz" and it sold over 3,000,000 copies. You've probably never heard of "You're the Flower of My Heart, Sweet Rosalie"—because it's "Sweet Adeline" now. The public wouldn't nibble under the first title, but—fickle souls—they made the author rich under the second name.

"The Prisoner's Song" was considered so bad by a publisher that he had it recorded as a gag. Result: $75,000 profit.



Eddie McDonald, chief of the Himber copyists, writes out individual instrumental parts.



The songs are distributed into the "books" of the respective musicians for use in that night's program. Then the song pluggers' work is completed. Each song selected goes through a process that costs $100.

1838~GENERAL

THE forerunner of the present organization of General Grocer Company took form in March, 1838. At that time the frontier village of St. Louis, was a land that combined mystery and opportunity. Two young New Englanders, Carlos S. Greeley and Daniel B. Gale of Salisbury, New Hampshire, had their eyes on this beckoning horizon. No railroad penetrated this wilderness. It was a land of almost trackless forests, where rivers were the established paths of trade.

These men did not arrive in the West together. Each had left his home with a singleness of purpose that led to the same end. Carlos S. Greeley, with only two years of business experience in the East, decided to risk his savings in a small wholesale grocery establishment on the crowded muddy Levee, at St. Louis.

While Greeley was arranging his plans, Gale had a kindred thought. He had courageously bought two thousand dollars worth of goods. Greeley arrived first in St. Louis, but happy chance brought Greeley and Gale together. They conferred at National Hotel in St. Louis, on Third street. Greeley had chosen a location on straggling, narrow North Second street. He disclosed his plans. Young Gale, his little stock somewhere between Boston and St. Louis, saw an opportunity. Without a written line of agreement, they combined forces. That their business was based on integrity of character is attested by the fact it endu years.

Greeley and Gale located their b North Second street. In 1876 the ti to Greeley, Burnham & Company, the firm of E. G. During March, 1929, General Grocer Company organized the Nation-Wide Service Grocers, among its retail dealers. Another aggressive organization sponsored by General Grocer Company is the United Service Stores. These, and the Nation-Wide Service Grocers stores, are each individually owned and operated by the owner.

General Grocer Company, at 301 South Eighth street, in St. Louis, occupies a total warehouse area of over 200,000 square feet, including the entire half block facing Eighth street, between Clark avenue and Spruce street. Completely modern facilities include carloading from the railway tunnel through the basement of the building. A modern cold storage room, over 20,000 cubic feet capacity, keeps proper temperature constant, for the handling of fresh frozen foods. In the coffee department, giant roasting machines have a daily output of thousands of pounds; packed for selling in bulk, in bags, and in vacuum sealed jars and tins. All this coffee is blended and roasted and packed for shipment, in this coffee department at General Grocer Company. The modern offices of General Grocer Company, and the cafeteria for the employees, are completely air-conditioned for the health and comfort of workers.

In the business of General Grocer Company, as in all human endeavor, it is character that counts. Those influences which in the past moulded the character of men, shape now the destiny of General Grocer Company.

The years have passed, since that early partnership of Greeley and Gale, but the house, and the ideals of these men have continued, existing today in the General Grocer Company; marking an even hundred years, in 1938, since that early beginning.

Even today: the Gale family, the families of E. G. Scudder and W. A. Scudder, Mr. J. W. Scudder, the Lieber family, the Amos and James families, still retain large shareholdings in the General Grocer Co.

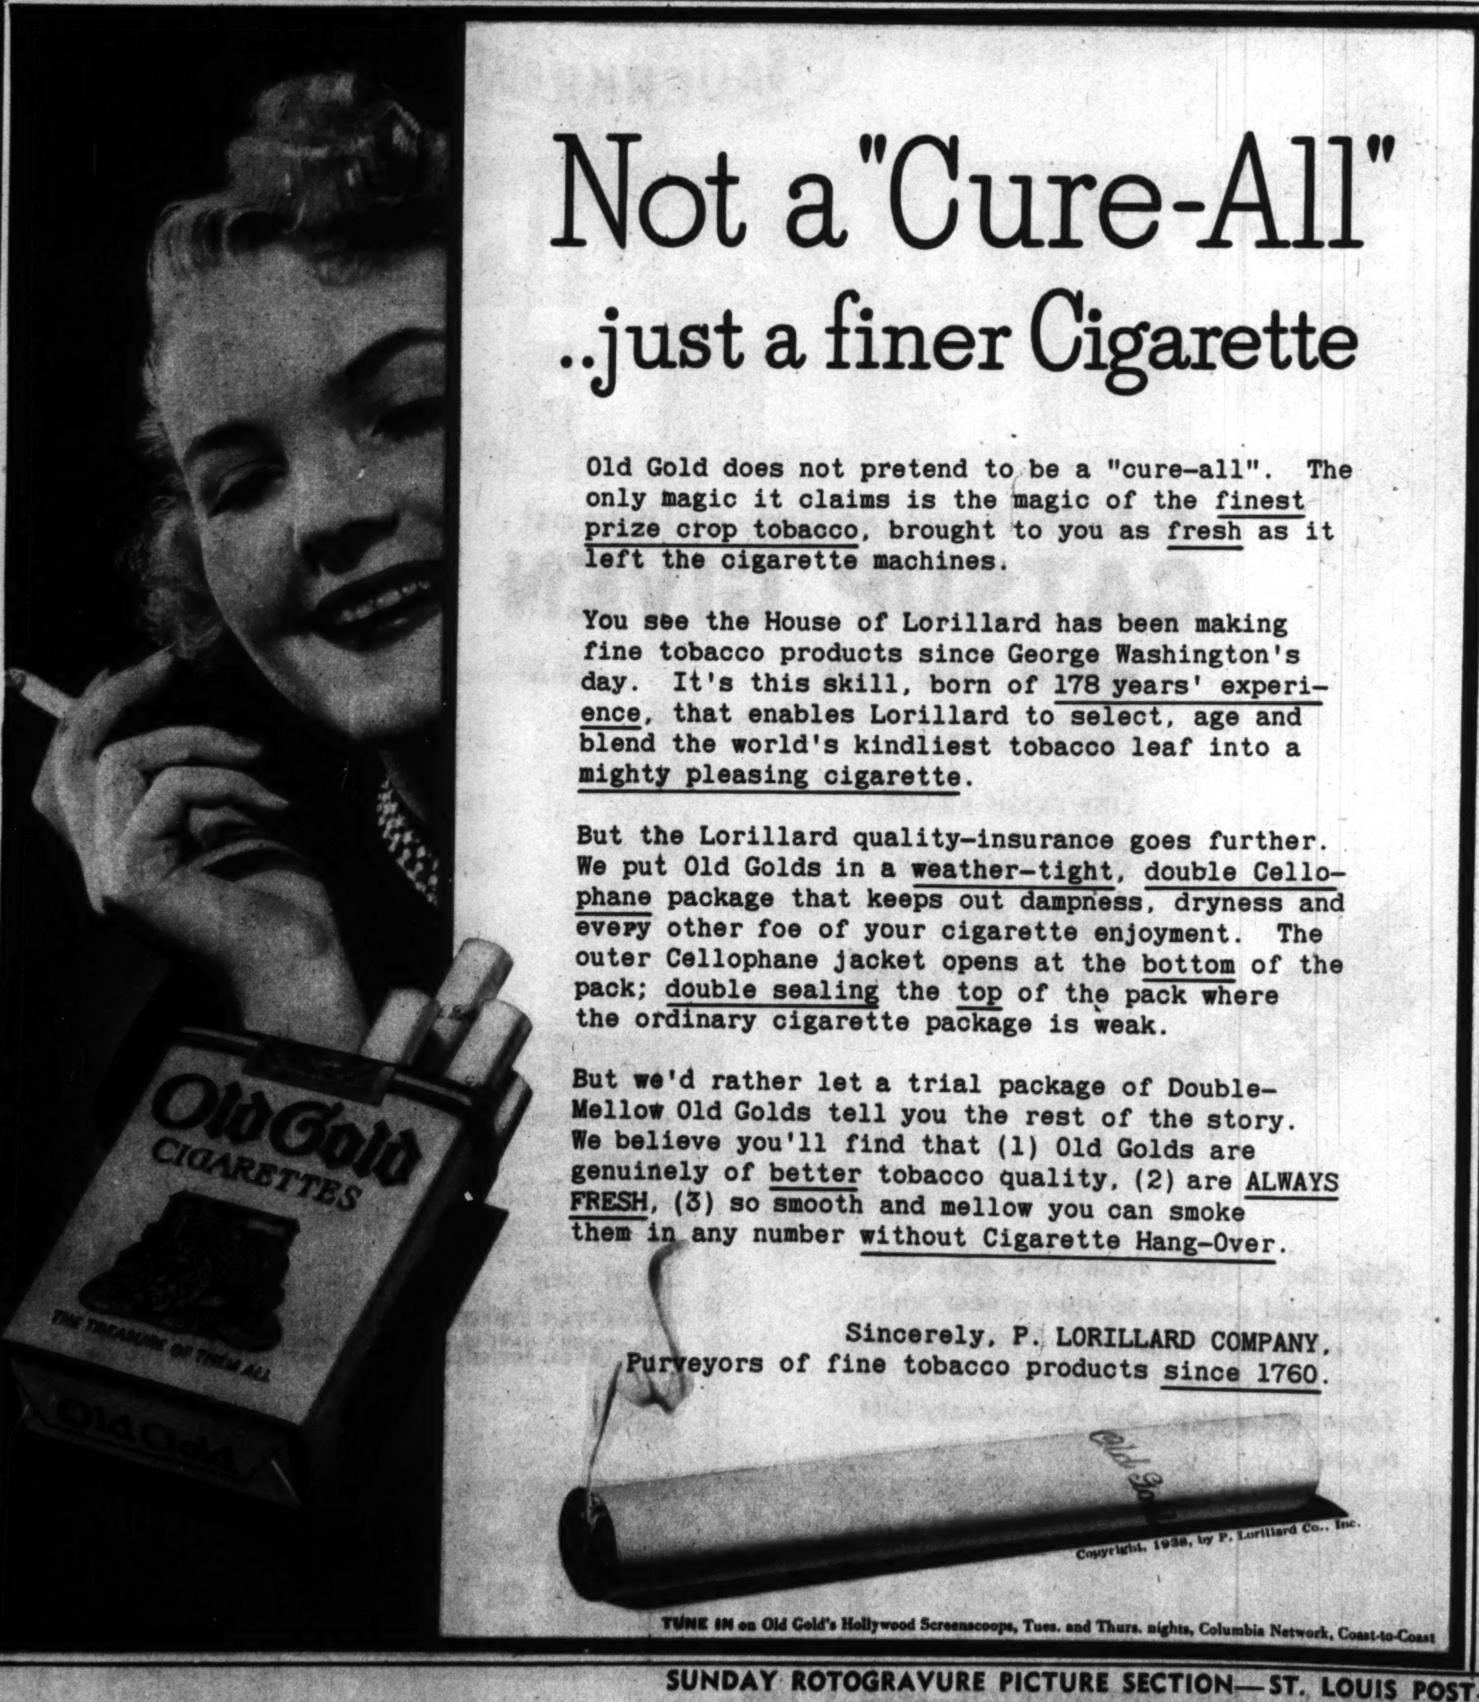
NOW... QUICK WAY TO REMOVE STAINS

make wash snow white

YES INDEED! Fruit stains, blood stains, ink stains, grease stains ...all disappear. White cottons and linens come out snowy white without hard rubbing and scrubbing. Just add a little Oxol to your soap and water. Oxol is the quick-action bleach that sterilizes as it cleans. It contains no acids. Oxol disinfects and deodorizes...makes your wash hygienically clean. Ask your grocer for Oxol. Be sure to get it.

OXOL The Quick-Action Bleach



Not a "Cure-All" ..just a finer Cigarette

Old Gold does not pretend to be a "cure-all". The only magic it claims is the magic of the finest prize crop tobacco, brought to you as fresh as it left the cigarette machines.

You see the House of Lorillard has been making fine tobacco products since George Washington's day. It's this skill, born of 178 years' experience, that enables Lorillard to select, age and blend the world's kindliest tobacco leaf into a mighty pleasing cigarette.

But the Lorillard quality-insurance goes further. We put Old Golds in a weather-tight, double Cellophane package that keeps out dampness, dryness and every other foe of your cigarette enjoyment. The outer Cellophane jacket opens at the bottom of the pack; double sealing the top of the pack where the ordinary cigarette package is weak.

But we'd rather let a trial package of Double-Mellow Old Golds tell you the rest of the story. We believe you'll find that (1) Old Golds are genuinely of better tobacco quality, (2) are ALWAYS FRESH, (3) so smooth and mellow you can smoke them in any number without Cigarette Hang-Over.

Sincerely, P. LORILLARD COMPANY,
Purveyors of fine tobacco products since 1760.

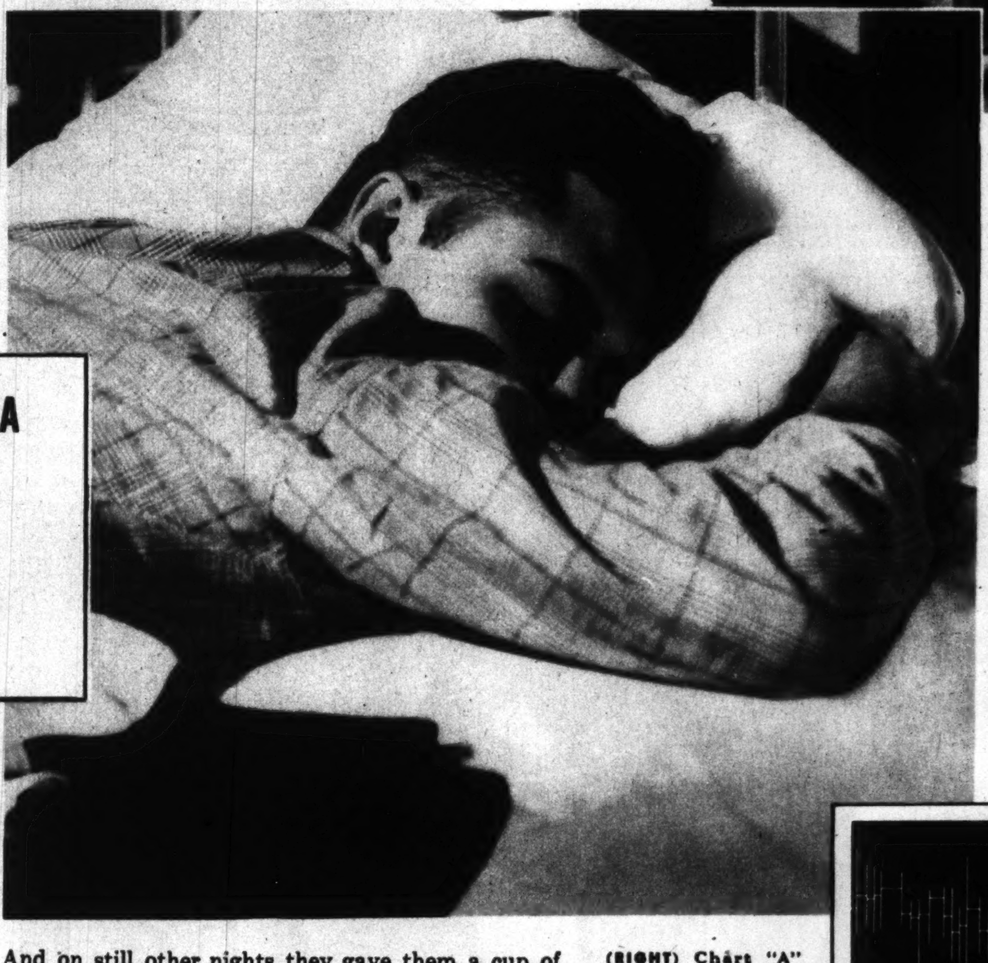
SLEEP IMPROVED by ONE THING ONLY

IN 3-YR. UNIVERSITY TEST!

Of all things that were tested, Ovaltine alone improved the QUALITY of SLEEP

36 MEN AND WOMEN SLEPT FOR A TOTAL OF 6,800 TEST-NIGHTS

This experiment was conducted by Men who are well-known for their Sleep Research



(ABOVE) The thirty-six men and women who took part in this experiment were carefully instructed in the exact procedure of the test. They slept for a total of 6,800 test-nights—in order to determine whether taking certain things at night will aid sleep, or not . . .

(LEFT) Will "any hot drink aid sleep"—as people often say? This experiment disproved it. Of the various things which were tested in this experiment, Ovaltine was the only one that made sleep more restful!

IN a recent series of scientific experiments in a leading American University . . . Ovaltine was the only thing tested which improved the quality of sleep!

It was the only thing which made sleep more restful. It was the only thing which increased the percentage of mornings on which the sleepers awoke well-rested.

One entire phase of this investigation was devoted to the question of whether "taking" certain things at bedtime affects sleep.

After determining the normal sleep habits of the 36 human subjects in this test, the investigators gave them various things to take at bedtime:—for example:

On certain nights they gave them a sandwich, to test the effect of food . . . On other nights they gave them a cup of hot milk . . . On other nights one or another of two well-known sleep drugs.

And on still other nights they gave them a cup of Ovaltine (hot or cold) made either with milk or water. (Ovaltine was included at the wish of the investigators because of its wide use as a sleep aid.)

Of all the things tested, Ovaltine alone improved the quality of sleep . . .

Summary of the Results:—

1. The food-at-bedtime did not aid sleep.
2. A cup of hot milk did not aid sleep.
3. Of the two sleep drugs, one put the sleepers to sleep more quickly, while the other prolonged the length of their sleep. (Both these results were to be expected from medical experience and so confirm the accuracy of the test.) Neither drug, however, made sleep more restful or increased the feeling of being well-rested on awakening.
4. Ovaltine reduced the restless movements of the sleepers at night, as recorded on a special scientific apparatus . . . Ovaltine also definitely increased the number of mornings on which the sleepers awoke well-rested. It exerted these effects whether taken hot or cold, in milk or water, thus establishing that it was Ovaltine which improved quality of sleep.

(RIGHT) Chart "A" shows the restless "tossings and turnings" typical of a poor sleeper at night. Such restless movements are indicative of a poor quality of sleep . . . Chart "B", on the other hand, shows the fewer movements which are typical of a better, more restful quality of sleep.

A study of this investigation indicates that to secure the fullest benefits from Ovaltine it should be taken regularly. Since it is not a drug it is not habit-forming. But it is a mighty good habit to form.

So if you do not sleep well, try Ovaltine. Take it every night for a few weeks. See if you don't sleep better and wake up more refreshed!

You can get it at all grocery and drug stores. Get a can today and make it your regular nightcap.

Eating a sandwich at bedtime did not aid sleep. Neither did hot milk. Of the two sleep drugs tested, one brought quicker sleep, the other lengthened sleep. But neither increased the restfulness of sleep.

When the sleepers awoke they were obliged to report whether they felt well-rested or not. Of all things tested, nothing increased the number of mornings on which sleepers awoke well-rested—except Ovaltine!

(RIGHT) Clocks and a rotating chart were connected to each bed, whereby the time and extent of the sleepers' "tossing and turning" were recorded . . . Ovaltine, alone, reduced their restless movements!

North, South, East, West . . . in grocery stores in all parts of the country . . . women by the hundreds of thousands have made the famous 1-2-3 comparison of breads. They have compared virtually all popular brands by the very method experts themselves use to compare bread quality.

Now look at the actual record! To date 387,643 women have made this test . . . and 89 out of every 100 have chosen Wonder Bread over all others.

These women declared Wonder Bread best after discovering its tempting delicious flavor, its firm delicate texture, its appetizing "wheaty" fragrance!

Has any bread you know ever won such overwhelming preference? Never, we believe, have women been so outspoken in their enthusiasm for any bread!

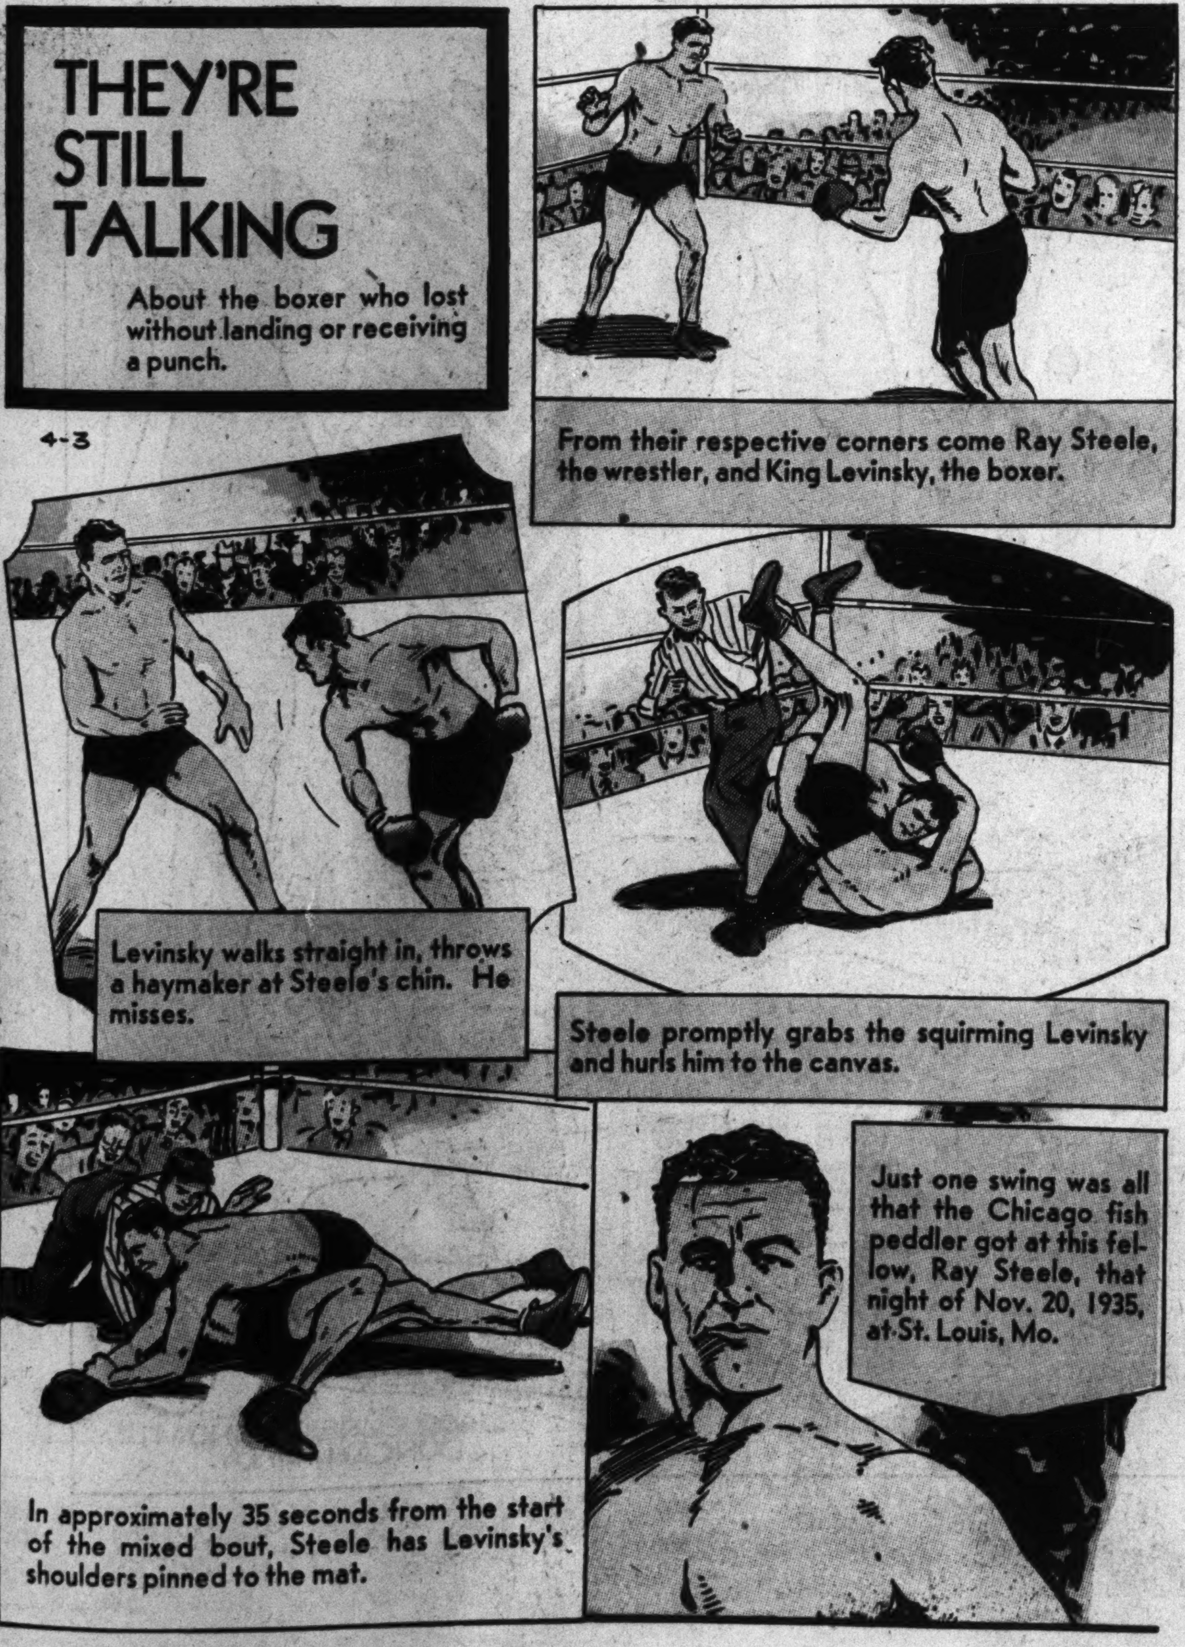
Ned Brant sends a mystifying curve across the inside corner of the plate, completely fooling the batsman.

THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About the boxer who lost without landing or receiving a punch.



From their respective corners come Ray Steele, the wrestler, and King Levinsky, the boxer.

Levinsky walks straight in, throws a haymaker at Steele's chin. He misses.

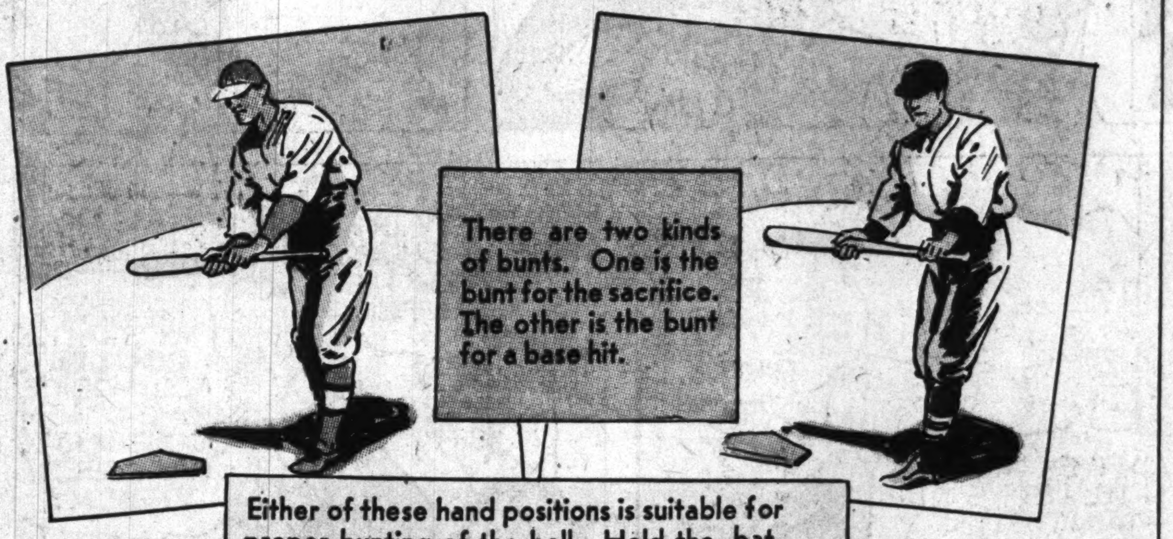
Steele promptly grabs the squirming Levinsky and hurls him to the canvas.

In approximately 35 seconds from the start of the mixed bout, Steele has Levinsky's shoulders pinned to the mat.

Just one swing was all that the Chicago fish peddler got at this fellow, Ray Steele, that night of Nov. 20, 1935, at St. Louis, Mo.

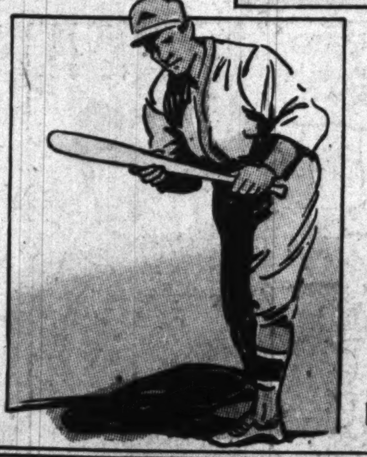
Baseball . . . . by NED BRANT

BUNTING



There are two kinds of bunts. One is the bunt for the sacrifice. The other is the bunt for a base hit.

Either of these hand positions is suitable for proper bunting of the ball. Hold the bat parallel to the ground, and let the bat give a little when the ball hits it. Take a step with the bunt. But don't start to run before you hit the ball.



This is the position for bunting down the third base line. The bat is almost at right angles to third base. For bunting down the first base line the bat should be held almost at right angles to that base. Try to bunt down one or the other baseline.

Expert bunters, particularly fast lefthand hitters, become able to swing or drag the bunt down the first line, starting for that base even before they bunt the ball.

A NEW WASHER? YOU MUST THINK I'M MADE OF MONEY!
BUT, JIM, OUR OLD WASHER WON'T GET THINGS WHITE ANY MORE. JUST LOOK AT THESE NAPKINS! THEY'RE POSITIVELY GRAY!
GRAY OR NO GRAY -- WE SIMPLY CAN'T AFFORD A NEW WASHER! AND THAT'S FINAL!
WHAT IN THE WORLD! WHY AREN'T YOU USING YOUR WASHER?
IT'S JUST ABOUT ON ITS LAST LEGS -- SO I'VE HAD TO GO BACK TO SCRUBBING AND BOILING UNTIL I CAN PERSUADE JIM TO GET A NEW ONE.
BUT DARLING, HOW PRIMITIVE! WHY DON'T YOU TRY THAT NEW SOAP DISCOVERY -- OXYDOL? IT GETS CLOTHES 4 TO 5 SHADES WHITER, EVEN IN OLD MACHINES.
BUT AREN'T THOSE GRANULATED SOAPS AWFULLY HARSH?
NOT OXYDOL -- IT'S A NEW ONE THAT'S SAFETY ITSELF. I'VE WASHED THIS COLORED DRESS IN IT FOR MONTHS AND IT'S STILL BRIGHT AS CAN BE.
I'LL ORDER SOME NOW.
HALF AN HOUR LATER
MY! WHAT OODLES OF SUDS - AND YOU HAVEN'T USED NEARLY AS MUCH SOAP AS I USUALLY DO.
ISN'T IT AMAZING? I FIND OXYDOL GIVES THREE TIMES AS MUCH SUDS AS OTHER SOAPS I'VE TRIED.
IT'S A MIRACLE! JUST EIGHT MINUTES BY THE CLOCK AND THESE CLOTHES ARE SO WHITE THEY FAIRLY SPARKLE!
THAT'S BECAUSE OXYDOL SOAKS OUT DIRT WHILE THE WASHER IS RUNNING. YOU GET DOUBLE-ACTION WASH!
SAY, DEAR, THESE PAJAMAS ARE WHITE AS SNOW! WE DON'T REALLY NEED A NEW WASHING MACHINE AFTER ALL.
THAT'S RIGHT! FINDING OXYDOL WAS JUST LIKE FINDING MONEY -- THE WAY IT PUT NEW LIFE INTO THAT OLD WASHING MACHINE.
Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.
OXYDOL
the NEW "NO-SCRUB—NO-BOIL" LAUNDRY SOAP THAT'S REALLY SAFE

"LIKE GETTING A NEW WASHER FREE"

—Say Women of This New, SAFE Miracle Soap

Now expect new things! See white things come 4 to 5 shades whiter in old machines or new! See washing time cut 25% to 40% in either machine or tub!

Developed by the makers of gentle Ivory soap, OXYDOL cost over $1,000,000 to perfect. And is the result of a patented process to make soap much faster acting—an amazing new formula that makes mild, gentle soap far whiter washing, yet "keeps it safe."

Scientific tests of OXYDOL against other soaps reveal these important things:—

First:—One cup of OXYDOL makes as much rich, lively suds as three cupfuls of other soaps tested. This means that OXYDOL possesses three times the suds-building power!

Second:—Cup for cup, OXYDOL washed clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter than other soaps tested—including other GRANULATED soaps.

In tub washing, OXYDOL's hard-working suds end washboard rubbing—soak out dirt in 15 minutes, without scrubbing or boiling. Even "grimiest" spots come clean with a few quick rubs between the fingers.

Yet OXYDOL is safe for hands—safe for all washable colors. Even sheer cotton prints washed 100 consecutive times in OXYDOL suds, showed no perceptible sign of fading.

OXYDOL is economical, too. Tests show that it often goes one-third to one-half again as far as even the latest soap chips on the market.

So stop blaming your old washer if clothes wash dingy-gray. Switch to OXYDOL and see clothes come so much whiter and brighter that you'll say "it's like getting a new washer free!"

You can get OXYDOL at all dealers. Phone for a package today. Procter & Gamble.

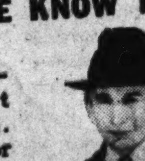
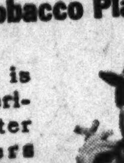
"WE KNOW TOBACCO BECAUSE WE GROW IT—WE SMOKE CAMELS BECAUSE WE KNOW TOBACCO"—Tobacco Planters say.

Top prices—that's what planter J. B. Jackson got for his best leaf tobacco of his last crop. "Camel sure pays more to get the best!" he says. "I say cigarette quality has to be grown in the leaf tobacco. That's one reason why I smoke Camels."



Cecil White is another experienced planter who prefers Camels. "I know Camels are made from finer tobaccos," he says. "At the last auction, my top grades went to Camel at best prices. They almost always do. Most other planters like me smoke Camels."



"Camel paid top prices for every pound of my last crop that was top grade," says Mr. John Wallace, Jr., who knows his tobacco from the ground up: "I've been planting tobacco for 21 years—smoking Camels for 17-18 years. I know what fine tobacco is in 'em!"
